CENTAUREA MOSCHATA.

The sweet sultans, white and purple, have been considerably improved during recent years, for whereas the older forms only grow about a foot to a foot and one-half in height, the newer forms grow from two and one-half to three feet in height and produce an abundance of large, sweet-scented, flowers on long stems. The best for general purposes is the purple, though some seedsmen have a giant white strain, which is also fine. In the ordinary way, however, the purple is the hardiest and strongest, and, to my mind, the most beautiful of the sweet sultans, providing a good succession of cut flowers, which retain their freshness in water for a longer time than most flowers. The principal recommendation, however, of all the forms, is their delicate honey perfume, which is, perhaps, sweeter of its kind than that of any other garden flower.

The soil that suits them best is one rich in lime, and any soil deficient in this essential plant food and soil tonic should have some mortar-rubbish or lime mixed with it, or should be given a liberal application of basic slag, at the rate, say, of five pounds to the twenty square yards. I have done well with them, says a writer in the Gardeners' Magazine, on ordinary garden soil that is naturally poor in lime simply by the addition of basic slag, the soil being deeply dug and in a generally good state of fertility. As they do not stand transplanting well, seed should be sown where the plants are to bloom. They will repay a little more care than is often bestowed upon spring-sown annuals, for they are scarcely worth growing if left to take care of themselves. A sunny position should be chosen for them and a good soil that has been well prepared—not in the mixed border within reach of greedy perennials—and the seed should be sown as soon as the conditions become favorable. As soon as the seedlings are in the second leaf, but before they have time to become leggy, they should have a preliminary thinning, so that no two are left close together, and then as they grow they can be gradually further thinned until finally they are left eight or nine inches apart, the best plants always being chosen to remain.

EL PASO, ILL.—A. H. Wolk and Fred Crane have formed a partnership for the purpose of going into the florists' business here. They will erect two houses, each 12x100 feet, this season, and will do more building next year. They will devote themselves chiefly to growing carnations. The firm will be known as the Wolk Florist Co.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—The Lord & Burnham Co., New York, has been given the contract to erect greenhouses for the park board, its bid having been $6,480.

BRADDOCK, PA.—While James Drewes was driving his team from the cemetery recently, the horses ran off the road at Short street, and down over the edge of a 12-foot embankment, Mr. Drewes going down under the horses and rig. He luckily escaped with nothing worse than bruises, however. George Bolens, with him, was thrown out and cut painfully.

NEW CASTLE, PA.—Henry Weinschenk is rapidly building what is probably the largest greenhouse under one roof anywhere in the world. It is 125 feet wide and 600 feet long. The house stands on a hillside, or rather, on the two sides of a hill, a span of about eighty-five feet being on one side of the hill and a span of about forty feet running back from the brow of the hill. This mammoth house will be used for lettuce and cucumbers.

...THE... Chrysanthemum

By Arthur Herrington

Formerly president Chrysanthemum Society of America.

The most complete and comprehensive work on the cultivation of the chrysanthemum that has yet been published in America. Its scope and character may be gleaned from the list of contents, which comprises chapters on composts; planting; benches, boxes or pots; general cultural details; crown and terminal buds; feeding, its object and application; care of the buds; exhibition and judging; specimen plants, plants in pots; raising from seed and hybridizing; sports; hardy chrysanthemums; chrysanthemums for south and west; insect pests and diseases; classification and selection of varieties for special purposes; history of the chrysanthemum, etc. The book will be welcomed for the lucid, comprehensive, as well as the practical character of its contents. Handsomely illustrated. 168 pages, 5x7 inches. Price 50c postpaid.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.

The florists here for the last two weeks have been unusually busy, with funeral work and weddings.

P. R. Quinlan has recently received a large importation of bays and boxwood and other ornamental stock.

The Wheadons, on South Warren street, have closed their store and gone out of business.

On account of the fine weather of the last ten days the florists have been rushed with bedding work. DEW.

EAST PARIS, MICH.—S. S. Bailey died last March, and the affairs of his estate are being settled by O. A. Ball, as administrator.

PLYMOUTH, O.—Miss Fannie E. Case has so far had a busy season. Since May 25, she says, she has been in a mad scramble to get her work accomplished, as she was not able to begin bedding out until that date. Her trade has been unusually good, especially on Decoration day.

Vegetable Forcing.

VEGETABLES VERSUS FLOWERS.

A Comparison of Profits.

In response to the many inquiries for information on vegetable forcing, the REVIEW has arranged to devote more space to this subject. There seems to be an ever increasing interest in the hot-house vegetable business and we are in receipt of many letters asking for information regarding the profits to be made by growing the many different kinds of vegetables used for winter and spring forcing in greenhouses compared with cut flowers, potted plants, etc. The REVIEW has always been willing to give assistance whenever possible to subscribers seeking any such information, and will cheerfully answer all letters of inquiry to the best of our ability, and request any grower wishing information on any particular point concerning vegetable culture, or when difficulties arise in not being able to grow a successful crop, for unknown reasons, to write to this department. The experiences and answers may be of much benefit to other readers.

We have also arranged to publish a series of articles on the subject by practical, experienced growers, which should be of interest to all subscribers, and especially to beginners and owners of smaller and medium size establishments, where a general stock is grown and where great opportunities exist for growing and marketing various kinds of vegetables that could easily be grown in connection with or between the crops now grown.

Most florists seem to have the idea that there is little or no profit in vegetable growing under glass, and that vegetables are so easy to grow that anyone can produce a good crop. Some even consider it beneath their dignity to work in vegetables, indoors or out.

I cannot conceive why anyone should think of the choicest of table delicacies, second to the floral centerpiece, or why the man whose brains and labor produced the lettuce, radishes, cucumbers, tomatoes, grapes, etc., out of season should be considered inferior as a grower to the one who produced the vase of choice roses or carnations. In fact, vegetable growing in winter on up-to-date places, where successful crops are grown, requires greater skill, closer attention and greater risk than the growing of cut flowers or most potted plants.

Some men who grow both vegetables and flowers assert that they find little difference in the profits of the different branches of the trade. There seem to be few houses devoted to both vegetables and flowers. In the west most of the vegetable growing establishments grow only lettuce and cucumbers, and from all appearances do not look as prosperous as the cut flower growers or the eastern vegetable growers, where a greater variety of vegetables are grown, and the many large, up-to-date places look fully as prosperous and have as large and as good greenhouses as the cut flower growers or florists. It may be a difference in the soil, climate or market, or possibly the eastern vegetable growers are more progressive and farther advanced than the western, or the florists of their own vicinity. Or, again, it may be that the western cut flower establishments, famous for size and fine products, are more progressive than the vegetable growers nearby.

It is true that many of the owners of the largest cut flower establishments in Chicago started in a very small way by growing vegetables and later dropped that industry to go into what they found a more profitable business. But it is also true that many of the thorough, practical vegetable growers of today make as large, and sometimes larger, profits than florists having establishments of equal size.

From the above one can draw but one conclusion; namely, that vegetable forcing pays as well as flowers, if properly managed.

The vegetables best suited for forcing are lettuce, radishes, cucumbers and tomatoes, but many other kinds can be forced at a good profit. Green onions from sets, spinach, beet greens, beets, wax beans, peppers, rhubarb, asparagus, even grapes and muskmelon, can be grown to perfection in winter, and at a good profit. It is a big field to work in, and requires much patience and careful study. A good market for the product is the chief regulator of profits. Houses with raised benches are best for most vegetables, but solid beds are best for head lettuce and are used extensively for cukes and tomatoes, some arrangement usually being made for bottom heat, either by hot manure in the bottom or by steam pipes in a tile about a foot below the surface of the bed.

Our next week's issue will contain an article on the growing of lettuce and cucumbers, or "cukes," as they are called for short, these being the principal crops now grown. BOREALIS.

WELL CHOSEN.

I have noted one or two remarks in American publications, with regard to Mr. Douglas's choice of a name for his cucumber, Tender and True. Your Scotch friends should not need to be told that Mr. Douglas is a Scotchman and that this is the motto of the clan Douglas. CHAS. G. PEARSON.

Arthur Cowdrick was superintendent of construction when Searles Bros. last season built their big range of greenhouses. He claimed for his services $4,500, but the greenhouse owners refused to settle because of alleged delay in the work and the alleged inferior character of the construction. Cowdrick brought suit and in a counter claim Searles Bros. asked as an offset $10,000 for the loss of a crop, due to delay in completing the houses.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; Vice-pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 33d annual convention will be held at Milwaukee, June, 1907.

THE 1907 peach crop of Oklahoma is estimated at 450,000 bushels.

ALTHAEA MEEHANII seems to have caught on, and will be in demand next year.

F. W. WATSON, Topeka, Kan., is on a three months' eastern trip with his family.

THE agent who sends in fake orders still is abroad in the land, although nearly every week he gets into jail in some town or other.

A. C. TAMBORNINO has bought an interest in the McCabe Nursery Co., Le Seur Center, Minn., and will, with the former proprietor, endeavor to enlarge the business.

H. M. STRINGFELLOW now is engaged in a newspaper discussion to prove that peaches in Texas should be grown on uncultivated soil; that it was either the sod or the absence of it that determined whether peach trees came through the last winter unscathed.

W. L. TAYLOR, formerly in the nursery business at Howard Lake and Litchville, Minn., and an ex-president of the Minnesota State Horticultural Society, has bought twenty acres of land at Mandan, N. D., to start a nursery. J. B. Saunders, a son-in-law, will be associated with him.

NURSEYMEN'S CONVENTION.

Successful Meeting at Detroit.

The thirty-second annual convention of the American Association of Nurserymen was held in Detroit, June 12 to 14, with headquarters at Hotel Cadillac. The attendance was ahead of that of previous meetings, not speaking of the last one in Texas, where so many from in that state were in attendance. Nearly every state in the Union was represented. Looking at the meeting from a business standpoint, it was not as good as that held last year. This was due to stock being plentiful and cheap; therefore buyers are not in so much of a hurry to place orders. Last year conditions were just the reverse.

After the first session was called to order, June 12, by President Orlando Harrison, of Berlin, Md., City Comptroller Doremus, owing to the mayor's absence from the city, welcomed the nurserymen to Detroit. He not only gave them permission to violate all "Keep off the grass" signs, but told them they might dig up trees or shrubs in the parks in the pursuit of knowledge. Charles A. Ilgenfritz followed with a warm welcome to Michigan.

President's Address.

President Harrison then delivered the president's annual address. He made several recommendations, some of them as follows: The association should establish a claim department, the business of this department being to look after the interests of the members in their troubles with the transportation companies. He also stated that there should be closer coöperation between the nurserymen of this country; that they should exchange ideas and experiences. In speaking of the press, the president stated that the nurserymen should keep in closer touch with the editors of the trade papers. The editors should try to be personally acquainted with their advertisers, so that when any question is put to them about an advertiser they can speak intelligently. He also stated that the nurserymen are the poorest advertisers of any class of business men in the country. He also spoke of establishing a bureau of information for prospective nurserymen, saying that many young men graduating from the different colleges would make fine nurserymen if given a little encouragement along this line. He also commented highly on the civic associations, saying that every town should have one. The president criticized the fumigation of nursery stock and stated that the safest method to guard against disease is by dipping. He also suggested that the nurserymen and entomologists should coöperate more than they do. The president reviewed the work of the different committees, speaking highly of their work.

When reports were requested from the chairmen of the committees, the chairman of the transportation committee, Mr. Reed, stated that he had not so favorable a report as in 1906. He spoke of trouble with some of the railroads that refused to live up to the different rates agreed to. Mr. Reed also stated that the members should keep in closer touch with freight rates, for their own benefit. The tariff committee had not much to report. Neither did the committees on legislation and on uniform inspection. Chairman J. W. Hill, of the ways and means committee, stated that the sum of $2,940 had been pledged to defray any extra expenses that might occur, but so far had not been needed. He recommended a special representative for the ensuing year. Mr. Hill also stated that in order to obtain better and more sensible laws the society should deal with the national government. Mr. Albaugh, of Ohio, said there is no such thing as a place free of scale. He advised the cutting down of infected trees as the only way of keeping San Jose scale in check. Thomas Meehan, of the National Council of Horticulture, presented a letter advocating the subscription of sums by the different horticultural bodies to assist in carrying on the good work of the council. Last year some forty-three articles were published, eighteen applying to nurseries. Prof. Craig recommended that the association select the material to be published.

The secretary's report was favorable. The dues having been advanced from $3 to $5, there was a falling off of eighty-two members, but this was not thought bad.

The treasurer's report showed a balance of $3,317.33, the total expenses for the year being $2,341.70.

At the afternoon session on Wednesday state vice-presidents were named, as follows:

Alabama, H. B. Chase.
Arkansas, W. G. Vincenbeller.
California, F. W. Power.
Colorado, A. M. Ferguson.
Connecticut, C. R. Burr.

Thursday.

Thursday the rain poured nearly all day, interfering with the program prepared by the entertainment committee.

Most of the morning was taken up by the reading of essays. In the afternoon there was a lecture on "How Can Nurserymen Prevent Apple Crown-Gall and Hairy-Root?" by Prof. G. G. Hedgcock, U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Thursday evening officers were elected, as follows: President, J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; vice-president, C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; secretary, George C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; treasurer, C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Executive committee; J. H. Dayton, chairman, Painesville, O.; C. M. Sherman, Charles City, Ia.; Henry B. Chase, Huntsville, Ala.

Milwaukee was chosen as the next place of meeting, in preference to Coney Island or the east.

Friday Morning.

It was necessary to hold a long meeting Friday morning, in order to wind up the program.

After the reading of several essays, the committee on the president's address handed in its report. The report favored closer coöperation in the testing of new varieties, sustained the president's idea of encouraging civic associations, and recommended the appointing of a committee of three to meet the entomologists of the country. It was also recommended that the state vice-presidents notify the president when there is danger of some new and inimical law being passed by the state. A mutual fire insurance association was also recommended, in order to provide cheaper insurance.

After considerable discussion the special representative was dropped for the ensuing year. It was decided to make arrangements with a Chicago firm to keep the association posted on all threatened changes in railroad freight rates that might prove a disadvantage to the nurserymen of the country.

The committee on the grading of nursery stock was not ready to hand in its report; therefore this was put off until the meeting in Milwaukee in 1908.

Many of the state inspectors were present during the meetings; these were called on Friday for a few words. Prof. Forbes, representing the Association of Economic Entomologists and the Association of Horticultural Inspectors, stated that a law to provide for uniform inspection had been prepared and will be submitted at the next session of congress. Professors Smith, of Georgia; Atwood, of New York, and Taft, of Michigan, also responded with a few remarks, all seeming in favor of uniform inspection rates.

On recommendation of E. W. Kirkpatrick, of Texas, it was resolved that the association meet all the expenses of the committee on uniform law.

The question box contained many questions, which were discussed at different times during the meetings.

Essays.

The program called for about forty essays or five minute talks, but only about twelve members were on hand with papers. Among these were: C. C. Mayhew and John Siebenthaler, on "Preparing Nursery Land;" C. M. Hobbs, on "Cultivating Nursery Stock;" E. S. Welch, on "Growing and Grading Apple Seedlings and Apple Trees;" J. M. Underwood, on "The Storage of Nursery Stock;" J. M. Pitkin and E. P. Bernardin, on "Standard Sizes or Grades for Fruit Trees;" George Marshall, on "Cultivating Nursery Stock;" F. W. Watson, on "Growing and Grading Apple Seedlings and Apple Trees;" J. C. Hale, on "Peach Growing;" George H. Whiting, on "Marketing Nursery Stock;" J. H. Dayton, on "The Need of Cooperation Among Nurserymen." Essays submitted by R. G. Chase, W. T. Hood, D. S. Lake, Chas. E. Greening and several others, were read by the secretary.

E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., was present and on behalf of the American Rose Society invited active cooperation. He said that it was a sad fact that the names of few nurserymen are on the list of the Rose Society, whose object it is to advertise the rose, thereby aiding the nurserymen. He invited their aid in the matter of the national show.

Prof. John Craig, of Cornell, delivered a very interesting lecture on "The Nurseries of the Country." Views were shown and described by the lecturer, most of them having been taken by himself in all parts of the United States and Canada.

Hospitality of Detroiters.

The weather interfered to a large extent with the entertainment program. Thursday afternoon, despite the rain, the whole party embarked on the boat for a trip up the Detroit river. A stop was

CALLAS IN CALIFORNIA.

The accompanying illustration is reproduced from a photograph taken at the establishment of A. Mitting, Santa Cruz, Cal., and shows 50,000 calla bulbs of the 1907 crop. Mr. Mitting started in the calla bulb business four years ago, having found through investigation that there is no place better adapted to growing bulbs of Calla Æthiopica than the counties of Santa Cruz and Monterey. The small bulbs are sown like peas, in rows twelve to fourteen inches apart, after which a heavy coat of manure is spread over the ground. The bulbs are dug every third year. Mr. Mitting says that nowhere in the two counties mentioned is there any of the calla disease this year.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Business is a shade better this week than it was last, but is still rather quiet. We have had a wonderful change from the usual June weather, it being that things have been livened by several showers. Although from many standpoints this is rather pleasant, to the country at large it is a drawback, as much damage has been done to grain and fruit along the coast.

Flowers are plentiful and are fast recovering from the close cutting they received at Memorial day. The one exception, however, is roses, and good quality stock is scarce, especially Beauties. Good Brides and Maids cost the stores from 50 cents to 75 cents per dozen at present. Carnations are holding their own well and good quality stock, such as of Prosperity, Enchantress and others, net the growers $2.50 per hundred.

Sweet peas continue to be good sellers and are more plentiful. Coreopsis, gailardias, dahlias and gladioli are now in full swing and are being used extensively.

Over in Oakland conditions remain

RIVERSIDE, CAL.

What promises to be one of the most beautiful portions of Riverside is being developed by Frank A. Tetley out of the eighty acres of land recently purchased by him on the east side, at the end of Mountain street where it strikes the Gage canal. Mr. Fassell, landscape gardener, is hard at work on the tract, laying it out in orange and lemon groves, with residence sites which are approached by wide roads that wind around the elevations, the roads being bordered by palms and pines planted alternately. The roads will also be lined with shrubs, so that in a few years they will resemble the beautiful drives that have made Smiley Heights famous. A large force of men under the direction of W. V. Darling is at work upon the streets, and 80,000 trees are being planted from nursery stock, while fifty acres will be devoted to grape fruit. A pumping plant has been installed, and the entire tract is irrigated by an excellent system of flumes and ditches. Most of this work is under the direction of Charles F. Collier, who is Mr. Tetley's foreman. The tract is called Monte Vista.

WITH HYDROCYANIC GAS.

The following are the results of a recent experiment in the use of hydrocyanic acid gas for the killing of white fly in one of my greenhouses: The size of the house is 24½x57 feet; three-quarter span. The north wall is six feet six inches high; the south wall is six feet high; the height to the ridge is eleven feet six inches. I used five jars, and in each one of the jars was a solution consisting of one pint of water, one pint of sulphuric acid, and two ounces and a half of potassium cyanide.

The foliage was dry. Every fly in the house was killed and the stock was not greatly damaged.

Night blooming jasmines were very slightly injured. Mums suffered in the tender foliage only. Pelargoniums and tomatoes were injured only in the young growth. Asters were harmed very slightly, and only on tips of tender leaves; no flowers or buds.

The following plants in the house escaped without any injury: Sprenger, ferns, roses, geraniums, Jerusalem cherries, smilax, adiantum, Plumosus nanus, Drummond phlox, sweet alyssum, salvias, stocks, moon flowers and climbing ferns.

The Market.

Business dropped off last week. There is little doing in the way of funeral work, compared with a few weeks ago. Graduation exercises are using up some of the surplus; weddings are also creating some demand. Still there is a glut of nearly all stock. Carnations, especially, are more than plentiful. The price of carnations ranges from 1 cent up to 3 cents for extra fine stock. Roses are of good grade; the price ranges from 2 cents up to 8 cents for the best. Sweet peas are being sold by the thousands, but still many are going to waste. There is little sale for the dark lavender varieties. Smilax is again plentiful.

Ferns are a scarce article. Leucothoe sprays are being used extensively for the better work and are also quite scarce.

If the present warm weather keeps up the market will be flooded with stock.

Various Notes.

William Brown is the proud father of a bouncing baby boy.

Ferdinand Beyer has joined the benedicts. He and Miss Maud M. Warner, of Wayne, were married June 12.

It is surprising that not more La Detroites are grown for summer blooming. It is certainly an ideal summer rose; florists in this city would be lost without it.

Among the visitors last week were: A. Ringier, representing the Barnard Co., Chicago; E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind.; C. W. Ward, New York; L. R. Taft, Agricultural College, Lansing; James Taylor, Mt. Clemens. H. S.

MONTREAL.State of Trade.

The weather continues warm, with occasional showers. People are leaving the city for their country places, and weddings and garden work are the only things to keep us busy now. The Montreal Jockey Club held its meet at the new track at Blue Bonnets last week and there was a little extra work for the decorators.

Flowers are more plentiful this week. Daffodils are over, but there are lots of tulips to take their place. American Beauties are fine and in great demand.

Various Notes.

Hall & Robinson and J. Bennett have sold nearly all their bedding plants. The other florists seem to have quite a large supply left.

Miss Campbell had some fine red tulips in her window last week.

P. McKenna & Son's window has been filled with begonias and hydrangeas and made a fine show.

S. S. Bain is cutting some splendid sweet peas. Some person broke into his greenhouses the other night and helped himself to a number of rose plants.

Hall & Robinson have had a pretty window of apple blossoms, lilac and valley. They had charge of the decorations for the Budden-Peck wedding at St. George's June 17. Miss Campbell had the bouquet orders.

Miss Murray is to be congratulated on the splendid work she did at Mount Royal Club during Prince Fushimi's visit. She used white roses and Beauties in the dining-room, on the mantels, sideboards, etc. In the central hall there were bowls of American Beauties, while the other halls were decorated with red and white carnations.

Wilshire Bros. had the order for the dining-room at Ravenscrag during the prince's visit. In the drawing-rooms Easter lilies and Beauties were used in abundance.

TOMMY.

IOLA, KAN.—J. W. Primmer, formerly of Nevada, Mo., is now in business here, having purchased the Harmon Greenhouses.

HUDSON, MICH.—Concerning the disappearance of John Allwood, his wife has received a letter to the effect that he has sailed for England, where he was born. Mrs. Allwood will continue the greenhouse business.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL.

William Bierstadt & Son, at the corner of Sixteenth and Cedar streets, give special attention to carnations, dahlias and chrysanthemums. They have six greenhouses, and besides conducting a local trade, they ship considerable quantities of cut flowers to St. Louis.

Mrs. Annie Crook's place of business is at 1204 East Ash street. She started in the florists' trade a little over a year ago, and now has two greenhouses, with 1,300 feet of glass.

George M. Brinkerhoff's imposing residence occupies a corner at the crossing of Fifth street and Keyes avenue, and adjoining the residence are his nine greenhouses, with 30,000 feet of glass, where a dozen or more persons are employed.

R. T. Donnell, who has seven greenhouses, makes a specialty of carnations, which he grows in large quantities for the St. Louis market. He also gives some attention to bedding stock, and supplies lettuce and cucumbers for the local trade.

George Van Horn, the proprietor of the Capitol Greenhouses, has a growing patronage. Besides carrying on a good trade in cut flowers and bedding plants, he makes a specialty of porch boxes and hanging baskets.

Albert T. Hey, who has five greenhouses, devotes a share of his attention to orchids, which he grows principally for the Chicago market. Another of his specialties is hardy perennials. Landscape gardening, also, is a feature of his work. The Illinois State Florists' Association, of which Mr. Hey is president, will meet here in February, 1908.

Charles W. Bennett, with his four greenhouses, not only supplies choice varieties of blooming and ornamental plants, but also some vegetables, particularly lettuce, for shipment during the winter.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

Business last week was in a stir. Some of the retailers complained, while others could say that their only trouble was in procuring stock. I found one dealer who had a wedding order on hand and had to pay more than he received. Nevertheless, many wedding orders were disposed of, as well as a large amount of decorations for the commencements.

There was a large quantity of cut flowers on the market. Carnations were plentiful, roses a little short in supply. There were peonies in any quantity; some growers shipped them by the thousands. Our market farmers bring many to the market and dispose of them as low as 20 cents a dozen, and the public gathers them in quickly. In fact, at this time of the year they certainly take many sales from our retail florist stores and are sold at such prices that anyone buys at sight.

Club Meeting.

A fairly well attended meeting of the Gardeners' Club was held Monday evening, May 10, with President T. C. Bauer in the chair. The topic of the evening was the securing of a horticulturist on our park board. The greatest interest was shown in this subject by those who were present. G. O. Brown read several letters he had received from western cities, concerning what they are doing. Interesting talks were heard from R. Graham, C. Christie, C. Wagner, I. H. Moss and G. O. Brown.

At the next meeting of the club a set-out will be given by an unannounced person. R. Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md., will make a talk.

Various Notes.

George Cook, Arlington, Md., recently came near losing his horse with lockjaw.

William Feast and Charles F. Feast, with their automobiles, were among those who took part in taking out the orphans last Wednesday. Many automobiles were decorated with flags and flowers.

Edwin Bishop, of Roslyn, lost about 300 panes of glass by the recent hail storm. J. S. Wamsley, of Pikesville, was another heavy loser by the hail storm. J. L. T.

BENTON HARBOR, MICH.—F. L. Tornquist has placed the order for material for a greenhouse 16x50.

CHASSELL, MICH.—H. E. Lutey, formerly of the Lutey Floral Co., now of the Lakeside Floral Co., has removed his headquarters from Calumet to this place.

ASTERS.

ROSBACH'S COMMERCIAL LATE.

We have been growing and perfecting this strain for the past five years and find it the best commercial variety that we have ever grown. On account of the uniformly double nature of the flowers it produces but little seed, consequently this is the first time that we are enabled to offer it to the trade. Shell-pink, rose (a grand flower) and purple, $3.50 per 1000. Olmstead's Commercial White, the best early all-purpose florists' aster in cultivation, $3.00 per 1000.

Semple's, as good as you can get anywhere—white, shell-pink and purple, separate, $2.50 per 1000.
A. & G. Rosbach, Pemberton, N. J.

The SUPERIOR

IMPROVED INTERNAL-FIRED STEEL BOILER

Made in 10 sizes, to heat from 2000 to 6500 feet of 4-inch pipe. No brick-work necessary; shipped on skids, all ready to move into place and begin firing. Can be cleaned without letting the fire out. All hubs made so they can be used for either cast-iron or steam pipe. Tested at 25 lbs. pressure and warranted; can be used for low pressure steam by adding steam drum. Best material; best workmanship. Specially designed for greenhouse use; corrects the faults of other boilers. Lightest boiler on the market capable of performing equal work. We defy competition in prices on any boiler of equal capacity. Investigate. Send for new illustrated catalogue, just out.

ERIE, PA.—C. W. Zuck & Sons, who have 45,000 feet of glass two and one-half miles west of the city, on rural route No. 2, are in the market for a boiler.

HOT WATER OR STEAM?

Will you please tell us what the capacity of a hot water boiler should be for two greenhouses, each 20x200 feet? Which is the cheaper and more satisfactory, hot water or steam? We are thinking of enlarging our plant, in North Carolina, which is now quite small, and would appreciate any information you may give.

M. & B.

To heat two houses, each 20x200 feet, the boiler should have a capacity for at least 3,000 square feet of radiation. If the boiler plant can be located in the middle of the range, i. e., at the side and 100 feet from each end, hot water will be best. Steam will be more economical to install, but will necessitate the presence of a night fireman.

L. C. C.

A ONE-PIPE SYSTEM.

I would like your opinion, as well as the opinion of others, on the following plan for steam heating: There are several houses 175 feet long, with the end house and boiler at the lower end. Instead of a riser in each house, I propose to have the main from the steam dome extend through the end house under the walk. The dome is lower than the walk. I will then connect the radiators of the houses with this main, letting them extend upwards to the other end of the houses, so that the water of condensation will run back to the boiler through the main flow. I will have air cocks at the farther end. In this way there will be no possibility of water backing up from the boiler and I will avoid many valves, as there will be but one to each radiator. There will also be much fewer fittings. This one-pipe system is used GENTLEMEN:—You can strongly and unhesitatingly recommend the "Eclipse" piston type reducing valve to florists. We have two purchased of you last year. to heat other buildings, and why not for florists?

J. M. K.

The system of piping you mention is the common one-pipe system used in many steam heated buildings, but which, in my judgment, is never as satisfactory as a complete system. One objection to the system is that unless the air valves are automatic in their action the system is apt to become air-bound and for this reason is exceedingly unsafe for horticultural establishments where there is liable to be fluctuation in the steam pressure. A still greater objection to the system, as I see it, is the uneven distribution of heat which always comes from this type of piping. The pipes are always hottest near the riser and in this case near the protected end of the houses, where least heat is desired. The wet and spent steam is carried to the far end of the house, and in order to maintain an even temperature additional pipes will be required on the remote half of the house. While your scheme will save a few dollars in installation, a complete system with a riser under the ridge and returns under the benches or on the side walls from the start will save a

WASHINGTON.

The florists' business here is having its grand final spurt. With combined high school commencements June 19 the rush is over and the summer season is on, regardless of the weather. Weddings have been numerous and quite a few decorations have been booked for the latter part of June. Some fine long lilies are to be seen in the show windows. The Washington Florist Co. is cutting a fine lot of stocks. The peony crop is about over.

The National Electric Association convention, which was held here a week ago, was a hummer for the florists. Gude Bros. Co. alone had one order for 450 boxes of cut flowers. Small had the

VERBENAS.

The verbenas affords another instance of the revival of an old favorite; years ago there were prizes offered for them as pot plants at flower shows, but they seemed to have been quite forgotten until a few years ago, when H. J. Jones exhibited some good pot plants of the variety Miss Willmott, which has since become such a popular market plant, says a writer in the Horticultural Advertiser. I believe it was Mr. Sweet who, seeing it, recognized its value and first grew it for market. Since this took so well, other varieties have been grown. Before referring to these I may say that Miss Willmott varies in color, and we have some improved selections. The King is larger, but the lobes do not open quite flat; Kew Pink appears to be a better thing, the color being a rather deeper shade of pink. The ordinary form varies, and a careful selection should be made for propagating from.

taken up for pots was Warley, or Scarlet King. This is still grown but does not sell quite so well, as we have so many other good scarlet flowers. Princess of Wales, purple blue, and Queen of Whites are other sorts grown.

The new sorts shown by May & Sons include some distinct and pretty shades of colors, and all had clear white eyes. They are designated new "auricula-eyed verbenas." Of the varieties shown, The Queen, Favorite, Admirable, Pearl and Unique were noted as being among the best.

The SUPERIOR

IMPROVED INTERNAL-FIRED STEEL BOILER

Made in 10 sizes, to heat from 2000 to 6500 feet of 4-inch pipe. No brick-work necessary; shipped on skids, all ready to move into place and begin firing. Can be cleaned without letting the fire out. All hubs made so they can be used for either cast-iron or steam pipe. Tested at 25 lbs. pressure and warranted; can be used for low pressure steam by adding steam drum. Best material; best workmanship. Specially designed for greenhouse use; corrects the faults of other boilers. Lightest boiler on the market capable of performing equal work. We defy competition in prices on any boiler of equal capacity. Investigate. Send for new illustrated catalogue, just out.

HOT WATER OR STEAM?

Will you please tell us what the capacity of a hot water boiler should be for two greenhouses, each 20x200 feet? Which is the cheaper and more satisfactory, hot water or steam? We are thinking of enlarging our plant, in North Carolina, which is now quite small, and would appreciate any information you may give. M. & B.

To heat two houses, each 20x200 feet, the boiler should have a capacity for at least 3,000 square feet of radiation. If the boiler plant can be located in the middle of the range, i. e., at the side and 100 feet from each end, hot water will be best. Steam will be more economical to install, but will necessitate the presence of a night fireman.

A ONE-PIPE SYSTEM.

I would like your opinion, as well as the opinion of others, on the following plan for steam heating: There are several houses 175 feet long, with the end house and boiler at the lower end. Instead of a riser in each house, I propose to have the main from the steam dome extend through the end house under the walk. The dome is lower than the walk. I will then connect the radiators of the houses with this main, letting them extend upwards to the other end of the houses, so that the water of condensation will run back to the boiler through the main flow. I will have air cocks at the farther end. In this way there will be no possibility of water backing up from the boiler and I will avoid many valves, as there will be but one to each radiator. There will also be much fewer fittings. This one-pipe system is used to heat other buildings, and why not for florists? J. M. K.

The system of piping you mention is the common one-pipe system used in many steam heated buildings, but which, in my judgment, is never as satisfactory as a complete system. One objection to the system is that unless the air valves are automatic in their action the system is apt to become air-bound and for this reason is exceedingly unsafe for horticultural establishments where there is liable to be fluctuation in the steam pressure. A still greater objection to the system, as I see it, is the uneven distribution of heat which always comes from this type of piping. The pipes are always hottest near the riser and in this case near the protected end of the houses, where least heat is desired. The wet and spent steam is carried to the far end of the house, and in order to maintain an even temperature additional pipes will be required on the remote half of the house. While your scheme will save a few dollars in installation, a complete system with a riser under the ridge and returns under the benches or on the side walls from the start will save a

The florists' business here is having its grand final spurt. With combined high school commencements June 19 the rush is over and the summer season is on, regardless of the weather. VERBENAS.

The verbenas afford another instance of the revival of an old favorite; years ago there were prizes offered for them as pot plants at flower shows, but they seemed to have been quite forgotten until a few years ago, when H. J. Jones exhibited some good pot plants of the variety Miss Willmott, which has since become such a popular market plant, says a writer in the Horticultural Advertiser. I believe it was Mr. Sweet who, seeing it, recognized its value and first grew it for market. Since this took so well, other varieties have been grown. Before referring to these I may say that Miss Willmott varies in color, and we have some improved selections. The King is larger, but the lobes do not open quite flat; Kew Pink appears to be a better thing, the color being a rather deeper shade of pink. The ordinary form varies, and a careful selection should be made for propagating from.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Summer seems to have arrived, but I say it cautiously, for fear I may be mistaken. The wholesalers are just about buried in peonies, Spanish iris and sweet peas. There are about enough peas in one day to supply the week's trade. Roses are almost as bad and Kaiserins are especially abundant. The result is that stock is piled up so that the wholesalers cannot get a price for anything, and there is more going to the garbage box than there is sold. Stock of all kinds is fine for this season and it seems wrong to see so much lost, but it cannot be helped.

The retailers have had an exceptionally good season up to June 12, when the slump struck them and they at once gave way to it and decided that summer was here and business was over for the season.

The plantmen have about closed up their season's work and some of them have more stock left than looks well, but as there are many places which are not planted, they hope to get rid of some of their stock. The only fear is that many will go away for the summer and not bother about planting.

Various Notes.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

Trade conditions have been ideal in Buffalo for the last week, but the warm weather soon puts a damper on flower buyers. However, with the necessity for flowers that this particular season brings, trade is very good. The plantmen are all very busy, and when it comes to booking up the trade, it will no doubt prove to be a good year. The rush will soon come to an end with the retailers, ending in about a week, with the graduations. There is often much trouble in sending these bunches to the schools, on account of the bunches getting lost, mixed, etc. A good safeguard against this is to get a receipt for the box and also address the envelope enclosing the card, which is tied on the bouquet. In this way much trouble is often saved.

We have noticed on several occasions the scarcity of plants since Easter. Either the demand has been greater or the plants are not grown, for the shortage was very marked. There has been enough of the bedding plants, but small flowering plants have been scarce, and so we had to call on Philadelphia.

Various Notes.

S. S. Skidelsky paid the florists a visit, and indeed it is a visit from a man like him. Mr. Skidelsky is a traveling man plus, and if you're inclined to talk something besides business, he is right with you. He travels for everybody, including himself, but not for anybody, for he represents only the best and always backs his word.

We also had another man, a real drummer, Mr. Smith of the Box Board Co. He arrived in town the same day an elephant stepped on a child in a street parade, and so Mr. Smith talked nothing but boxes and elephants. He told us one thing that sounds real, and that was the fact that box board is going up; so you would all better get your order in.

The windows of all the stores have been very attractive the last few days, celebrating the opening of the racing season at Buffalo. S. A. Anderson, being the most enthusiastic race follower, naturally had the best window. Floral saddles were the features of the displays.

We are pleased to be able to report that William Scott is getting along nicely; always glad to see his friends and gaining strength. R. A. S.

THE RETAIL

FLORIST.....

FUNERAL WORK.

Sprays or Flat Bunches.

The arranging of flowers into a nice, loose spray is not so easy for a novice as it may appear. Of course, anyone can tie some flowers into a flat bunch of some sort and call it a spray, but this is not what the majority of people want.

Unless your customer demands it, do not mix too many varieties of flowers together; not only are these hard to arrange nicely, but it shows poor taste. You will invariably find that a spray made up of one or two kinds of flowers makes a much better appearance and gives better satisfaction when finished.

Material Needed.

To make the regular, everyday sprays or flat bunches the only essential materials you need, besides the greens and flowers, are match sticks, preferably green, and some strong green twine or silkline. It is not absolutely necessary that you use green match sticks or green string. No, indeed. You can make up just as nice a spray upon a piece of board split from the side of a shipping box, tying the flowers with any old piece of cord you may have handy, but you must remember that sometimes, while handling the flowers at a funeral, the bottom of the piece may be seen and you can judge for yourself which will make the better impression. Besides, the string and stick used in one spray cost but a fraction of a cent, while the florist using them can demand much better prices.

Making a Simple Spray.

Suppose, now, that you have an order for a flat piece, similar to the one in the illustration, which is made up of carnations and sweet peas—a nice combination. Start by placing about three or four fern leaves on the stick to be used, having the leaves project about five inches over the end of it. Hold with your left hand; then under the thumb, which should be on top, place the end of your string and tie the leaves and stick tightly together by winding the string several times around, from right to left. Never release your hold on the ferns or flowers unless you have fastened the string by drawing it up between the stems of the flowers or ferns. Some florists cut the string into pieces about one yard long when tying a bunch, while others work with the whole spool. This is just as one becomes accustomed to it. Personally I prefer to work with silkline on a spool. Draw the string up tightly as you go along. See that the spray will lie flat when finished. Sometimes, in working along, the piece will get a twist into it, especially when using heavy-stemmed flowers, such as hyacinths.

Before going any farther I will say that in order to make a really artistic effect it is essential that you always see to it that the smallest or tightest flowers are arranged at the ends and sides of the spray—in fact, projecting out above the larger flowers in the whole piece.

The sweet peas in the bunch illustrated were rather short-stemmed, so it was necessary to wire them. This was done by taking some No. 24 wire, straightened and cut eighteen inches long, and fastening two or three sweet peas into one loose bunch, the wire serving as a stem. Place two of these small bunches of peas about three inches apart on top of the ferns, about one inch back from the end, and tie into place. Next lay several carnations into place, alternating thus until the spray is completed. As you work along, lay a piece of Asparagus Sprengeri in between the layers, this to be held in place by the flowers. See that the flowers do not run across the bunch in regular rows; have them as irregular as possible.

As stated before, always have the smaller flowers sticking out above the larger ones. It holds good with open or tight roses, lilies, etc. Do not try to be too saving with green, as this is just what shows the flowers up nicely. The end of the bunch should not be cut off too abruptly, as this spoils the whole arrangement, no matter how much pains you may have taken with the rest of your work. After tying the last flowers into place, leave about five inches of the stems to finish off the bunch, giving the piece a nice, finished appearance. On a large one still more of the stem should be left. When no ribbon is called for, then tie several sprays of green in with the final tie, completing the piece.

More Elaborate Sprays.

The flat bunch described above is but the simplest kind, such as the florists in the larger cities make up by the dozen daily.

Experience will soon teach one many ways of arranging flowers into different styles of sprays. Some flowers also adapt themselves much better to this work than others, but we cannot always choose these, for oftentimes we must go according to the taste of some queer customer. Then, again, you will often have a fine azalea or rhododendron that is in full bloom, too far open to sell on the plant, but which will make a fine bunch for a funeral taking place the same day.

FUNERAL WORK.

Sprays or Flat Bunches.

The arranging of flowers into a nice, loose spray is not so easy for a novice as it may appear. Of course, anyone can tie some flowers into a flat bunch of some sort and call it a spray, but this is not what the majority of people want.

Unless your customer demands it, do not mix too many varieties of flowers together; not only are these hard to arrange nicely, but it shows poor taste. You will invariably find that a spray made up of one or two kinds of flowers makes a much better appearance and gives better satisfaction when finished.

Material Needed.

To make the regular, everyday sprays or flat bunches the only essential materials you need, besides the greens and flowers, are match sticks, preferably green, and some strong green twine or silkline. It is not absolutely necessary that you use green match sticks or green string. No, indeed. You can make up just as nice a spray upon a piece of board split from the side of a shipping box, tying the flowers with any old piece of cord you may have handy, but you must remember that sometimes, while handling the flowers at a funeral, the bottom of the piece may be seen and you can judge for yourself which will make the better impression. Besides, the string and stick used in one spray cost but a fraction of a cent, while the florist using them can demand much better prices.

Making a Simple Spray.

Suppose, now, that you have an order for a flat piece, similar to the one in the illustration, which is made up of carnations and sweet peas—a nice combination. Start by placing about three or four fern leaves on the stick to be used, having the leaves project about five inches over the end of it. Hold with your left hand; then under the thumb, which should be on top, place the end of your string and tie the leaves and stick tightly together by winding the string several times around, from right to left. Never release your hold on the ferns or flowers unless you have fastened the string by drawing it up between the stems of the flowers or ferns. Some florists cut the string into pieces about one yard long when tying a bunch, while others work with the whole spool. This is just as one becomes accustomed to it. Personally I prefer to work with silkline on a spool. Draw the string up tightly as you go along. See that the spray will lie flat when finished. Sometimes, in working along, the piece will get a twist into it, especially when using heavy-stemmed flowers, such as hyacinths.

Before going any farther I will say that in order to make a really artistic effect it is essential that you always see to it that the smallest or tightest flowers are arranged at the ends and sides of the spray—in fact, projecting out above the larger flowers in the whole piece.

The sweet peas in the bunch illustrated were rather short-stemmed, so it was necessary to wire them. This was done by taking some No. 24 wire, straightened and cut eighteen inches long, and fastening two or three sweet peas into one loose bunch, the wire serving as a stem. Place two of these small bunches of peas about three inches apart on top of the ferns, about one inch back from the end, and tie into place. Next lay several carnations into place, alternating thus until the spray is completed. As you work along, lay a piece of Asparagus Sprengeri in between the layers, this to be held in place by the flowers. See that the flowers do not run across the bunch in regular rows; have them as irregular as possible.

As stated before, always have the smaller flowers sticking out above the larger ones. It holds good with open or tight roses, lilies, etc. Do not try to be too saving with green, as this is just what shows the flowers up nicely. The end of the bunch should not be cut off too abruptly, as this spoils the whole arrangement, no matter how much pains you may have taken with the rest of your work. After tying the last flowers into place, leave about five inches of the stems to finish off the bunch, giving the piece a nice, finished appearance. On a large one still more of the stem should be left. When no ribbon is called for, then tie several sprays of green in with the final tie, completing the piece.

More Elaborate Sprays.

The flat bunch described above is but the simplest kind, such as the florists in the larger cities make up by the dozen daily.

Experience will soon teach one many ways of arranging flowers into different styles of sprays. Some flowers also adapt themselves much better to this work than others, but we cannot always choose these, for oftentimes we must go according to the taste of some queer customer. Then, again, you will often have a fine azalea or rhododendron that is in full bloom, too far open to sell on the plant, but which will make a fine bunch for a funeral taking place the same day.

The Way to Hold Flowers and Silkline for Winding in Making a Flat Bunch.

Cut the branches as long as you can and arrange loosely with but little outside green.

In making a loose bunch of long-stemmed roses where the stems are naturally bent, just gather them up carelessly and tie together, using just a little Asparagus plumosus to fill in.

Some people like the flowers spread as much as possible, so as to make a large bunch with a few flowers, while others, again, like them well together, making a small bunch. This you will find quite easy after a little experience.

Backgrounds for Sprays.

The background of a spray should not project out from underneath more than an inch or two. Fern leaves are commonly used as a background for the general run of work; in fact, by some florists for all work, but green or bronze leucothoe sprays give a much richer appearance and should be used for the better grade of work. In using leucothoe do not pile one leaf on top of the other, as they are too expensive; besides, it is not necessary. When short of ferns, galax leaves can be used nicely; of course, they must be wired. With lilies, Beauties or chrysanthemums you need really no background at all.

Shape of Sprays.

Let me say just a few words in regard to the shape of your spray. A well-proportioned one should be about twice as long as it is wide; that is, from the tip to the end of the stems. If you keep close to this proportion, then you cannot go amiss. If you want to make a garland, all well and good, but nothing looks worse than a spray of flowers about eight inches wide and a yard long. One nearly round is not rightly shaped, either; still it does not look nearly so bad as the attenuated one. As you draw near to the end of the piece do not run to a point, but leave more of a square finish.

Wiring Flowers.

The wiring of flowers adds a great deal to the effect of a flat bunch. For wiring the smaller flowers and allowing them to project out above the rest you will get a much nicer effect with but little extra trouble. When working with any flower having a stiff stem, by wiring and bending it you can procure a much more artistic effect. Narcissi and hyacinths are easily wired by pushing the wire inside the stem; the latter should always be wired, as they break off so easily, spoiling the whole piece. When making a large piece, or what is better named a panel, it is advisable to use a wire background.

Suitable Green to Use.

The proper selection of green to be used with the different flowers is also quite important. It is of course true that no green goes as well with a flower as its own, but often we must use outside green. Asparagus Sprengeri goes well with carnations, sweet peas, chrysanthemums, asters, tulips, etc. Asparagus plumosus can be used to good effect with roses, valley, orchids, etc. With lilies use a few sprays of Boston fern leaves.

After all, the proper green to use is to a large extent a matter of taste.

The Use of Ribbon.

The use of ribbon is also a matter of taste, or a matter that depends a great deal on the whim of your customer. In fact, it is not really necessary, but a larger piece always looks better when tied with a bow of ribbon, for a spray really represents a number of flowers gathered up loosely into a flat shape and tied together, the ribbon representing what they were tied together with.

Every florist should decorate for the Fourth. Put a "patriotic" decoration in the window (one retailer suggests a toy pistol and a funeral wreath as a suitable combination) and unfurl the Stars and Stripes. One of the accompanying illustrations shows the store front of R. W. Barrow, on the line of

SCIENCE OF BOUQUET MAKING.

That there are scientific laws that regulate the combination of odors, as there are those that must be followed in assembling colors or musical tones, is maintained by Francis Marre in an article contributed to Cosmos (Paris), says the Literary Digest. Mr. Marre holds that it is possible to formulate rules for the proper grouping of flowers according to their odors, and he believes that those who consult the eye only, in making a bouquet, are artistic heretics. "A bouquet is a symphony of odors," he says; and it has its conventional rules of composition just as a musical symphony has. What these rules are he strives to point out. We read:

"To choose flowers with skill, to group them harmoniously, to blend their colors and to bring out a pleasing effect from the infinite variety of their shades, is an affair of art and personal taste for which it is impossible to formulate a precise rule or any exact directions.

"But to establish a scale of scent that shall not contain one false note—to make the general odor of a bouquet something fine, smooth and delicate, is not an art, but a real science, and I desire to try to express its laws.

"The precise osmometric measurements that have been made in various laboratories have established the relative intensity of perfumes, and the experiments of specialists have done the rest, so that it is to-day well known in what relative proportions the elementary odors must be combined in order to obtain an agreeable whole. By such knowledge the great perfumers prove their creative skill, and their cleverness is often only the application of precise and definite data.

"We may divide odors into two great classes, the strong and the weak; each when used by itself has very apparent defects; the problem for solution is to unite them in proper proportions.

"In the first place a foundation odor must be selected, to give the general tone. This choice is free, and there is nothing to determine it outside of the personal preferences of the maker of the bouquet, or, better, the one for whom it is destined. Some prefer a violent and strong base, such as acacia, heliotrope, or lilac; others like a weaker and less energetic one, such as lily of the valley, jasmine, or white rose; it is simply a question of taste.

"The foundation odor must be placed in the center, and only a small number of flowers must be used for it; then these should be surrounded with an odor that will complete it without effacing it. Around a bunch of acacia, for instance, may be placed a few blossoms of honeysuckle; around heliotrope, lily of the valley; around tuberose, jacinth; around geranium, roses. Then, the complementary odor having once been fixed upon, there must be added different odors, intended to give to the basic odor what we may call character—lively odors on the one hand, and soft odors on the other; in a bouquet of heliotrope and lily of the valley, it is good to place the violence of the jacinth, the warm sweetness of the orange, the penetrating delicacy of the mignonette or the violet, and something of the strength exhaled by the gillyflower or the carnation. Finally, we finish by placing at the edges a reminder of the basic odor.

"At first sight these rules appear somewhat artificial and conventional; this is true in a certain degree, but con-instance, if you are working in carnations, wire some of them so they will stand well out above the others. Follow the same plan when using two kinds of flowers, such as sweet peas and carnations, or peas and hyacinths, narcissus and some larger flower, or even carnations or roses with lilies. All of these make nice combinations, and in all cases by formity with them is none the less useful. A bouquet is a symphony of odors, and should we not grant that in making it we must follow rules as rigid as those of harmony? It is a heresy to hold that flowers should be grouped with a view solely to the pleasure of the eye, since they have perfume; and if the theory of complementaries governs the assemblage of colors, we should not forget that there are also complementary odors, and that odors have value and intensity which should be combined happily when we desire to achieve a really artistic result."

CULTURAL REFERENCES.

In the issue of May 30, Mrs. R. S. Estill generously pays tribute to the REVIEW, to which she concedes her great indebtedness, telling of her frequent consultations of the back numbers when in doubt on any question of growing or management, feeling assured, as she writes, that she "can always find light by looking long enough."

By adopting my plan, I think, with some little labor—which, however, is entirely pleasurable—she can always find light, and the necessity of a long search will be entirely obviated. After accumulating two years of the REVIEW, when the nights grew long, I commenced cutting out all the instructive articles on timely subjects to which I knew I would sooner or later have occasion to refer, making the selections broad, even beyond the topics in which I was interested at the time, or in which I expected to be interested in the near future. Somewhere on each clipping, in ink, I noted the date when the article appeared.

I had previously purchased a large scrap book, 12x15 inches, bound, containing sixty pages of quite heavy paper, but when my clippings were all gotten together, I realized that they would more than fill the one book, leaving no room for additions in the future; so I invested in a second scrap book of the same size, giving me two volumes. I set aside an appropriate number of pages of the first volume for each letter of the alphabet up to and including M, while the second volume was apportioned among the remaining letters down to Z. Having classified my clippings by subject-matter, alphabetically, during the winter evenings, when there was leisure time, I pasted them in under the appropriate letter. My classifications may not always have been the best, but they were known to me and have answered the purpose. I recall I classified articles specifying remedies for all diseases and enemies to plant life under I—"Insects." To glance at those particular pages would occasion surprise that so much has been published concerning cyanide as a destroyer of the white fly, including even the experience of the florist who used a flower pot for holding the mixture and then stood calmly in the door, curious to see how the old thing worked.

I have Wm. Scott's book—yes, I might almost properly say his three books, for his contributions to my two scrap books are so frequent, so voluminous and so highly valuable as to entitle him to be termed the author—almost. But then, there are Totty, Ribes and the others, all interesting and instructive, who are able collaborators with the grand old man. I am constantly referring to these scrap books for needed information. They are excellent reading after the daily paper and magazines are disposed of. Next winter I shall add the clippings of this year.

Sometimes an article in the last column laps over on to the first column of the following page. I can generally save both sides by pasting the clipping all along one margin, so it can be folded over, permitting the reverse side to be read.

From these books one can best form a correct idea of the magnitude and value of the work being accomplished by the REVIEW. From the standpoint—a selfish one—of a comparatively recent recruit to the florist aggregation, its value could be possibly increased during the summer, when inside work is much diminished, by devoting two or more pages weekly to the planting, caring for and protecting of outside plants, not only the more rare, but the ordinary ones—the roses, asters, dahlias, etc. Many young men whose only education is the practical one received inside, find themselves minus experience or familiarity with outside work when they make an onward step and branch out for themselves. But without that, the REVIEW is all right, and long may it live and flourish. W. A. S.

BEGONIAS FOR BEDDING.

Will you kindly let me know where I could get a few Begonia Vesuvius and Begonia Erfordii? Also tell me if they can be raised from seed as easily as Begonia Vernon, and when to sow them, in spring or in fall, for spring bedding. I have read an article in the REVIEW about them and would like to try a bed of them. How should they be cultivated for next spring? L. A. G.

It is now a little late to purchase begonias of the semperflorens type for bedding this season. They are easily raised from seed, however. The best time to sow seed is in January or the early part of February, in a house where a night temperature of 60 degrees is maintained. Use pans or shallow flats and a compost of fine loam, leaf-mold and sand. Make the surface perfectly smooth, water through a fine sprinkler and then scatter the seeds on the surface. Scatter a little very fine sand over the seed, but no loam. The seeds are dust-like and need careful handling. Keep moist and covered with paper until the seeds germinate. Prick off into flats when large enough to handle, and later transfer to other flats or, better still, pot them singly if you want fine plants. This class of begonias stands full sunshine, except in the early stages of growth, and is invaluable for carpet and other forms of bedding.

There are quite a number of desirable varieties of bedding begonias. Vernon has red flowers and bronze red foliage. There are also pale rose and pure white colors. Of Erfordii, the old type has green leaves and rosy carmine flowers. A new variety has deep red flowers and coppery foliage. The Vernons average four to six inches high, the Erfordii six to eight inches, while Vesuvius or La Vesuve, which is more graceful in habit, with scarlet flowers, attains a height of eight to sixteen inches. All stand sunshine well, which is more than can be said of the tuberous-rooted section.

ARRANGEMENT OF SOLID BEDS.

Can new varieties of carnations be successfully propagated during the summer, no cuttings being obtainable earlier?

In using solid beds where there is poor natural drainage, what depth of drainage and soil should be used?

Please advise the most economical arrangement of benches in a lean-to fifteen feet wide. I have it planned for a bench three feet wide against the south wall, then a walk sixteen inches wide, then a bench six feet wide, another sixteen inches for walk and a bench three feet wide against the north wall. Will this be all right?

I have two connected houses so low that I must use low solid beds to get headroom. Each house is twelve feet nine inches from wall to gutter supports, the wide gutter being carried on parallel lines of pipe supports two feet apart, to permit of a walk of that width under the gutter. The pipes being on the side walls, I allow nine inches of space there, then a bed two feet ten inches wide, two feet for a walk, a bed three feet two inches, ten inches for a walk under the ridge, and then three feet two inches for another bed, which brings me to the supports along the walk under the gutter. The other house is the same way. Can this be improved? J. M.

Carnations cannot be propagated very successfully during the summer months, on account of the heat. If you can supply a cool place to root them in, it could be done, though not so well as in winter. The growth during the summer is such that rooting would not be as ready as on winter wood; especially is this true with outside growth. The greatest obstacle, however, is the heat.

When solid or semi-solid beds are built on ground that does not drain readily, the filling material should be of such a nature and of sufficient depth so that the water can sink away far enough to be removed beyond the reach of the roots. The roots will work down into the filling material some distance, especially if cinders are used. In such case, fourteen to sixteen inches of cinders is not at all too deep. If you use boards for siding, then use a 12-inch board with a 6-inch board on top of it, and use pecky cypress. That will give you fourteen inches of cinders and four inches of soil. If you make concrete sides you can make them any height you may want, but allow for at least that much filling and four inches for soil.

The most economical way of arranging the benches in a house does not always show the most square feet of bench space. Your plan for benching the lean-to shows twelve feet across the three benches, but you will find that if you will make a 15-inch walk against each side of the house, and build two benches, each five feet six inches wide, thus leaving room for an 18-inch walk in the middle of the house, it will grow more high-grade stock than the other way. Under your plan you are using thirty-two inches of the best space for walks and twenty-four inches of the poorest space for bench room, while under the plan I propose you use only eighteen inches of this desirable space for your center walk and you use the most undesirable space, which is along the walls, for your walks.

Your other two houses are benched and piped poorly. I would run the walks and benches thus, beginning against the south wall: Walk, fifteen inches; bench, five feet; walk, twenty inches; bench, four feet ten inches; walk under gutter, sixteen inches; bench, five feet; walk, twenty inches; bench, four feet ten inches; walk, fifteen inches. That will give you four benches of good average width, placed in the best part of the house, and five walks of good width for working, and placed so as to use the poorest room, and so that every bench can be reached from either side. You need only two wide walks for refilling the benches, and, in fact, you can do your wheeling on top of the benches to good advantage. The wide walk under the gutter is entirely unnecessary. The only undesirable feature of this plan is that your ridge and gutter supports will not be free, as they are now. You can overcome that, however, by incasing them with concrete if you make solid beds, or boxing around them if you use raised benches. To incase them with concrete use heavy tarred paper to make the forms around the supports. Make a tube of the desired size and fasten with two or three cords, according to the length of the tube, and fill up with the concrete. In twenty-four hours you can remove the tube and the casing will be perfect. Use sand rather than gravel in making the concrete, as it will make a closer job.

In piping a house we usually arrange the pipes to conform with the arrangement of the beds. If the benches are raised, most of the pipes can be placed underneath them and be entirely out of the way. With solid beds, we find it best to put part overhead and part alongside of the beds in the walks, and raised a few inches off the ground in order to get the full amount of radiation. We like at least one or two pipes overhead in each house. The theory that all heat rises, and that the top will be warm if the bottom is kept warm, may be correct; yet we find that with part of the pipes overhead we can keep the houses more uniform, especially during severe cold and in windy weather. We have demonstrated this in our own houses.

ROSES IN THE SOUTH.

June 9 I planted a side table of Brides and Maids in an even-span house running east and west, with side ventilators between every other post. There are doors at both ends of the house and ventilator sashes on both sides of the ridge. Will the side ventilation during the summer, in a southern climate, cause mildew, and should the doors be kept open or closed? Would it be better to take the glass out of the fixed space between the ventilators in the side wall? The plants were slightly affected with mildew when put in the bench. I cannot see that they have improved or become more affected since they were planted.

C. A. M.

Side ventilation for roses has not proved a success, and especially so where these have been removed during the summer months, as the temperature during the night hours is so subject to fluctuation and the conditions of the atmosphere as regards moisture are so changeable, even in the southern states, that it is much safer to have them under control. During hot spells the doors can be left open, if they do not cause too much draught. Where the glass is entirely removed from the sides of the houses there is no way of controlling mildew, as the fumes requisite to check this pest cannot be confined within the enclosure, thus causing a deal of trouble.

RIBES.

DORMANT JACQS.

About May 25 we planted 100 two-year-old cold storage General Jacqueminot roses. They were good, strong plants. We dug a trench and put in about three inches of old, well rotted barn manure. About two weeks later nearly every one of the plants was dead; some almost, others completely to the ground. Will you kindly tell us the reason for this?

We have all had our troubles with this class of roses. The trouble usually arises from the fact that the roses, instead of being in a true dormant condition, are practically dead when we receive them and are simply dried up stumps.

It is not good policy to plant dormant stock with an abundance of fresh manure near the roots, as the gases liberated during decomposition have a bad effect on the root bark, causing that also to decompose.

We have found it a more profitable practice to purchase our stock during the fall or early winter and care for it ourselves till planting time. RIBES.

PESTS ON OUTDOOR ROSES.

Will you be kind enough to advise me how I can rid my rose bushes of greenfly? I have tried the ordinary methods, such as hellebore and a solution made by soaking tobacco stems, with only partial success. F. W. G.

Owing to changeable conditions, it is a hard matter to keep outdoor roses free from insect enemies, and many have been the remedies recommended, many of them effective, but, owing to said conditions, difficult of application and the effect easily interfered with by rain, wind, etc. A very effective remedy, and easily applied, is a tea made from quassia chips, which are procurable from most drug stores. This decoction should be applied with a sprayer and should be put on while hot, at about 90 degrees. It is safe and will destroy mealy bug and aphids in short order. Kerosene emulsion, if applied with a fine spray, will also destroy these pests, but care must be taken to keep the mixture well agitated during the operation, as there is danger if applied while the mixture is in a settled state.

RIBES.

STOCK PLANTED; HOUSE NOT UP.

Expecting to enlarge my greenhouses this fall, I have made a raised bench and planted carnations where I expect them to grow. I also made permanent solid beds and planted them to roses, where I expect them to remain. The varieties of roses are American Beauty, Maid, Bride, Gate, Richmond, Cochet, Marechal Niel and Ivory. I topped the carnations some time since and they sent up many flower stems with buds. I went over them again and cut these flower stems close to the stalk. This leaves the plants about six inches high, with from three to six branches.

Will these plants require any more topping or pruning, and if so should I cut the new stems close to the bud or close to the stalk? When should I let them commence to bloom, in order to get best results for fall and winter market?

When should I build the greenhouse extension over these beds?

How many years can I let these rose plants remain in these solid beds with profit, provided that I give them plenty of food and keep them free of insects? J. R. D.

The carnations should be cared for in exactly the same manner as if they were in the field; viz.: cultivating and topping once a week, shaping the plants and giving them the same general attention. The time to discontinue topping depends upon the time the first crop is desired, and this may be calculated upon the following basis: Crops during fall mature in about six or eight weeks;

The Michigan Legislature has Given Park Commissioner Philip Breitmeyer Authority to Personally Stop all Scorching Autos on Detroit Boulevards.—Detroit News.

during early winter, from November to February, they require ten to twelve weeks, and from then to the end of the season they require less time. Flowering stems should always be cut close to the eyes fit to develop good flowering wood. If they are cut too high the future crop will be short-stemmed and weak, as no flowering stem possesses an eye sufficiently strong to develop into a good stem. The best eyes are just at the base of the flower stem.

The roof should be placed over the beds before the cold fall rains begin. It is always safer to have stock for winter blooming in such a place that conditions, such as moisture, temperature and insect enemies, can be controlled.

Many expert rose growers are now carrying their stock over. Some stock that I examined during the spring of 1906 had been carried over for four years and was then in excellent condition. The same stock is still being carried along with good results. There is little doubt but this method of culture will eventually become more general.

RIBES.

HOLLYHOCKS.

Now is the time to sow seeds of hollyhocks in order to have good, strong plants with crowns that will convince even the most skeptical of their ability to flower next year. It means a great deal to have plants that can be sold with an accompanying guarantee of their flowering. And more than that, plants can in most cases receive more attention a few weeks from now than they would be likely to receive if left and grown from new crop seed, which would be at a time when many other things will claim a large share of attention.

The seeds may either be sown in the open ground in a coldframe, or in flats placed in a frame. The latter method is probably the more advantageous, because of the convenience of moving from one place to another when the process of pricking off takes place.

Hollyhocks are grown chiefly for the use of their flowers for cutting by florists in summer and for such use the double pink is in by far the greatest demand. The double white comes next. Mixed hollyhocks are used largely for planting for use as decorative plants outdoors in borders along with perennials or close to or among shrubs. Growers should have all kinds on hand, but more of pink and white than of mixed or any other distinct shade of color. D. M.

ASPARAGUS SPRENGERI.

Are old and divided plants of Asparagus Sprengeri as good as younger plants? My plants are several years old and each season I usually divide them. They do well, but not as well as I would like.

R. C. E.

While Asparagus Sprengeri can be propagated by division of the root, far better results are had from seedlings. The seed can be sowed at any time during the year, but if started in January or February splendid plants may be had before winter. Some growers plant their seedlings in the open air. Keep well cultivated, lift and place in benches early in September. Such plants hardly notice the removal and quickly start away into active growth when housed. Plant outdoors about the middle of May. They require liberal food supplies.

head on hot afternoons is also good. A winter night temperature of 52 to 55 degrees is quite sufficient for this orchid and it can be grown successfully in an ordinary greenhouse; in fact, many of the finest plants we have ever seen, carrying 150 to 200 flowers per spray, were grown on small places where there were no special facilities for caring for them. After flowering a period of rest is necessary and the plants will do well hung in a house which does not fall below 50 degrees.

For florists this is one of the best half dozen orchids and no trouble will be found in growing it successfully. Use quite small pans or baskets and a compost of moss and coarse fern fiber.

Oleanders.

That beautiful and well-known evergreen shrub, the oleander, is better known in the southern than in the northern states, where it is not infrequently used for shade and lawn decoration. In our northern states the plants are usually seen in pots or tubs, mere ghosts of the beautiful specimens of the southland, but even grown in this way they are desirable for piazza or lawn decoration. If the pots or tubs are sunk in the grass they look well even when out of flower.

Propagation at this season is easy, even quite hard cuttings rooting without trouble. Potted when rooted, kept cool like azaleas during winter, planted outdoors the second season and freely syringed, nice plants may be had in a couple of years. Some pinching is needed to keep them bushy. The Nerium oleander is a native of the orient and in addition to the pink form usually seen there are pure white, flesh, purple and one or two other shades in cultivation.

In Bermuda the huge oleanders, twenty-five to thirty feet in height, excite the admiration of visitors. Here we must be content with more modest specimens. The worst insect pests are scale and mealy bug, the former being especially bad. Some pruning is necessary each year to keep the plants shapely.

Lagerstroemias.

The crape myrtles, or lagerstroemias, are too well known in our warmer states to need any description here. They are as popular and easy of culture there as syringas, lilacs and viburnums are farther north. They are beautiful shrubs and are worthy of more extended culture in our colder states. They need little winter protection. An ordinary cold plant pit or cellar where frost is excluded will suffice, although we have never seen a few degrees of frost harm them in the least. Propagation by either soft cuttings rubbed off with a heel, or fully matured wood, is easy. If the young plants are planted out during the summer, lifted and heeled in in a cool cellar during winter, pruned back a little and planted out again early in May, they will soon make nice specimens in large pots or tubs. They are effective for lawn or piazza use. Pink and white are the colors mostly seen, but other shades are sometimes noted. These make a pleasant change from the overdone hydrangeas, and, lasting, as they do, in bloom for many weeks, they are especially valuable.

Vallota Purpurea.

This brilliant member of the amaryllidaceæ family, commonly known as the Scarborough lily, is rarely seen in com-

SEASONABLE

SUGGESTIONS

Palms and Ferns.

The arrival of warm weather and pressure of duties at this season sometimes causes a neglect of the palms and ferns. As the sun now shines with great power, more shading will be needed on the glass to prevent burning and to keep the foliage a dark green. A little neglect may cause sunburn on the foliage of valuable palms which will probably unfit them for sale. If the house is small, the shading, preferably of kerosene and white lead to which a little whiting has been added, may be put on with a long-handled brush, but where there are large structures this method is too slow and laborious. A force pump with a short nose attached, or, better still, a spraying barrel with pump attached and containing an agitator to keep the liquid thoroughly stirred, such a barrel as is useful for spraying fruit trees and shrubs, will be found the correct thing. By using a Vermorel or other fine spraying nozzle the glass can be quickly covered with a fine, misty shading. Possibly a little more shading may be needed before the end of the season, but the fall rains and early snows will take off most of the shading by the beginning of December, although if your house is glazed with clear glass you may need some shade all winter.

Do not allow any palm to suffer from want of a larger pot. A shift now may double their value by winter. Be careful not to overpot Cocos Weddelliana, which makes but few roots and should be kept in as small a pot as possible.

Plants which are well established in their pots will be benefited by applications of weak liquid manure once a week. Soot water is also good for keeping the foliage of a dark green color.

Use the hose thrice a day on days that are 90 degrees in the shade, and keep the floors and beds well moistened to preserve a good growing atmosphere.

Shift along any small adiantum, pteris, cyrtomium or other ferns needing it. These will make splendid growth now in frames if kept well shaded and carefully watered. Adiantum Farleyense needs a warm, moist house heavily shaded. Be careful not to play the hose on the foliage or you will speedily ruin it.

Take off runners from the various nephrolepis which are now being freely produced.

Propagating.

In summer we usually find the propagating benches untenanted except for a few straggling weeds. During the hot summer months is an excellent time to increase your stock of crotons, dracenas, dieffenbachias and other ornamental-leaved plants. Gardenia, ficus and other plants also root easily if care is taken to keep the sand well soaked with water.

Where ficus shoots were tied with moss two months ago and have been kept warm and well syringed, roots should now be appearing. As soon as they commence to push through the moss cut them off and pot them with as small pots as they can be conveniently placed in. Tie up the leaves to economize space, place in the propagating house and give light sprayings frequently until they are well rooted round the pots. They can then be placed in cooler quarters and do well under canvas outdoors for two or three months, taking care to house them before frost threatens.

Oncidium Varicosum Rogersii.

Newly imported plants of that beautiful Brazilian orchid, Oncidium varicosum Rogersii, are now being offered at reasonable rates. This is unquestionably one of the best commercial varieties to grow, commencing to flower, as it does, in autumn and giving a succession of spikes all winter long. Newly imported plants usually give a crop of spikes the following winter, but the following year they are much stronger. They succeed well on blocks, or in baskets and pans, baskets being perhaps the most convenient form of receptacle as giving perfect drainage.

The plants, after being basketed, should be hung near the glass, in a north house, if possible, or if in a brighter house be given moderate shading. Water must be given sparingly until roots are being freely produced, when a more liberal supply is necessary. Spraying over-mercial establishments, but where there are many calls for summer blooming plants this is one of the best subjects to handle. The name, V. purpurea, is something of a misnomer; V. coccinea would be more appropriate, there being nothing purple about the flowers, which are brilliant scarlet. Failures in the culture of vallotas are due to growers drying them off as they would an amaryllis. The vallotas are evergreen bulbous plants and must never be rested. It is also, like the nerines and Belladonna lilies, impatient of root disturbance, flowering best when well potbound. The bulbs need to be kept in comparatively small pots and a compost of fibrous loam, dry cow manure and sand suits them. The bulbs must not be buried. The plants never need any shade and in winter can be kept in the coldest house, even a little frost not injuring them. We have often seen beautiful specimens of these standing outside cottage doors, enough to excite the envy of even the most expert cultivators. The present is a suitable time to do any potting needed, but be sure to give only a small shift. The finest specimens of vallota we ever saw in Great Britain carried sixty-three spikes and would have created a sensation at any American exhibition. The plant is of easy culture in America and should be far more seen.

Brief Reminders.

Use great care with the hose and watering pot now. Plunge as many plants as possible outdoors to save drying out at the roots. Spray overhead several times on hot, drying days. This applies to indoor as well as outdoor plants.

Soak sweet peas with a sprinkler or hose if droughty weather prevails. Remember one soaking is better than twenty sprinklings.

If shrubs are suffering from drought, draw loam away with a hoe to form a large saucer. Allow the hose to run into this. After the water has soaked away, push back the dry soil. This is better than playing the hose on the surface soil.

Keep amaryllis quite dry now in a fairly sunny spot.

If you have not ordered your early Lilium Harrisii, freesias, Roman hyacinths and Paper Whites, do so at an early date.

Hybrid roses outdoors are now in season. A hosing overhead these warm evenings will refresh them and keep aphids in check.

Cut spikes of outdoor-grown candidum lilies and place them in water just before the first buds open. They will expand as well as on the plant and in a cool room keep much better.

Keep hydrangeas in tubs well soaked with water. Feed liberally to secure large flower heads.

Pot on seedling tuberous begonias and gloxinias to flower in August and September.

Keep plenty of moisture in the houses these warm days.

Disbud the mums as side shoots appear and stake them before they become bent or broken.

MCPHERSON, KAN.—Chas. Simonson has commenced the work of remodeling and enlarging his greenhouses. When the task is complete he will have over 5,000 feet under glass and will have the most up-to-date floral establishment for its size in this part of the state.

Eremurus Robustus.

THE EREMURUS.

This stately plant, a native of the deserts in Turkestan, Asia Minor, Persia, Siberia and the Himalayas, is a striking object in the herbaceous garden when in flower. While the price of the roots remains moderately high, due to the slow propagation of the plant, it has declined considerably during the last few years, and whereas five years ago eremuri were looked upon as novelties, they are now to be met with in many gardens and are listed by a good number of American dealers. The notable exhibits of these plants for a number of years by Veitch's, of London, drew public attention to their merits. Last year a collection staged at one of the exhibitions of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society received a silver gilt medal. These were grown several hundred miles north of Boston, showing that they can be successfully grown in the coldest portion of our New England states.

September is a good month in which to plant the eremuri, but they can be moved with safety while the ground is open. Great care is needed in lifting them, as the large, octopus-like roots are easily broken. While the plants appear to thrive in any good garden soil, a compost containing a good proportion of meadow muck, leaf-mold and well rooted cow manure seems especially suitable. The land should be well drained and the crowns buried eight to ten inches deep. A coating of leaves should be placed over the crowns after the ground freezes, and as growth commences very early in the spring and the young shoots are liable to injury from late frosts and cutting winds, it is well to leave a mulching round the plants until early in May. A few short pine or spruce boughs also may be stuck in the ground around the plants for protection.

The tall, naked flower scapes are terminated by racemes two to four feet in length, of yellow, white, pink or reddish brown flowers. The leaves are long and linear, dying down a few weeks after the plants have flowered. The flower scapes need no supporting unless the mistake has been made of planting them in a wind-swept location. The plants produce seeds with great freedom, which, if sown when ripe, germinate readily. It takes five to seven years to flower them from seed, however, and few have the patience to wait so long. Division of the root is the usual means of propagation.

Probably the best known eremurus is robustus, introduced from Turkestan in 1874. This variety produces spikes seven to nine feet high, of soft, rose colored flowers. E. Himalaeus grows equally strong and bears pure white flowers. E. Bungei attains a height of four to five feet. Its flowers are of a beautiful golden yellow color. E. Elwesii is a form of robustus, which it much resembles, but flowers earlier and grows even more vigorously. E. Turkestanicus produces reddish brown flowers, while in E. Korolkowi they are bright rose in color. There are a number of other species, including a few garden hybrids of great merit. These magnificent members of the liliaceae family are worthy a place in every well regulated garden, and the commercial grower who can show his customers flowering plants cannot fail to have orders for them. W. N. CRAIG.

PAPER WHITE NARCISSUS.

Can Paper White narcissus be forced the second time? Last season I grew quite a few of them. Those brought in first did well, but those brought in late did not flower well. Will they be of any value? R. C. E.

It will not pay to force Paper White narcissus a second season, nor, indeed, any other bulbs, with the possible exception of freesias, which, if not cut with too long stems, will produce fine flowering bulbs in flats. We think the probable reason that your later Paper Whites failed to do well was that they were kept too cold and possibly damp. They are more delicate than the so-called Dutch bulbs. They also start to grow very early and cannot be kept back very late without injuring the crop of flowers. A little frost will injure them, as will a soggy condition at the roots. They should not be sunk outdoors in a pit, as are tulips, daffodils and hyacinths. Their low price would make any attempted carrying over poor policy. C. W.

THE CHRYSANTHEMUM.

Its Past, Present and Future.

Continuing the subject, as presented before the Boston Gardeners' and Florists' club and reported in last week's REVIEW, C. H. Totty said:

Influence on Exhibitions.

The chrysanthemum accomplishes every year a great work in bringing the general grower and his wares before the public at the fall shows. How many towns ever attempt even to hold a show except in the fall, when the mums are at their height? Spring and summer exhibitions can be counted on the fingers of one hand, almost, in the entire country, but when the fall comes shows spring up from one end of the country to the other, and, though the chrysanthemum is the principal attraction, it affords the rose men, the carnation men and the new-plant men a chance to exhibit their stock to a large section of the flower buying public that could otherwise only be reached through the medium of the retail store.

The average retailer is more interested in keeping his trade down to the staples in the trade than he is in pushing a lot of new things that he will have to sink his money into and run his chances on selling them afterwards to a fickle-minded public. As an aid to instructing the public and giving an impetus to the fall trade, just at that time opening up, the chrysanthemum performs a service to the florist that cannot be measured in actual dollars and cents.

One of the most encouraging features to me in the chrysanthemum business is the increasing number of exhibitors. True, some of the older ones drop out from one cause or other, but this is only to be expected, and the number of new men coming up is greatly in excess of older men going out.

Societies.

The various local societies have helped to bring about this condition and I pray it may continue, for when the local interest dies and the local show is discontinued, then do we see the horticultural interest in that particular section, so far as the chrysanthemum is concerned, fading away.

While I give place to none in my interest and loyalty to my local society, I believe it is the duty of every chrysanthemum lover to affiliate himself with the national chrysanthemum society also. In union there is strength and I would like to see the Chrysanthemum Society of America with thousands of members where it now has hundreds only, for members of this society should not forget that the present head of the Chrysanthemum Society is a Massachusetts man, Mr. Loveless, of Lenox, and as a matter of state pride I know you will help him all you can. To a grower interested in chrysanthemums the list of varieties issued by the society is worth much more than the annual dues amount to, not to mention the good work it does in recognizing new and meritorious varieties, winnowing the wheat from the chaff and occasionally in detecting old varieties that once in a while, whether by accident or design, are renamed and offered to the trade as new varieties.

The Future.

And now what of the future? I am neither a prophet nor the son of a prophet, and when dealing in futures it is the unexpected that always happens. So far as one can see along the pathway at this time, the future is bright, very bright for the chrysanthemum. Changes will come, unquestionably; in fact, they are already looming up in a reaction in some sections from the large blooms solely.

The last year has witnessed a to me remarkable turn in favor of the single-flowered types. The singles cannot be called new, for I recall we made an unsuccessful effort to have the market take them up ten years ago, and the market laughed at them. True, varieties have improved greatly since then, but the market at that time was not in a receptive mood. It was merely a big flower, the bigger the better, with a stem like wire and foliage hugging the flower. Today it would seem that the artistic taste is more developed. We see it in the increasing popularity of single flowers, not only in chrysanthemums, but also in roses, dahlias and other flowers. Light, graceful, natural effects can be produced, impossible of duplication with the heavy, large, double flowers that have been the florists' ideal for so long. The single varieties now seem to be coming into their own after years of neglect, and the next year or two will see them popular.

I notice that several new singles were awarded certificates in London last fall. Such a thing would have been heresy not so long ago, and I regard it as an indication of the trend of the times. The pompons or hardy types, too, will be planted much more largely in the next few years. With the spread of the civic improvement ideas, of a city beautiful instead of an aggregation of bricks and stones, a demand will come for these humble but welcome flowers, blooming, as they do, when everything else is gone, and pointing an object lesson of hopefulness long after every other flower has succumbed to the rigors of early winter.

Big Flowers Secure.

Will the big flowers stay? I say, yes. For large, massive decorations they are unsurpassed; to make a showing in an exhibition, they are indispensable, and as evidences of cultural skill they tell their own story. That new types will crop up and have a share of the popularity is certain. The human mind from earliest history is perpetually craving for something different and in this respect modern civilization differs not one whit from the ancient Greeks and Romans. The large flower in its proper place has a certain nobility about it that is not to my mind approached in any other flower, but its place is not stuck in a low bowl to form part of a dinner-table decoration. That part of decorative art can be more artistically done with singles or pompons or other smaller flowered varieties.

That the hybridist will continue to breed to larger and larger types is certain, but size and coarseness do not necessarily have to go together. We have seen the coarseness of Timothy Eaton, for instance, eliminated and a flower equally large or larger produced in Beatrice May or Mrs. D. V. West without a trace of coarseness in their makeup, and it is on these lines that the hybridist will work.

Some people, in decrying size, go to the other extreme and condemn a flower for its size alone. I say this is wrong. The forest tree, when a magnificent specimen, never excites anything but admiration and if nature unlocks her storehouse of knowledge and permits us to raise a chrysanthemum two feet across, if it be perfectly proportioned, I say it would be a marvelous revelation.

Whatever the future has in store, we may confidently say that the chrysanthemum will go on increasing in popularity and usefulness from year to year and adding its quota to the sum total of the world's economy and human progress.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY.

The executive committee for the annual exhibition of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, to be held in the American Institute, New York City, November 6 to 8, consisting of A. Herrington, C. H. Totty and Wm. Duckham, met at the Institute Wednesday, June 12. Mr. Herrington, as chairman, said final arrangements were completed. Dr. Hexamer informed the committee that all efforts to secure larger accommodations had proved unavailing. Consequently it was decided to make it exclusively a chrysanthemum show, thereby insuring room for the exhibits in the hall of the institute.

President A. J. Loveless presented a premium list which includes four silver cups, gold, silver and bronze medals and many good cash prizes; and many valuable prizes are offered by the institute, which should bring spirited competition and insure a good show. It was found necessary to make some slight changes in the schedule as previously published in order to avoid a duplication of classes and also to make it possible for every grower of chrysanthemums to participate in the competition.

The exhibition promises to be the largest in the history of the society, and everything points to a successful meeting. The schedule is now in the hands of the printer and will be mailed to members in due course. All interested exhibitors can obtain them by applying to the secretary.

WASHINGTON.

The regular monthly meeting of the Florists' Club will be held next Tuesday evening, July 2.

Business is down to the summer basis, funeral work predominating.

F. H. Kramer had a half-page ad. in the last Sunday's paper. Looks as if he was trying to force something this time of the year. Last week he had the easy money man at his store; certain hours in the day he had to call for police to dispose of the crowd. The new house just finished on his place has been planted with his Queen Beatrice rose.

The florists doing landscaping report more business in that line than in former years.

The undertakers are taking more to floral door crepes. It is hoped that it will not be long before they will be used as universally as in the middle west.

NEWPORT, R. I.

Current Comment.

The coming of hot weather has been unqualifiedly welcome. It has been the means of causing a rush of summer people to Newport such as has been seldom equaled. This has had the effect of stimulating business in every line. Bedding plants were especially in demand, because of the anxiety suddenly engendered by the announcement of the early occupancy of numerous residences.

Likewise the demand for decorative plants, particularly large palms and for here every season for house decoration permanently, and still larger numbers for frequent use in decoration for dinners, etc.

There seems to be an increasing demand for choice foliage plants of other kinds this season, and florists are making the most of it. They are showing choice crotons and dracenas in their window displays, and that with good effect. Ziegler, who has just opened a store in a splendid location on the avenue, has several beautiful specimens of dracenas prominently displayed in his window. Leikens has crotons of superb quality in front of his store and indoors. Wadley & Smythe and Siebrecht are also using these and many other kinds of choice foliage plants in their opening displays.

Orchids, according to indications, will be in larger demand this year than formerly. The few Cattleya gigas now in bloom are quickly picked up.

William Jurgens, following the example shown him by his uncle, Carl Jurgens, in whose employment he once was, has decided to make a special feature of the growing of roses for summer cutting, and in order to be the better enabled to fill the bill he is having another house built. It is noteworthy that William Jurgens, who is comparatively a young man, has succeeded beyond expectations in building up a business in the last few years.

Oscar Schultz is also a young man who has made rapid progress in a few years. The bulk of Mr. Schultz's business consists of furnishing greenhouse room for those who do not care to be burdened with greenhouses of their own but still own large numbers of plants. Those persons keep and care for the plants in Mr. Schultz's houses, paying him a good rental for the use of the houses.

V. A. Vanicek, of the Rhode Island Nurseries, has cleaned out nearly everything salable in his nursery, as well as all the bedding plants in his greenhouses, and he even found that of the latter he had not nearly enough for the filling of orders already on hand.

Carl Jurgens is cutting fine roses, especially Beauties and Kaiserins, for all of which he finds a ready market at good prices. This was graduation week in all the schools in the city, and the occasion gave rise to an almost unprecedented demand for roses and carnations.

A number of Newporters are much interested in the constitution of the firm of T. J. Grey & Co., of Boston, as reorganized. Mr. Grey, the senior member of the firm, is well known and highly respected in Newport, and Mr. Guerneau, the manager, has made many friends here in the course of his trips to Newport while in the employ of Schlegel & Fottler. Mr. Miller, the secretary, is also favorably known to many Newport gardeners.

F. W. Spaulding, of the J. M. Hodgson Co., arrived early in the week and immediately took up the work of opening the firm's premises on the avenue, which was this year rather unusually delayed on account of the pressure of New York business.

Bruce Butterson, president of the Newport Horticultural Society, who has been seriously ill, is now well on the road to a recovery.

At a recent meeting of the Horticultural Society it was decided to postpone the rose exhibition to July 9 and 10 on account of the extreme lateness of the season.

ferns, increased surprisingly in a few days. The florists on the avenue, who but recently opened shop, had on hand but a very limited supply of either palms or ferns, and when the calls came in thick and fast they were obliged to hurry in all directions in search of them. The prices asked and offered for good specimen plants of palms, especially kentias, indicate conclusively that they are worth more to growers than the same kind of stock was worth a year ago. The ban seemed to have been put on latanias for a few years. This year, however, there are several inquiries for plants of large and small size for piazza and lawn decoration.

There is no doubt that of all palms Latania Borbonica is the most enduring for use in exposed places. Until a few years ago there were but few places in Newport where one or more of these could not be seen. Kentias, to some extent, took their place, but it must be acknowledged that they are not sufficiently adaptable for outdoor work, and the same may be said, and with still more force, of arecas, which were also used, though sparingly. There are large numbers of large kentias and arecas called

NEW YORK.

The Market.

This hot spell could have only one effect on the New York wholesale cut flower market. It looked as if a cyclone had struck it Saturday. Everybody was stocked to the upper deck and good quality was hard to find. Everything was pale and drooping. Even the captains at the helms had that tired feeling. Mildew was abundant. Prices were cut to the lowest rates of the year.

Carnations seemed to suffer most. Lots of them marched from their boxes to the refuse barrels on arrival without even a stopping-off place. The extreme heat had murdered them in transit. The fancies and novelties were on sale at $10 a thousand. Most of the carnation shipments went to the street merchants at $2.50 a thousand. "What would we do without them?" said one of the big pink nabobs of Twenty-eighth street. "I tell you they're a godsend," and so they are. Sometimes I think we don't half appreciate them, and, best of all, they are cash customers.

Roses are down to rock bottom. A few of the best Bride and Maid are salable, but at the buyer's price. Thousands of roses were not sold at all. The grower has had his innings for two months more this year than ever before and must now take his medicine during July and August.

Some one declared that they saw a gentleman from sunny Italy or Greece selling cattleyas on classic Fifth avenue last week. It must have been a mirage. I hardly think orchids will fall so low, even in New York, where they are now so abundant and so beautiful. Not this year, at any rate, though the new orchid growers for the New York market are growing fast in numbers and knowledge and there have been enough and to spare of the finest flowers all through the month of June.

Peonies have come in like a flood to add to the general demoralization. It would be wicked to quote the price at which great wagon-loads of them went to Brooklyn. Every church in the City of Churches must have looked like a floral bower last Sunday. Perhaps cold storage and shipments out of the city may help out, but floods are hard to dam and there seems no bottom to the reservoir. It will surely hold out until the end of July.

Valley is down with the bunch, $10 a thousand buying the finest wedding stock. Lilies are selling at $2 a hundred and sweet peas at the same a hundred bunches.

The June weddings are not up to expectations. There seems to be a wave of family economy sweeping over the country. The retailers are complaining and they are the pulse of the market. There was little doing last week outside of funeral work and European travel. Society has departed to the country resorts. Newport should soon feel the uplift and get busy. The promise of all the big country centers of fashion is said to be encouraging.

Various Notes.

Don't forget the outing next Tuesday, July 2. This is the final notice. Be at the dock, Thirty-first street and East river, promptly at 10 o'clock. Every arrangement has been made for a large crowd and a grand entertainment for all who attend. The children have been especially provided for. Over $300 has been spent in prizes and there will be enough for everybody, of sport, refreshments, dinner and premiums, so no one can go home disappointed. There should be an attendance of 500.

Reed & Keller have a new American Beauty vase and stand, a useful combination, and Mr. Reed's latest conception. He says his new fall catalogue will be far ahead of anything ever sent out.

John Nash and family are recuperating week ends at Glen Cove, L. I. It's a pity this good old English custom of recreative holidaying over Saturday and Sunday has not become universally popular in this too strenuous metropolis.

Summit, N. J., is the summer home of A. J. Guttman.

Frank Millang and family sail July 15 for Europe and will visit Mrs. Millang's old home in the Emerald isle and Mr. Millang's ancestral domain in Belgium. They will be away until September.

Lecakes & Co. have purchased the four-story and basement house at 328 West Twenty-eighth street. Mr. Lecakes has been offered $2,000 on his investment, less than a month since its purchase.

J. B. Nugent, Jr., has recovered from a serious operation on the nasal bones which laid him up for repairs for ten days. A telegram from his married daughter in Greenwood, S. D., congratulating him on becoming a grandfather, seems to have hastened his recovery.

George Relyea, of Poughkeepsie, one of the veteran florists of that section, was killed instantly on Friday, June 21, at the bridge there. The funeral was on Monday. Mr. Relyea was highly respected. His shipments to New York were handled by Joseph Fenrich.

Exclusive Seventy-second street in New York has yielded to the spread of commercialism and is to become a business street. Dards, the florist, was the first to realize its possibilities. He will have a branch store at 114 West Seventy-second street in time for the fall season. There are many florists in that section of the city, the store of David Clarke's Sons among them.

Frederick W. Bodley, gardener on the estate of William K. Vanderbilt, at Deepdale, L. I., married six years ago the daughter of a millionaire widow who died last week, leaving a will that bequeathed only $10 to Mrs. Bodley, who is her only child. The million-dollar estate is left to the city of New York for the improvement of the public parks. The will will be contested.

The Boddington seed store is being added to, remodeled, refloored and shelved under the eagle eye of Harry Bunyard. When completed it will be one of the most convenient emporiums in seeddom. Mr. Boddington's representative, who has been so long ill in the Boston hospital, will be on duty again early in July.

Ralph Ward is back from his trip around the world via Siberia and has a fund of interesting adventures and experiences on tap that makes one impatient to see the planet.

Frank Traendly has devoted a good deal of his spare time to the club's outing interests and his office is already crowded with the premiums for the occasion. The outing committee held its final meeting on Tuesday of this week and the only possible disappointment is unfavorable weather.

J. K. Allen's big ice-box, just installed, is doing duty for peony storage.

Gunther Bros.' new store, and that of Russin & Hanfling, will celebrate the Fourth with new plate glass windows and up-to-date conveniences.

James Hart is kept busy superintending the palm and evergreen decorations of nine Manhattan hotels. These are renewed weekly and cared for daily. The number of big hotels cared for by florists on yearly contracts is increasing. The plan is popular. There will not be a hotel worthy of the name without this system within the year.

James Weir has brought injunction proceedings to prevent the Bay Ridge local board from closing Kowenhoven lane. His application has revealed that Kowenhoven lane was established by a colonial enactment some 300 years ago. It was ordered closed recently by the local board. It appears that Weir's greenhouses and several other buildings stood not only on but partly in the lane.

The town is full of seedsmen this week. The convention will continue from Tuesday until Thursday, and in advance the general opinion is that the twenty-fifth anniversary of the society will exceed all others in attendance and importance. The New York seedsmen will tender the visitors a banquet at the Hotel Astor Wednesday evening.

There is no convention city that can vie with New York. We are hoping to entertain the S. A. F. again after Philadelphia and Cincinnati are through with it. The Philadelphia convention is only seven weeks away. We are beginning to talk about it, and our exhibitors are already securing space and selecting hotel conveniences.

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Intensely hot weather, a deluge of flowers, many of them of poor quality, and an indifferent demand, is the situation at present. Last week saw good calls for graduation and other occasions, but even with these, prices slumped to quite low figures on nearly all lines, the buyer rather than the seller fixing the values. Both roses and carnations are selling low, while quantities of both single and double peonies are also arriving. These latter flowers will be at their height about the end of the present week, but many growers north of Boston have not yet cut a bloom.

Quite a few hybrid roses appeared this week, but sell rather poorly. A week earlier they would have been in great demand for school graduations. Sweet peas are still plentiful, but like all other indoor flowers, plainly show the influence of the hot wave. In the way of miscellaneous flowers, pyrethrums, German and Spanish irises and other outdoor flowers are seen. Aquatics are being freely used for window decorations.

Peony Show.

The postponed dates, June 22 and 23, proved altogether too early for peonies and while there were several tables of them, a much more extensive showing will be made June 29 and 30. The majority of the classes were not competed for and will be held over for a week.

For collection of singles, William Whitman, M. Sullivan gardener, led with a fine table. George Hollis was second. For vase of blooms on long stems arranged in the society's large china vases, Mrs. J. L. Gardner, Wm. Thatcher gardener, was a good first, also taking third prize, E. L. Lewis being second. For twenty-five double white, Blue Hill Nurseries won with Festiva maxima, also being third with Whittleyi, Mrs. E. M. Gill second with Festiva maxima. The latter exhibitor had a splendid vase of Dorchester, which, however, contained only twenty-three flowers. Blue Hill Nurseries led for twenty-five pink with pretty blooms of Camille Calot. For twenty-five double red E. L. Lewis won with rubra triumphans; Blue Hill Nurseries second with Felix Crousse. For twenty-five any other color, J. W. Whitman was first, Blue Hill Nurseries second. For twelve blooms distinct, non-commercial growers, Mrs. J. L. Gardner was first, J. L. Blanchard, second.

For thirty vases herbaceous flowers, Blue Hill Nurseries took both first and second with a splendid assortment. Lychnis Flos-cuculi alba plena is a very desirable novelty. Æthionema grandiflora was admired by everyone, as were fine vases of the various hemerocallis, such as Dumortierii and Middendorffii. J. R. Clark & Co. had a display of sweet williams and herbaceous plants. F. J. Rea had a good collection of German iris, hemerocallis and other hardy plants. William Whitman had an extensive collection of double and single pyrethrums showing excellent culture. W. H. Heustis had a display of Rosa spinosissima and William Nicholson showed peonies. E. J. Shaylor had some seventy-five varieties of peonies, including some good French and English novelties.

Mrs. E. M. Gill had a good table of peonies, also a general assortment of cut flowers. T. D. Hatfield, gardener to W. Hunnewell, had pans of yellow chrysanthemums and George Hollis a table of German iris and other perennials. R. & J. Farquhar & Co. had an extensive display of German iris, pyrethrums, peonies, aquilegias, hemerocallis and other perennials, also a group of palms and bay trees. On a table were a number of the pretty Lobelia tenuior. Blue Hill Nurseries had a collection of forty-eight varieties of German iris.

The rose, strawberry and peony show on June 29 and 30 will probably fill all the exhibition halls. The date will be about right for hybrid perpetual roses and most of the double peonies. Strawberries would have been better at a later date.

Various Notes.

Lord & Burnham Co. will build three houses each 40x225 for the Lumsden Floral Co. in Belmont. There are at present three houses each 200 feet long on the place. Two 110 horse-power boilers will be installed and a number of other houses will be added later. The new firm will be ready for business in September and is already receiving applications for catalogues. Palms, araucarias, azaleas and other plants will be grown heavily. Large orders for these have already been placed in Belgium.

Robert Cameron had an extensive decoration at President Eliot's, of Harvard, for the class day exercises last week and his artistic grouping caused many favorable comments.

A delegation from the Gardeners' and Florists' Club visited the estate of Gen. S. M. Weld June 22 and was especially interested in his rock garden.

We regret to announce the sickness of J. A. Pettigrew. An operation for appendicitis was performed June 25. Mr. Pettigrew's host of friends hope for his speedy recovery.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club will hold a field day in the Boston park system on June 29. Members will start from Audubon road, to reach which Cypress street cars can be taken. A large delegation is expected.

E. J. Shaylor's new peonies are unusually fine this season and a large collection will be staged at Horticultural hall June 29.

Boston will celebrate old home week from July 28 to August 3. A free flower show at Horticultural hall for two or three days will be one feature of interest.

Peirce Bros. have a 200-foot house of a new seedling tomato from which they expect great things. Some bunches carry fourteen to sixteen fine fruits. It is similar to Comet in size and form.

Dorchester park, selected for the club picnic, is a capital location, easy of access from all points. Everything points to a record breaking attendance July 25.

Prof. C. S. Sargent threw open his grounds to the public June 22 and 23 and thousands availed themselves of the opportunity to view the fine collection of azaleas, rhododendrons and other flowering plants.

The garden committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society has been invited to visit the estate of C. W. Parker, of Marblehead, June 27.

W. N. CRAIG.

COLUMBUS, OHIO.

The Market.

The weather has made a jump right into summer. The past fortnight has been unusually lively for so late in the season, as regards over-the-counter cash trade; and when we add to this the June wedding decorations and many elaborate floral arrangements for school commencements, a satisfactory total for the month has resulted. Both greenhouse flowers and hardy stock are now in large supply.

Various Notes.

The Columbus Florists' Club held its annual rose and strawberry show the afternoon and evening of June 11, in the Brent building headquarters. The committee on roses, consisting of Messrs. Reichert, Ackerman and Hills, awarded first prize to James McKellar for Uncle John, second to I. D. Siebert for Golden Gate, and third to Sherman F. Stephens for Bride. Besides these prize displays, the Fifth Avenue Floral Co., the Clover Hill Greenhouses, and Graff Bros. all entered fine collections. On strawberries, there were more than twenty competitors for the prizes. The judges, Messrs. Metzmaier, Wedemeyer and Williams, gave first prize to William F. Metzmaier, second to John Brust, and third to George Bauman.

At the last meeting of the Florists' Club, the following awards for the plants and flowers exhibited at the meetings during the season were made: To I. D. Siebert, for a total of 123 points, $5; to Robert A. Currie, with eighty-three points, $3, and to Sherman F. Stephens, with sixty points, $2.

Tickets are out for the annual picnic of the club at Buckeye lake. It is expected by the committee that at least 200 will attend.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. has just closed perhaps the best plant season the firm has ever had. In geraniums alone over 25,000, in twenty or more popular varieties, have been disposed of.

The closing of the cemeteries to Sunday burials, while it has lessened the labor for some of the cemetery employees, has greatly increased the Sunday labor of the florists. It would not surprise the writer if it caused an even more extensive Sunday opening of floral establishments than at present.

The Clover Hill Greenhouses, being situated at the entrance of Green Lawn cemetery, do an ever increasing business in funeral flowers and the taking care of cemetery lots. On Sundays, especially, they do an enormous trade in bouquets of mixed flowers at 50 cents to $1 each, seemingly every visitor buying.

Mrs. E. M. Krauss is much pleased with her new location at 109 South High street, for, as expected, she feels already the extra business that moving into the so-called shopping district was sure to bring.

John R. Hellenthal, in his two large houses, besides roses and carnations, grows a great variety of bedding stock. At a recent visit the writer's attention was drawn to a fine block of Cowee's gladioli.

The Columbus Floral Co., although so recently established, is doing a good business at 187 South High street.

The bedding plant sales, at the stands in the market district, are about over for the season. The season has been much strung out, but on the whole quite satisfactory. ZERO.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Now we know we are into summer. There is a glut of stock of all kinds, and with so much good stock going to waste it discourages the most hardened. Stock is being bought and sold so cheaply that even the street men are complaining that they cannot make expenses.

The retailers continue to have a few weddings and commencements, but outside of that and funeral trade, there is nothing doing, as the small buyers quit when the weather gets hot.

Various Notes.

Phil Langhans, of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., has cut out summer resorts this year. He has built a bungalow in the woods on his farm at Allison Park and will move there for the summer. W. A. Clarke, of the same firm, with his wife, goes away for a three weeks' pilgrimage with No. 1 Commandery, Knights Templar, attending the conclave at Saratoga, N. Y., then through Canada and around the coast home. Hoo-Hoo.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—Supt. Cowell, of South park, says that the factories in the neighborhood of the park have become so numerous, and have caused so smoky a condition of the atmosphere, that it is now impossible for the plants under his care to thrive. He fears, therefore, that the city's greenhouses and propagating house, which are now located in the park, must soon be removed, though it will be difficult to find a new location that will not be open to the same objections as the present one.

"THE Cinch Bug" is the title of the latest entomological bulletin of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. It is by F. M. Webster.

KEEP the weeds and the grass cut around the greenhouses and save work; a tangled mat of grass and weeds is a splendid breeding place for all sorts of insect troubles.

Special Notice Fourth of July

Because the Glorious Fourth, when every one celebrates, falls on Thursday, the day the Review usually is mailed, next week's edition will go to press one day earlier than usual—on Tuesday instead of Wednesday.

Advertisers and correspondents will please take "Special Notice."

Results bring advertising.
The REVIEW brings results.

E. C. LUDWIG, Allegheny, Pa., keeps his retail store open all night.

CELEBRATE the Fourth by getting a printed letter-head—one that looks like business.

IT is asserted that the price of box-board is going up and that cut flower boxes will be higher as a consequence.

THIS season to date has been exceptionally favorable for those who are growing their carnations under glass all summer instead of planting them out. The plants indoors are far ahead of those in the fields.

WITH an early frost to cut off the outdoor flowers, the early mums should do better than ever before next fall, for a good crop of carnations will be late unless the growing weather is exceptionally favorable all through July.

THE United States Express Co. has notified the Interstate Commerce Commission that it has complied with the order of the commission in the case of the Society of American Florists and reduced its rates on cut flowers to New York City.

THE daily papers are reporting that the Northwestern railroad will after this season discontinue planting flower beds on the station lawns as a retaliation against the 2-cent fare bills! But it isn't true. Simply less soft-wooded stock will be used, and more shrubs, in accordance with the general trend of the times in railroad gardening.

PLANT BED CLOTH.

To what extent can plant bed cloth be used in spring, summer, fall or winter? J. L. J.

Plant bed cloths have two special uses, first to protect from frost, second to protect from the sun's rays. In spring they are invaluable for covering batches of plants which are a little tender and which, having no glass protection, might otherwise be frozen during a sudden and late cold spell. In summer they are ideal for protecting newly sown seed of biennials and perennials during bright sunshine, especially prior to germination; also for giving shade to such greenhouse plants as gloxinias, tydas, tuberous begonias, achimenes and ges-neras, none of which will withstand the full sun's rays. Primulas, calceolarias, cyclamen and cinerarias are all benefited by such shading. In fall the cloths are still useful for warding off frost and giving some shade, still needed by shade-loving plants. They are not much needed in winter, but in the case of severe weather would assist in keeping up warmth in greenhouses, were they tacked along the cold and windy side.

For covering young evergreens they are a good deal used, not only unrooted cuttings, but rooted ones and seedlings which need some covering from our hot summer sun until of sufficient size to go into nursery rows.

FLORICULTURAL CRIME.

In the twentieth century we have become so sophisticated as to dye real flowers, and horrible possibilities are opened up by the announcement that even the innocent daffodil is being treated in this fashion and offered for sale in London shops in a flaming scarlet tint. Once begin a horticultural career of crime, and where will the thing end?—Ladies' Pictorial.

THE READERS' CORNER.

To Drive Rats Away.

I have a suggestion to make in connection with the subject discussed in last week's REVIEW, under the heading, "To Destroy Rats." In years past I have used oil of peppermint with good success. Dropped in their runs and where they have holes, it drives them away. The process may have to be repeated after a time, but usually they remain away. Sometimes they get under floors in buildings; then I have bored holes in several places and put a few drops down, and they have disappeared.

L. C. PORTER.

FIRE INSURANCE.

Where can I get insurance on my greenhouses and at what rate? I would like to insure in some good company, but most of the companies refuse greenhouse business.

W. T. R.

Consult your local agents. Practically all companies are guided by membership in the board of underwriters having jurisdiction over any given territory in which they operate. Ask your agent to show the rules of the board; they doubtless will tell you why it is you cannot get insurance, and they may show how, by making a few changes, you can make your place a fair risk. The old days, when greenhouses were noninsurable, are passing. With modern construction and by the observance of ordinary safeguards in locating and building the boilerhouse, most boards of underwriters accept greenhouse risks. Of course the rate varies with the character of the houses and the location as regards fire protection.

PROPHETSTOWN, ILL.—George Hilger has completed a 50-foot addition to his vegetable house.

EDWARDSVILLE, ILL.—J. F. Ammann is adding 10,000 feet of glass this season, giving him a total of 40,000 feet, devoted principally to roses and carnations for the St. Louis market, where they are handled by C. A. Kuehn.

AMERICAN BEAUTIES

Our Beauties are easily the best in this market and we believe it will be difficult to find their equal anywhere. They are in every way as good as our famous crop last summer—and most Beauty buyers know what that means.

PEONIES

The favorite flower in its season. Big show for little money. We have large supplies. White, pink; best sorts, cut right, bunched right, by the oldest and most experienced shipper. No one can give you better satisfaction on Peonies.

FERNS

We are now receiving daily shipments of new ferns of good quality and can supply on all orders. $2.00 per 1000.

Sweet Peas

One of our specialties on which no other house can compete, for abundance of supply, high quality of stock, wide range of colors.

Kaiserins

Good crop of fancy Kaiserin, best summer rose. Also heavy cuts of other roses; quality as good as the market affords.

VALLEY

Choice valley always on hand; you can wire us any day in the year and be sure of getting any reasonable quantity by next train.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The week of June 17 to 22 has gone on record as the poorest this market has seen in many months. The demand was light and the supplies of stock something enormous, with the result that only a small part of the daily receipts realized anything like quoted prices and the waste was something sad to contemplate.

This week shows some change for the better. Many growers have come to realize that such poor stock as their worn out plants are now producing is hardly worth the time it takes to cut it, and that energies might much better be directed toward preparations for next season. The result is that receipts at the first of this week were not more than half what they were for the same period a week ago. Quality is nothing to brag about, except with those growers who are producing stock especially for summer cutting. A number of the big growers now provide for the demand which usually follows throwing out and replanting in early summer. These houses are just coming into crop and the stock is good. It brings fair prices.

The receipts of Beauties are considerably above the market requirements, but much of the stock has lost its color through the fierce sun of the last week and many open flowers are going to the sidewalk merchants at their own prices. They do not care to handle other roses in quantity. Outside of some good Kaiserin, Richmond and Chatenay are the best roses now received, though Killarney withstands the heat better than any.

Good carnations are hard to find. The hot, damp weather has softened the stock until it goes to sleep at the slightest provocation. Colored sorts are faded badly. There are still large supplies of carnations, the growers of these seeming not so ready as the rose growers to throw out the old stock. Probably it is because they foresee that young stock will not be ready for benching until later than usual.

The last week has seen the height of the peony season and naturally has affected the market in all departments. Sweet peas are abundant and not so good quality as usual. Most of them still are from under glass, but in a few days there will be large receipts of outdoor peas. Longiflorum lilies are less plentiful and callas practically out of the market. A few water lilies are received. Valley is abundant, the weddings being practically over. The same factor has lessened the call for green goods. Fancy ferns are now abundant and prices down to $2 per thousand.

Most of the wholesalers anticipate a stronger market in a few days, but encourage preparations for next season.

In accordance with the usual custom, practically all the wholesale houses in the Chicago market will close at 5 p. m. during July and August.

Peonies.

The local crop of peonies is practically at an end, having passed off in record time because of the hot weather in the last week. The largest growers say they cut their crop in five days. The peonies now being received are mostly from Minnesota.

While peonies have been jobbed off at low prices in the last week, the receipts are not so large as had been anticipated. A surprising proportion of the local plants are blind and many of the buds are soft, containing nothing worth cutting. While dozens of nurserymen and other growers who have not heretofore shipped to this market, each contributed his quota, still the quantity in cold storage this year is not much greater than last season. Booth's storage house reports having only one lot in storage. The Western Cold Storage Co. has rather more than ever before. There is fear expressed in certain quarters that the peonies will not keep well, but some fine stock has gone in and it looks as though there would be peonies for a month or six weeks to come. With a prospect of few good roses, no carnations, and asters and other outdoor stock later than ever, the holders of good peonies look for a satisfactory market through July.

A Tagging Machine.

In this day of labor-saving devices, the latest invention to be adopted by a number of the wholesalers is the Hotchkiss automatic tagging machine. It is like the stapling machines used by attorneys for fastening legal documents together; only the Hotchkiss device is used to staple tags onto the packing cases. It attaches them in an instant and holds them securely. J. B. Crofoot, Milwaukee, has supplied the wholesalers.

Canger's Removal.

John Gormley has retired from the firm of Canger & Gormley, but the firm name will remain the same. John Canger has removed from 27 State street to 29 State street, where the store is much larger and he has facilities more in keeping with the rapid increase in the business, for he says the season just closing has been an exceptionally good one so far as he is concerned.

Jackson Boulevard.

Jackson boulevard is the great automobile thoroughfare from the west to the south side and thousands of good flower buyers pass its flower stores each day. Most westerly on the avenue, but still downtown, is J. L. Raske, who has an attractive store at the entrance to Tom Jones' chop house. It is an excellent location for transient trade. He still maintains the stand in the Board of Trade, little more than across the street.

Opposite the Great Northern hotel is the store of Hattie E. Carlson. She is a hard worker and her efforts to please her customers are steadily adding to her trade.

At the next corner, Plymouth place, is the Eaton Flower Store, where the personal following of the Eatons, mother and daughter, made a good start. After a year in business they express themselves as well pleased.

In the Railway Exchange Fleischman has taken down the partition between the stores at No. 3 and No. 5. It will take some weeks to complete the alterations, but the store will then be more than double its original size and decorated more lavishly than any other in the city.

The Fall Premiums.

The Horticultural Society of Chicago has issued the preliminary list of premiums for its exhibition to be held at the Coliseum October 31 to November 6. The list is substantially as in previous years, but the earliness of the date prompted the addition of a number of classes for annuals and perennials from the open ground. There also is a class for the best collection of vegetables and another for the best collection of fruits. Those wishing copies of the lists may obtain them by addressing E. A. Kanst, assistant secretary, 5700 Cottage Grove avenue, Chicago.

The Picnic.

The committee of the Florists' Club has chosen Sunday, July 21, as the date of the annual club picnic. It will be held at Morton Grove.

John Evert has had a good season with cucumbers, but is now throwing out the plants to make room for the last of his chrysanthemums, which he intends to have in the market early in the autumn.

Peter Reinberg, who is a member of the council committee considering the telephone ordinance, is standing fast in the interest of the public, but he with three others are against seven who favor the company's interests. They are, however, securing some concession for the people.

H. R. Hughes, on West Van Buren street, has a special Fourth of July window display, like all his efforts in this line, considerably out of the ordinary. He finds attention given to the window display is well repaid.

J. W. Niessen, whose store is at 753

West Forty-seventh street, is only a step from an elevated station and every passenger on the elevated sees his greenhouse on the roof. Mr. Niessen is taking advantage of these facts by advertising along the "L," asking for telephone orders.

J. D. Thompson, of Joliet, says he has planted most of his carnations indoors and that the plants are far ahead of those in the field. He looks to make up in the fall more than he may have lost by throwing out his stock while the market was still good.

There was an Indiana festival at Farson's in Oak Park June 22 at which large quantities of roses were used, supplied by the New Castle growers.

It is reported that the Selfridge collection of orchids loaned to Lincoln park really is a gift.

will be two feet higher than the old ones. They will change the heating from hot water to steam.

Bassett & Washburn say they are pushing replanting as rapidly as the scarcity of men will permit.

Some of the wholesalers are now shipping carnations with a layer of damp sphagnum moss between each layer of stems.

The Poehlmann Bros. Co. is reglazing seven of the houses in the August Poehlmann plant. The force is now giving its special attention to getting the old soil out of the benches and the new soil into them. It is no child's play to empty houses 600 feet long, and many of them.

Peter Reinberg has bought the Frank Schneider greenhouses at Western and Ainslie avenues. They were devoted to vegetables. Mr. Reinberg will remove the greenhouses to adjoin the new range he is putting up on the farm.

Sam Pieser, formerly a retail florist on North Clark street, and a brother of the Piesers, of the Kennicott Bros. Co., is now representing the Royal Co., cigar importers, next to Hauswirth's new store on Michigan avenue.

The Benthey-Coatsworth Co. is putting in a shaft from the ice-box to the open air, to get a free circulation, especially for the carnations. L. Coatsworth returned last week from New Castle and says the young stock looks better than it ever did before at this date.

Klehm's Nurseries has adopted a somewhat novel procedure in the marketing of its peonies. Printed postal-cards have been sent to a large number of buyers advising that the Klehm peonies are on sale at Kennicott's and at Percy Jones', giving the consignor's number, prices, and admonishing the buyer to watch his tickets to see that he gets the Klehm number.

Sinner Bros. have completed planting one house of chrysanthemums.

N. C. Moore & Co. say they are much disappointed in their peony crop this year. Plants are six years old, but will give only one-eighth as many flowers as last year because so many shoots are blind. They are disposed to sell off the peony stock and devote the land to other purposes.

George Harrer, president of the village board of Morton Grove, when he is not spreading special assessments on his neighbors' property, is selling them life insurance or real estate. But he has found time from his other duties in the last three weeks to repair the dam-

Joseph Foerster has become one of the converts to Killarney. At first he did not have a high opinion of this rose, but he says it steadily has been improving. It is holding its color much better than any other variety.

DETROIT.

The Market.

With the closing of schools the florists' busy season is practically at an end; at least this is the case with the stores in the large cities. Naturally there was a big demand for stock last week for the closing exercises at the schools and colleges. Roses, especially, were in big demand, while sweet peas were a good second. Carnations were used to some extent, but not nearly enough to relieve the glut that has been piling up since the warm weather commenced.

The quality of the roses is good. Maids are of nice color, but rather small flowers. Kaiserin is seen only in small lots so far. Killarney and La Detroit are fine, the latter especially. Good roses can be bought for 3 cents to 5 cents, although the price runs up to 7 cents and 8 cents for fancy stock.

So far the heat has had but little effect on the quality of carnations, but it has had its effect upon the quantity. The market is simply flooded. Enchantress, especially, is piling up by the thousands. White is really the only color that remains fairly well cleaned up, and then those of doubtful freshness are thrown aside. The price ranges from 1 cent to 2½ cents, to say nothing of what the fakers get them for.Sweet peas are showing the effects of the heat; the color is off and the lower flowers are usually bad; many thousands are being disposed of, but, despite this demand, one-half are consigned to the rubbish heap.Peonies are not in much demand.

Many fine blooms are shipped in every day, but the bulk of them stand around in the way for several days and then—well, it is a sad story. The price ranges from 50 cents to 75 cents per dozen.A great many lilies are arriving, and from all appearances these are commencing to pile up. Of course, a good rush of funeral work would tend to clean them up. Snapdragon, stocks, etc., are right in line with the rest of the stock.
Smilax and other greens are plentiful.
Ferns are soft and not overplentiful.

Various Notes.

The last meeting of the Detroit Florists' Club brought forth only a small attendance as compared with that of previous meetings. It being an extremely hot evening, but little business was transacted. An outing, to take place the latter part of July, was planned.
Boise Blanc was again chosen. The date will be announced later. The program calls for a patriotic smoker for the evening of July 3, but this meeting has been cut out.There is no reason why several Detroit retailers—yes, legitimate retailers —should sell carnations at from 15 cents to 20 cents per dozen. If they have a cheap class of customers, they have only themselves to blame. Good customers prefer to deal where prices are only reasonably low, as they feel there must be something wrong with the goods when the price is so far below that of most of the reputable stores. The present glut will not last forever, and then Mr.
Cutprice will find it a hard matter to procure even a reasonable price for his stock. Let the fakers dispose of the glut.Chas. Keller is tearing down four old

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

Business is bad, just as bad as the most unhappy croaker could desire. There are no redeeming points, and nothing cheerful that can be said about the situation. Perhaps it can be best summed up in the words of two of our brightest wholesalers. One remarked sententiously that he guessed "the growers will throw out their plants when they receive last week's returns." The other said, "We are moving flowers—on the dump." There may be, however, readers who desire to know a little more specifically just what occurred from June 20 to 26. For their benefit, be it known, that there was a tremendous influx of flowers; that the quality deteriorated, Bridesmaids and carnations suffering especially; that for these flowers there was little or no demand, with even the street men taking them gingerly.

Quotations on the price list have not been materially changed, because the best flowers, those of really fine quality fit to ship or to offer a critical customer, bring the figures named. Many, many flowers, however, bring absolutely nothing. Beauties have sold about as well as anything. Sweet peas are of splendid quality, but so enormously prolific that one of our most experienced salesmen said he had never seen so many before in his life, at one time. The local crop of peonies is nearly over. We can truly say, "Peonies to the right of us, peonies to the left of us, peonies behind us, backward they fall." The cold storage flowers will, however, be in evidence for some time.

Science of Bouquet Making.

A friend sends me a clipping from the Literary Digest, entitled, "The Science of Bouquet Making," which deals with the blending of odors in cut flower work. It is so interesting that I am forwarding it to the editor in hopes that it may be published in an early issue.

Thos. J. Oberlin, Sinking Spring, Pa., will speak before the Florists' Club in Horticultural hall, on Tuesday, July 8, at 8 p. m., subject, "The Redemption of

H. Bayersdorfer and Mrs. Bayersdorfer will sail from Antwerp for home on the steamer Kroonland, Saturday, June 29.

J. Stern returned home last week from a business trip to England, France, Holland and Belgium. Mr. Stern has brought many novelties with him which he says are the best so far.

John F. Andre, Doylestown, Pa., will devote his entire place to Bride, Maid and Killarney this season. Mr. Andre, who has his planting well under way, has just installed a new 100 horse-power boiler with 50-foot brick stack. The walls of the boiler-pit are concrete, making them ideally fireproof.

They are also growing quite a few Hill, Nutt, Trego, Beate Poitevine, Telegraph and Ricard.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Trade has held up pretty well, but from now on the season is practically settled and the away-up society folks are leaving the city to escape the hot summer months, so there will be nothing from them until next fall and things will be rather dull with the uptown florists. The downtown retailers have a little more chance from transient trade, which is practically unknown uptown. A number of good funeral designs were made up last week and these, with the end of the school closings, made a good, profitable ending of the season.

The wholesalers are still overstocked with cut flowers of all kinds, and especially so with sweet peas, which have been and are yet a great glut, selling in large lots at from 50 cents to $1 per thousand. Roses, too, have been overabundant, but not in the extra fancy grades. White carnations had a good call all last week, but the colored stock went begging and mostly was dumped. Candidum lilies came in heavily, but cleaned up well for funeral work. Lily of the valley is still good, but slow sale. Outdoor stock is now coming in rapidly, but the demand is not good.

Fancy ferns are again in the market, to take the place of the dagger ferns.

Beginning July 1 the wholesale houses will close at 5 p. m. for two months.

Various Notes.

J. J. Nussbaumer, of San Angelo, Tex., in company with C. A. Kuehn, visited Fred Ammann's place, at Edwardsville, last week.

W. E. Robinson, head of the Chair of Rocks park, has designed a novel floral revolving globe which is said to contain 31,500 plants and which shows each hemisphere perfectly and revolves on its axis. It required the work of two men for nine days to build the globe and set the plants. It stands fourteen feet high and is ten feet in diameter. Five different varieties of alternantheras were used. These were raised at the water works greenhouses. The design is attracting a great deal of attention from the visitors to the park.

Some of the employees at the wholesale houses will take their vacations next month. Fred Alves, of Angermueller's, will leave next week for Denver. All the bosses will take theirs in August, when they attend the S. A. F. convention at Philadelphia.

W. C. Smith & Co. are receiving many fine candidum lilies from Kirkwood, which have been selling well.

Miss Bell Miller, of Springfield, continues to send to Kuehn each morning a fine lot of Carnot and Kaiserin roses.

The club members should not forget the smoker, Saturday evening, June 29, in Hibernian hall, 3619 Finney avenue. The trustees say those who fail to come will miss a great treat. Some of our suburban members have made arrangements to remain in the city over night, as the best part of the program will not begin until after 12 o'clock. J. J. B.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., Henry W. Wood, Richmond, Va.; First Vice-Pres., Charles Burge, Toledo, O.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 25th annual meeting will be held at New York City, June 25 to 27, 1907.

THE crop of Seven-top turnip is the lightest in years.

THE next fortnight will be the critical period with the pea crops.

THE French Roman hyacinths will cost five to eight per cent more than last year.

THE pea prospects possibly are not so poor as many crop reporters have predicted. Each report in the last week has been more optimistic than the preceding.

LATER reports as to the prospects for a crop of onion seed in California, following the pessimistic reports just after the spring freshet, are all of a more favorable nature.

JOHN A. SALZER SEED CO., La Crosse, Wis., is to be congratulated, not alone for the increase in its 1907 business, but for the "good trade of April, May and June," which it reports.

ALTHOUGH Paper Whites in France generally have been bought at a shade under last year's prices, most of the American dealers will reprint last year's prices in their fall bulb lists.

THE REVIEW published, in its Seed Trade Department, February 16, 1905, page 714, the original history of the onion set industry at Chicago, a story that has been reprinted in many of the trade periodicals in Europe and which is now finding its way back to the columns of the American horticultural press.

SEED TRADE CONVENTION.

First Day at New York.

NEW YORK, June 25.—The American Seed Trade Association is celebrating its twenty-fifth anniversary here this week, the opening session of the convention having been held at the Hotel Astor this morning. The members are enthusiastic and the weather comfortable. The grass-seed dealers are, proportionately to their number, better represented than any other department of the trade. Philadelphia was not in evidence at the first day's session. The firms, outside of New York city, represented at the opening were:

Adams, T. Lee, Kansas City, Mo.

The address of welcome was by Acting Mayor McGown. It was followed by the address of President Henry W. Wood, whose paper was one of the most thoughtful the association ever has listened to. It was full of important suggestions for the welfare of the seed trade and the association.

By-laws Amended.

In executive session the annual dues were advanced to $10 and the by-laws changed to require recommendations for membership to be approved by a two-thirds vote of all the members present in addition to being approved by the membership committee.

Albert McCullough, Cincinnati, chair-

Agricultural Department is doing for the seed trade. An interesting point in his address was that the department has hybridized a head lettuce adapted for the south and east, and a leaf lettuce for the west, which he thinks will in many ways outclass any that we now have.

F. W. Bruggerhof's paper, "Reminiscences of the Seed Trade," was read by Secretary Kendel. Regret was expressed that Mr. Bruggerhof could not be present, as his personality, added to his sixty years' experience in the seed business, would have been of itself a pleasure.

S. F. Willard's paper, "The History of the American Seed Trade Association," was given much attention when being read. He prefaced his paper by stating that he was able to locate, among those present, only five of the original promoters of the association, and that in talking with Mr. Meggat recently he was told that the main reason for starting the association was to adopt a uniform war-man of the committee on seed adulteration, made an exhaustive report covering the work of the committee in the last year. It was thought best to continue the committee for another year, as the matter of adulteration, especially to the grass-seed men, is one of the most important problems now up for solution. A generally better feeling between the grass-seed dealers and the government officials was apparent, each appearing to recognize the difficulties of the position of the other.

Papers Read.

Professor B. T. Galloway told what the warranty clause that would be a protection to the members of the association when selling seeds.

This matter of a warranty clause that will properly protect the man who sells seeds against the purchaser who may wish to take advantage of the failure of seeds to make a good crop under adverse conditions, will be given particular attention at this convention. (In this connection the decision in the Brinker case, published in this issue, will be of interest.)

At the close of the Tuesday afternoon session it appeared that the printed program will be closely followed for the two remaining days.

Entertainment.

The local entertainment committee, of which Alex Forbes is chairman, is leaving nothing undone to make the visiting seedsmen and their guests comfortable. Tuesday night the freedom of the roof garden of Hotel Astor is theirs by invitation of the locals. Wednesday evening a banquet will be given them at the Hotel Astor and much else in the way of entertainment has been provided for.

NEW YORK, June 26.—Attendance is much increased today. A committee was appointed to revise the code. McFarland's paper on catalogues was fine and created hot discussion.

BRINKER CASE DECIDED.

Non-warranty is Sustained.

The Brinker non-warranty case, at Cleveland, with which most seedsmen are familiar, on second trial has been decided in favor of the seedsman.

In February, 1903, S. H. Calhoun was a gardener in the vicinity of Cleveland and William Brinker was a seedsman doing business in that city. About that date Calhoun went to Brinker's store and asked for four pounds of Mammoth Golden Yellow Bush squash seed, and for two pounds of Long Island Beauty Nutmeg melon seed. Mr. Brinker gave Calhoun four one-pound packages of the first named seed with the name asked for printed upon the package, and also gave two pounds of the last named seed with the name asked for printed upon the package. When Calhoun asked for squash seed of the named variety, the seedsman said that he had it; that it had been raised for him; that it was what the plaintiff wanted. The seeds were delivered to the gardener and the appearance was the same as that of the seeds asked for. Mr. Calhoun, a gardener of forty years' experience, could not perceive that they were not the seeds asked for. The seeds were planted and grew, but produced a different squash from that asked for and from that named upon the boxes in which the seeds were contained. Mr. Calhoun sought to recover from the seedsman the loss which he suffered by reason of the fact that the squash that grew was inferior to that of which he thought he was buying the seeds. These are the facts as reviewed by the Court in the second trial. His ruling on defendant's motion to direct a verdict for defendant is as follows:

The Court's Ruling.

For the sake of brevity I shall deal only with the squash seed, as whatever ruling the Court makes as to it must also apply to the melon seed.

Printed Name Not a Warranty.

First, the general proposition, does a seedsman who gives a package marked with the name of the variety asked for, warrant that from these seeds there will grow, if they grow at all, that variety? It seems to me that the law may be different in the case of a seedsman in a large city selling and delivering seeds from what it is where the seeds are bought from a farmer or a gardener who sells what he has grown. Without evidence on the subject, a court must not be blind to the ordinary facts of life, and the facts about the business of a seedsman in a large city are, that he handles chiefly goods which he gets from others, some of them from foreign countries. The evidence in this case is explicit that the defendant did not himself produce these seeds. He said to plaintiff, "They were raised for me," and while it is not of much or any importance in this case, it might in some cases be important to determine whether the seeds were sold by a person in the commercial business of selling seeds, or by a gardener or a farmer selling that which he himself produced. The rule manifestly must be different. If one goes to a farmer and asks him for certain seeds, the natural inference, the one which the producer has a right to draw, is that the seeds furnished are those which the farmer himself has taken from the squash, and the case would be different from that of a man who gets his material, perhaps in carload lots, from foreign states and foreign countries.

Facts of Vegetable Life.

Passing from the character of defendant's business and the manner in which he handles seeds, we come to the subject of the seeds themselves. This is the determining thing in this case. And here we must recognize the facts of vegetable life, even without any evidence. We all know that no human being can take those seeds that were sold and tell what variety of the species they belong to until the fruit is ripened. We know that farmers in the spring, in order to know whether or not seed will grow, put some of it in water to see whether or not it will germinate or sprout, as they call it. That is the sort of subject-matter that is being dealt with here. It is something of which the life and character is hidden and in mystery.

No amount of diligence on the part of any of us would enable us to take these seeds as they were brought into the courtroom yesterday and tell what they would produce. In this case a special variety of squash seed was asked for.

We all know that varieties are not permanently fixed qualities; that under different conditions of soil and climate they quickly change if not carefully protected against that. We know, for instance, that if a seed is planted in one lot and in a nearby lot there be a different variety of the same species, the insects will fly from one to the other and carry the pollen from one to the other; and while one variety is planted a different variety is produced. Take the ordinary sweet corn that is used for the table and plant it near a field of common yellow corn and the first season the sweet corn will deteriorate by the transmission of the pollen, by insects or by the wind, from the other field.

Conversation Does Not Alter Rights.

Considering the nature of this man's business, considering the nature of the subject-matter with which he was dealing, it seems clear that if all that had been done were what I have thus far enumerated, this court is of opinion there would be no warranty that the product would be Mammoth Golden Yellow Bush squash. The court is also of the opinion that the conversation related in the store does not alter the rights of the parties. What is related to have been said by defendant would amount only to the printing on the box. A certain variety was asked for, and he said in substance, "I have it," that is substantially all there was of it, and so I think the parties stand in this case in the position of customer and seedsman, who, when a certain variety of seed is asked for, hands it out with the name printed upon the package, and I am of the opinion that a seedsman so doing does not warrant those seeds. To hold that he does would make his business a perilous one. If a seedsman were held under these conditions to warrant that when a person asks him for Mammoth Golden Yellow Bush squash that is what will be produced when the harvest comes, then this business is one of excessive risks. No one would undertake the perils of a business of that kind if that were the rule.

Non-warranty on Packages.

I have thus far stated this case most favorably to the plaintiff. The words Mammoth Golden Yellow Bush squash were not the only words upon the boxes containing these seeds. There was also this printed matter: "We use all possible care and precaution to have our seeds pure and simple, but we do not in any case warrant or guarantee them. If the purchaser does not accept them on these conditions they must be returned at once."

I am of the opinion that there was a contract in writing between these parties. The whole terms of this transaction were set out there. The dealer did not simply say, "Here is Mammoth Golden Yellow Bush squash seed." The plaintiff can not pick out the words of that printed matter that are favorable to himself, but must accept them all. If the evidence sought to be introduced were that the defendant expressly said in words at that time, "I warrant that these seeds are such as they are marked," this ought to be excluded from the evidence. There is a contract in writing between these parties. It can not be added to or contradicted by oral evidence. Therefore, in this view of the case, the court would grant the motion to direct a verdict for defendant.

Brinker's Warranty.

In the third place, it appears that plaintiff and his son went to defendant's store with a list of seeds which the son obtained from the defendant's catalogue of seeds. On page 2 of defendant's catalogue, near the top thereof, is some printed matter in large type and in heavy-faced letters. The plaintiff says he does not remember whether or not he ever read it; but it is admitted that on the former trial of this case he said he probably had read it. I think the only proper finding from that state of evidence is that he did read it, and it reads thus: "Warranty: We warrant that all seeds sold by us shall prove to be as represented to this extent, that should they prove otherwise we will replace them or send other seeds of the same value." These seeds were bought under a contract of which this is a part. The parties thereby in that contract liquidated their damages. They stipulated that if the seeds were not as represented the defendant would return what had been paid for them; that is the substance of it. The undisputed evidence is that nothing has ever been paid for the seeds in question and therefore the parties having made a contract liquidating their damages at the price of the seeds, and the seeds never having been paid for, the damage in this case is nothing.

Summary.

To re-state in the inverse order: In the first place this contract in the catalogue stipulated what the damage of the plaintiff shall be, and it stipulates the damages to be the value of the seeds, and the seeds not having been paid for, the damage is nothing. In the second place, the entire printed matter on this package constitutes a written contract between the parties and by that contract the plaintiff was expressly, clearly told that there was no warranty of these seeds. In the third place and as a general rule of law, if a person goes into a seed store and asks for a variety of a species of seeds and they are given to him without comment, the name printed on the package in which they are contained, there is no warranty whatever. I take it the rule that this defendant, like every other person who deals with his fellows, must exercise ordinary care to see that that which he ostensibly sells is that thing. There is no evidence in this case that the defendant failed to exercise ordinary care. Therefore, gentlemen of the jury, all questions of fact are for you and all questions of law are for the court, and whether or not there is any evidence is a question of law and not a question of fact.

The court directs you to bring in a verdict for defendant.

MR. BRUGGERHOF'S RETROSPECT.

[The reminiscences of F. W. Bruggerhof, as presented before the American Seed Trade Association at its convention at New York.]

I cannot let pass an opportunity like the present, when I am called upon to relate the reminiscences of sixty years in the seed trade, to first call your attention to part of an extraordinary advertisement which was copied from the New York Commercial Advertiser by the Boston Courier in 1845. It shows clearly that the reminiscences of that advertiser, Grant Thorburn, are much more curious and interesting than mine, since they date back to 1799, at a time when he was practically the only seller of seeds in this city. His advertisement goes on to say that he started with three pots of geraniums, a monthly rose and $15 worth of seeds, and he makes the further statement that the seeds grew until they filled the whole continent; the rose blossomed until it spread into a tree and the little birds formed their nests under its branches.

It was then, before my time, that a host of pretenders came boasting into this country, and among them was William Cobbett, who arrived with an idea that all republics were humbugs, and so offensive did he become to good Americans that he was obliged to flee to England, whence he returned as a radical democrat, to open a seed store at 62

PANSIES

Scotch and English PANSIES are noted all the world over for their excellence. We have unique selections.

The flowers are large, superb in color and grand in substance, and yearly selected and improved.

We do not recommend the flimsy Trimardeau Pansies—size alone is not beauty.

Try a small packet of each of the following, and you will order largely another season: COVENT GARDEN SUPERB STRAIN and PRIZE ENGLISH EXHIBITION, each, $1.50 per doz. packets; $4.50 per oz.

These are our Noted Special Strains, but we also keep nearly every other variety in commerce.

TRY also our very special, carefully selected strains of Primula Sinensis Fimbriata (all var., including the giant strains); Primula Stel- lata, all varieties; Calceolaria and Cineraria, very best market strains; Carnations, best and choicest stage and Marguerite varieties; Cyclamen Persicum, all varieties, including new color; Gloxinias, etc.

PETER BROWN, PANSY SEED GROWER 124 Ruby St., Lancaster, Pa.

as you now know, dated from 1847, at which time rutabaga seed, according to a catalogue of that date, did not sell at $1 per pound, but rather at 12½ cents an ounce, at which price some sixteen varieties of turnips were quoted. The item of black pigs does not appear on our lists, and I am sure they were not considered seeds in those days. In that year, 1847, and for several years thereafter the seed trade in respect to flower and garden seeds was insignificant in proportions through all of this country, and my records show that the actual seedsmen did not exceed in number fifteen or sixteen, and those were all of modest pretensions and scattered between the cities of New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Rochester, Boston, Cincinnati, New Orleans and St. Louis. Many garden seeds were grown, however, in Wethersfield, Conn., as well as in Lebanon, N. Y., and vicinity. These latter were grown by the Shakers. In the small towns garden seeds were sold principally by druggists, hardware merchants and grocers.

Probably many of you are of the opinion that in those bygone days the varieties of different classes of seeds were small, but such really is not the case, and you will be surprised to find that in the catalogue of Grant Thorburn, in 1822, there are quoted some nine varieties of snap beans, and among them you will see Six Weeks, White Kidney and Refugee. Now, as regards pole beans: They also appear in some six varieties, such as Dutch Caseknife, Red Cranberry, Scarlet Runner, Large Lima, etc. Among the cabbages I find there were twenty varieties, such well known favorites as Early York, Early Sugar Loaf and Globe Savoy appearing

A Catalogue in 1847.

Now, in 1847 the catalogues were increasing in size and the varieties of vegetables were increasing in proportion. This catalogue of 1847 shows a corn list of seven varieties, some of which are well known at the present day, like the Early Golden Canada, Early Burlington, Early Tuscarora, Early Dutton, etc.

In 1864 other varieties were added to this corn list, like Early Dwarf, Darling's, Eight Rowed, Asylum and Stowell's Evergreen, Sugar, etc.

Even in 1847 the list of peas was quite an extensive one, there being at least thirty sorts catalogued, but of these only two sorts were wrinkled. These were the Tall and Dwarf Knights, and British Queen, and the next year brought us that famous old pea, the Champion of England. In 1864 a dozen more wrinkled sorts were added, and among them was the Advancer.

Up to a period beginning about with our Civil war, nearly all garden peas were imported from England and they were indeed beautiful samples. Up to 1850 and for some years thereafter, all such imported seeds came by sailing vessel; peas and other articles in five-bushel casks costing a guinea apiece. Later, however, they were shipped in very heavy double sacks, which were returned to the old country and used over and over again for several seasons.

A Comparison of Prices.

Our catalogue of 1864 contained a long list of most of the leading vegetables of today, and what strikes me as being peculiar is—and it may be something equally curious to you, gentlemen—that the prices of those days averaged about the same as the prices of the present day and the only marked exception to these prices was that of the Advancer pea, which had only been recently introduced as a fine wrinkled sort and it was quoted at $1 a quart; while all the other varieties were listed at from 20 cents to 60 cents a quart.

The high retail price for seeds began in 1867 and continued for some ten or eleven years, during which period the ruling price for Valentine, Mohawk and Refugee beans was $10 per bushel. Beets were then quoted at from $1 to $2 per pound; cabbage, from $2.50 to $8 per pound; leek, from $4 to $7 a pound; lettuce, from $3 to $5; onions, from $3 to $6; peas, the common sorts, $10 per bushel; Little Gem, $28 per bushel and $1 a quart; Yorkshire Hero, $18 per bushel; Champion of England, $10 per bushel; peppers, from $5 to $7 a pound; radish, from $1 to $1.50 a pound; turnips, from $1 to $2 a pound.

In 1869 all onions were quoted at $6 per pound. It was in 1870 that the Egyptian beet was a novelty and its seed sold at 50 cents an ounce. In 1873 I found Conover's Colossal asparagus listed at 50 cents per ounce, Trophy tomato $10 a pound, while the other va-ieties of tomato were quoted at from $3 to $4 per pound. Queen onion I find listed at $10 per pound, and even up to a period as late as 1875 Carter's Premium Gem peas were quoted at $1.50 a quart; the Blue Peter variety at $1.25 a quart. It seems curious, too, that in our catalogue of that date the Brussels Witloef was listed—so many years ago—yet it seems scarcely known by anybody, even at the present date, though quite large quantities of it are imported weekly from France and we all know how easily it may be cultivated in our own gardens, either for salads or for cooking.

many beautiful catalogues issued by our seed houses today, our modest pretensions of some sixty years ago seem plain and even insignificant. The increase in the size of the present catalogues, comprising as they do so many novelties and new and beautiful things, goes to show how our education and tastes in such matters are advancing from day to day, and how, of all the luxuries and industries, that of the cultivation of flowers and vegetables is the most innocent. It is productive, not only of many gratifications, but also of many advantages of a permanent character. The care of a garden is likewise a recreation and conduces materially to health, promotes civilization and softens the manners and tempers of men. In their growth from the tender shoots which rise from the earth, through all the changes which they undergo to the period of their utmost perfection, man beholds the wonderful works of creative power. He views the bud as it swells, looks into the expanded blossom and delights in its rich tints and pleasant odor, but above all he feels a charm in contemplating the movements and regulations before which all the combined ingenuity of man dwindles into nothingness.

HELPS FOR THE SEED TRADE.

Talking on the topic, "What the Department of Agriculture Is Doing for the Seed Trade," Dr. Beverly T. Galloway, chief of the Bureau of Plant Industry of the United States Department of Agriculture, at the seed trade convention at New York this week, outlined some of the more important work of his department and explained, with the aid of fifty lantern slides and maps bearing directly upon the subjects presented, the relations of this work to the seed trade.

The general duties of the department and the policy which is pursued in all its work, said Dr. Galloway, are to acquire and diffuse among the people of the United States useful information connected with agriculture in the most comprehensive sense of that word, and to procure, propagate and distribute new and valuable seeds and plants. In pursuing this policy, the department often stands in the same relation to the seedsmen as to other organized bodies whose objects are purely commercial. It is the business of the seedsmen to dispose of their products to the farmers, and it is to the interest of reputable seedsmen to work to the advantage of the purchasers. As the farmers are not organized, it comes about that the department must frequently stand as a medium between the seedsmen and the tillers of the soil, and where an element of doubt arises the farmer must be given the benefit of that doubt. This general policy is well illustrated by the lawmakers of the various states and of the national government, whose efforts aim to protect the farmer as an individual against agencies that may defraud or injure him.

After this general explanation, Dr. Galloway took up some of the more specific problems upon which the department is engaged, and with the use of lantern slides directed special attention to several lines of work, the results of which must be the upbuilding of the wealth of the country and the adoption of better agricultural practices, which will in a number of ways prove of value to seedsmen.

seedsmen is the testing of seeds by the seed laboratory, with a view to helping both the farmers and the seedsmen to secure seeds of higher quality. The laboratory, under the law, collects and examines forage-crop seeds for adulterants and gives seedsmen and farmers prompt information relative to samples of seed which they find in the market. Propaganda work is carried on by this laboratory to show the value and importance of good seed, and visits to farmers' institutes are made by its representatives to deliver lectures which will result in creating a demand for a better class of seed and will teach farmers to reject seeds of low vitality and those containing dangerous weed seeds.

Another important feature of laboratory work has for its object the improvement of the methods of handling seed. Special attention has been given to the harvesting, curing and storing of certain seed crops, particularly corn and Kentucky bluegrass, on which subjects a number of publications have already been issued by the Bureau of Plant Industry. The corn work, especially, has been productive of most valuable results, it having been demonstrated in a practical way that only seed of known high vitality should be planted.

A comparison of the work of the seed laboratory for the last year with that of previous years is interesting. From July 1, 1906, to May 27 of this year, this laboratory has tested seed for farmers, seedsmen and others, to the number of 5,822 samples. It has tested 1,548 samples of forage-crop seeds for adulterants and 3,825 samples of cowpea seeds for vitality. It has tested 3,852 samples of corn for this year's planting, 3,000 samples of vegetable seeds bought in the open market, and 1,200 samples of seeds from custom houses, making 19,247 samples in all. The cowpea and corn work was undertaken in view of the low vitality of these crops in certain sections during the past season.

Testing of Seeds.

The testing of seeds is now receiving more attention than at any previous time, and several of the agricultural experiment stations are arranging to take up this work. Legislation was proposed in four states during the last year, and the bill introduced in Iowa became a law.

A line of investigation which has a direct bearing on the seed trade is that of testing and standardizing American varieties of vegetables and publishing monographs on these varieties; the development of strains of sweet corn, cabbage, and other vegetables better adapted to the requirements of various localities, and the breeding of improved types of lettuce, celery, etc., which will possess desirable characteristics not found in existing types. During the last ten years the department has tested more than 15,000 samples of commercial varieties of garden vegetables, the first tests being confined to experimental plots in the vicinity of Washington, D. C., but more recently extending to all sections of the country. Several bulletins have been published containing monographs of certain vegetables, and another, devoted to American varieties of garden beans, is now in press. The object of this testing work is to establish a standard of perfection that will be a guide in making selections of variety types.

Before publishing a monograph of a vegetable, it is necessary to determine exact differences in season, productiveness, and other characteristics, as well as to decide which types shall be adopted as the correct ones. The department is endeavoring to simplify the nomenclature by adopting approved variety names and by recommending the discontinuance of confusing, long-worded, or inappropriate names.

The aggregate number of variety names used by American seedsmen is large, but there are comparatively few whose use is at all universal. For example, in the 1906 catalogues our W. W. Tracy, Jr., finds 198 leading seedsmen offering tomato seed under 248 different varietal names, only fifty-six of which are used by ten or more seedsmen, while 118 are advertised by a single dealer. Sweet corn is offered under 150 names, thirty-nine of which are used by ten or more seedsmen, while fifty-nine are used by but one. If it were determined and widely published that fourteen names stood for practically identical stocks of the old Acme type of tomato, it would be easy to offer them under fourteen other names, and detection could only follow after the harm had been done. The determination of the exact type of vegetable desirable for certain conditions is of much practical importance and will do more for the betterment of seed grown and used than by merely ascertaining under what names different seed growers offer a particular type.

New Types of Lettuce.

The results of the work of the department during the last three or four years in producing new types of lettuce by hybridizing are most promising, and the success of Mr. Oliver in crossing lettuce—something, it is believed, that has never before been attempted—has been marked. Lettuces for growing under glass have been used for the most part, the aim being to secure types better adapted to the requirements of the eastern United States and of the middle west. For the eastern states a lettuce was wanted with leaves light in color and with a good, solid, medium-sized head which would not readily top-burn and in which practically all the foliage could be used for dressing. By crossing the Grand Rapids type with a small-heading form known as Golden Queen, the results aimed for were secured, and through this same cross by a different selection an open-head type of lettuce has been obtained which is thought to be superior in a number of ways to the Grand Rapids variety. It is hoped to distribute seeds of both types next year.

Vegetable Forcing.

LETTUCE AND CUCUMBERS.

The Principal Crops.

There is probably no more popular or common vegetable grown in greenhouses than lettuce. Next in rank comes the cucumber, and with but few exceptions both crops are grown by vegetable growers all over the country. The houses used by large vegetable growers are of the best and latest pattern. One successful grower, when asked why he built such expensive houses, replied that it was not necessary for growing lettuce, but that the best and lightest house is not quite good enough for growing cucumbers to perfection when the sun is far in the south and the days so short, dark and cold. Wide, separate houses with the long span to the south are best and used by the majority of growers, but some growers prefer equal-span, connected houses. A few still use raised benches, like rose or carnation benches, but deeper, usually about twelve inches deep and four to four and a half feet wide, for one row of cucumbers, or eight feet wide where two rows are grown on the same bench. Most of the newer houses have solid beds on the ground and give bottom heat by having a line of common drain tile about a foot deep under the center of the beds. Through this tile a ¾-inch steam pipe is run the entire length of the house. The beds can be heated to the desired temperature by turning a valve at one end. This tile also answers as a drain, taking any surplus water from the soil.

Another way of making bottom heat is by the hotbed method, a trench being dug the full length of the bed and half filled with hot manure, and soil on top, in which the plants are placed. The heat in this will usually last until the vines are nearly full grown and able to get along without it.

There are three cities in the United States noted far and wide for the large number of establishments growing greenhouse vegetables. They are Boston, Chicago and Grand Rapids. The Boston growers use the Boston Market head lettuce for forcing, but at the other two cities the Grand Rapids variety of leaf lettuce is used almost entirely, not only because it is earlier and easier to grow, but it is also most in demand in the western markets. There is, however, much head lettuce shipped from Boston to the western cities. BORRALLIS.

William Peirce has leased the old Brookman property and closed his store on Central avenue till the fall trade begins, when he will open in the center of the city.

Joy Morton now runs a greenhouse at the old home, Arbor Lodge, and his output of shrubbery, etc., competes with the florists' trade in the city.

The day before Memorial day was a record breaker, but a heavy rain set in early in the morning and made it almost impossible for many to leave home, so that several parties failed to either call for their flowers or remit payment for them.

SUMMER ROSES SCARCE.

The difficulties in getting roses for florists' use throughout the summer are fully as noticeable this season as they have ever been and, although the demand for flowers generally is not heavy, the calls for roses are never satisfied, for the supply of good salable stock is limited. The outdoor-grown roses have been good during the entire spring and assist the florists tremendously in filling orders while they last, but, unfortunately, they cannot be relied on to produce anything of value from the end of May until the following autumn. The growers of stock under glass commence early in the summer to dry off their houses and for several months they have little in the way of good roses to offer. There is, during the warm spell, a good demand for indoor roses and at good prices, but this demand is never responded to promptly. All growers seek to have plenty of blooms when flowers are at their highest prices and they usually succeed to a greater or less extent, depending on circumstances, but no one apparently figures on having a cut in the summer, when, although the prices are not as high as in the winter, the demand is always brisk for good stock. The public wants roses and nothing else will fill the place, unless roses cannot be had, and that is the condition of affairs here for about four months in the summer.

The weather in the vicinity of San Francisco never becomes hot and with proper ventilation and watering many of the non-producing rose houses could be made to pay handsomely between seasons. The growers seem to have the idea that there should be no roses in the summer, and act accordingly, although the demand for good stock has never been any better than at this time. Carnations and other flowers get low in price, while roses, except for a few weeks in the spring, have steadily held their own, independent of how other articles were selling.

I have in mind two growers in this neighborhood who make a specialty of growing roses for the summer trade, and they maintain that they are the best paying houses under their charge. G.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

There has been somewhat of a stir among the florists this week, owing to the closing of the schools and a fair amount of funeral work. June weddings, although not especially numerous, have played a part and helped swell receipts.

Stock of all kinds, with the exception of roses, is in good supply at low prices. Sweet peas are considered the best sellers of any of the outdoor material and cost the dealers about 50 cents per dozen bunches. Carnations in the lighter shades are plentiful; both Enchantress and Prosperity are in full crop with some of our largest growers. They sell at about $2 per hundred, while the smaller varieties cost the stores about half that price. Colored gladioli and dahlias are now being seen in larger quantities and the demand is fair, considering the season. Other outdoor flowers, such as gailardias, cosmos, stocks and coreopsis, are being used in large lots by the street vendors.

Were it not for the fact that the street car strike is still in operation there would undoubtedly be a good trade here, but everything seems to have conspired to interfere with the peaceful pursuits of the florists and the past six weeks may easily be said to have been as quiet as anything seen here since our memorable fire; but from present indications things are pointing upward.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; Vice-pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 33d annual convention will be held at Milwaukee, June, 1907.

EVERGREEN planting in western nurseries was delayed by rains in the first half of June.

W. F. SCHELL, Wichita, Kan., shipped twenty-five cars of nursery stock during the spring season.

THE Portland Nursery Co., Portland, Ind., has been incorporated, with $10,000 capital stock, by Mary A. Wright, Jac. M. Spade, J. A. Shewalter, Grace Wright and John A. Collins.

At Duck Lake, near Rosthern, Sask., the Duck Lake Nursery Co., has been incorporated with $80,000 authorized capital. Hilliard Mitchell is president. Already 150,000 fruit trees have been planted.

EVERGREEN SEEDLINGS.

The customs officers and the importers are constantly having trouble with this paragraph of the customs act:

(1) Evergreen seedlings, $1 per thousand plants and fifteen per centum ad valorem; (2) stocks, cuttings and seedlings of all fruit and ornamental trees, deciduous and evergreen, shrubs and vines, Manetti, multiflora, and briar rose, and all trees, shrubs, plants and vines, commonly known as nursery or greenhouse stock, not specially provided for in this Act, twenty-five per centum ad valorem.

The collectors frequently misapply the law, as in the case of an importation of 1,000 Cedrus deodora by Howard & Smith, of Los Angeles. There were plants from two feet to two and one-half feet high, propagated or raised from the seed, and the collector held they were dutiable as "seedlings of ornamental evergreen trees" or as "nursery stock" at twenty-five per cent ad valorem, while Howard & Smith held they should be admitted as "evergreen seedlings" at $1 per thousand plants and fifteen per cent ad valorem, as provided for in the same paragraph. They filed a protest, which the Board of General Appraisers at New York upheld June 14, in the following opinion:

"The testimony shows that the plants in question are propagated or raised from the seed of a forest cedar, native of the Himalayas, botanically known as Cedrus deodora, which is the Indian deodar. Those in the importation are from two feet to two and one-half feet high, and have been transplanted. This fact, however, does not remove them from the class of seedlings.

"In the opinion of the Board these plants are not 'seedlings of ornamental evergreen trees' unless all varieties of pine and fir should be so classified. It is matter of common knowledge that the deodar is a forest tree, and while ornamental in the broad sense that applies to many other forest trees, probably is chiefly valuable for its timber. Unless the earlier provision for 'evergreen seedlings' in paragraph 252 covers such plants, we fail to see what application it can have. There is, moreover, doubt in our mind, in view of the comprehensive nature of the last provision in paragraph 252 and the fact that it is qualified by the words 'not specially provided for, whether the term seedlings in said provision refers to the evergreen trees therein provided for, as it would have ample scope with reference to the various other trees, plants, etc., mentioned in such provision.

"The Board has also considered whether the last clause of section 7 of the act might not be invoked. It provides:

If two or more rates of duty shall be applicable to any imported article, it shall pay duty at the highest of such rates.

"Under this provision the rate of twenty-five per cent ad valorem assessed by the collector in this case would be higher than the duty of $1 per thousand plants and fifteen per cent ad valorem, which the importers claim to be applicable, inasmuch as the plants are valued at $102 per thousand. It is evident that if this were made the test ever-green seedlings would be dutiable at the former or the latter rate according as they were valued at more or less than $10 per thousand plants. Under the doctrine of Loggie v. United States, decided by the circuit court of appeals, it would be improper to apply section 7 under such circumstances.

"We are of the opinion that the plants in question should be classified as ever-green seedlings under the first provision in paragraph 252, and sustain the protest and reverse the collector's decision."

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS.

In all or nearly all of the important nursery establishments the thorough cultivation of the soil is considered of the utmost importance, but there are some places where indications point to the existence of a belief that it is labor wasted to cultivate soil in nursery rows. There are many trees that are, when young, just as tender in some respects as many bedding plants, on which much greater care is usually bestowed. The cheapest and best way of cultivating the soil in a nursery is to keep the cultivator continuously at work, not to wait until weeds cover the surface of the soil, and the soil itself gets baked hard as iron. It is often the case that young trees are planted so that the cultivator can be run between plants, but it will pay to follow up the cultivator work with hoeing in between.

It appears that last winter was one of the few to play havoc with California privet in some sections, but in spite of such occasional set-backs privet will always be in demand, because there is nothing approaching it for beauty and utility when planted for hedges. Green cuttings of privet, put in about the middle of July, will root freely and quickly in a partially shaded spot outdoors. Soil composed in the main of leaf-mold suits them, when rooting, better than any other. In three or four weeks after the cuttings are put in they will be fit for lifting and transplanting into nursery rows, there to remain until next spring, and longer if necessary. The only indispensable requirement in the rooting of privet at that time—in July—is partial shade for at least a week; otherwise, the wood being soft, they will wilt right down.

A BOOKKEEPER MISSING.

The Des Moines Leader for June 18 reports that "C. C. Gremes, bookkeeper for the M. J. Wragg Nursery Co., is being sought by detectives on two informations charging forgery. M. J. Wragg, his employer, yesterday filed the information, but Gremes had disappeared. The extent of his alleged peculation is not known, but may exceed $1,000. Mr. Wragg had been absent from Des Moines for a couple of weeks, leaving the business in charge of Mr. Gremes, while he visited his daughters, who are residing on homesteads near Cheyenne, Wyo. He returned at midnight Sunday. Yesterday morning when he reached the office in the Good block Gremes was not there and he at once began investigation. Drafts and checks belonging to the firm had been cashed, but the proceeds were not accounted for. Also a check was found where Mr. Wragg's name had been forged."

at $102 per thousand. It is evident that if this were made the test ever-green seedlings would be dutiable at the former or the latter rate according as they were valued at more or less than $10 per thousand plants. Under the doctrine of Loggie v. United States, decided by the circuit court of appeals, it would be improper to apply section 7 under such circumstances.

"We are of the opinion that the plants in question should be classified as ever-green seedlings under the first provision in paragraph 252, and sustain the protest and reverse the collector's decision."

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS.

In all or nearly all of the important nursery establishments the thorough cultivation of the soil is considered of the utmost importance, but there are some places where indications point to the existence of a belief that it is labor wasted to cultivate soil in nursery rows. There are many trees that are, when young, just as tender in some respects as many bedding plants, on which much greater care is usually bestowed. The cheapest and best way of cultivating the soil in a nursery is to keep the cultivator continuously at work, not to wait until weeds cover the surface of the soil, and the soil itself gets baked hard as iron. It is often the case that young trees are planted so that the cultivator can be run between plants, but it will pay to follow up the cultivator work with hoeing in between.

It appears that last winter was one of the few to play havoc with California privet in some sections, but in spite of such occasional set-backs privet will always be in demand, because there is nothing approaching it for beauty and utility when planted for hedges. Green cuttings of privet, put in about the middle of July, will root freely and quickly in a partially shaded spot outdoors. Soil composed in the main of leaf-mold suits them, when rooting, better than any other. In three or four weeks after the cuttings are put in they will be fit for lifting and transplanting into nursery rows, there to remain until next spring, and longer if necessary. The only indispensable requirement in the rooting of privet at that time—in July—is partial shade for at least a week; otherwise, the wood being soft, they will wilt right down.

A BOOKKEEPER MISSING.

The Des Moines Leader for June 18 reports that "C. C. Gremes, bookkeeper for the M. J. Wragg Nursery Co., is being sought by detectives on two informations charging forgery. M. J. Wragg, his employer, yesterday filed the information, but Gremes had disappeared. The extent of his alleged peculation is not known, but may exceed $1,000. Mr. Wragg had been absent from Des Moines for a couple of weeks, leaving the business in charge of Mr. Gremes, while he visited his daughters, who are residing on homesteads near Cheyenne, Wyo. He returned at midnight Sunday. Yesterday morning when he reached the office in the Good block Gremes was not there and he at once began investigation. Drafts and checks belonging to the firm had been cashed, but the proceeds were not accounted for. Also a check was found where Mr. Wragg's name had been forged."

The Market.

June 22 the thermometer registered the highest on record for that date. It was also the longest day, so we had ample time to enjoy it. However, this weather is having its effect on stock. Carnations are getting soft, roses smaller, and, in fact, everything is suffering. Peonies are just out in town and are going fast with the intense heat. A trip around the city quickly tells why the thousands of plants are sold each spring. Nearly every house with signs of life has a window-box, a fern or some plant to decorate the porch. While the window-box trade is only half what it was fifteen years ago, it is still large and, we think, coming more into fashion again.

Various Notes.

W. J. Palmer & Son are showing some fine Chatenay in their windows. Chatenay, when open, is certainly fine, and if it was as pretty in bud it would be in any class.

Weddings and graduations seem to increase, for one firm in town had five weddings in one day last week, which speaks well for the business.

Box trees have found a ready sale this spring, and we find that they are scarce in the east.

During the rush Ollie Scott stepped on the side of a flat and turned his ankle, causing a slight sprain. He will soon return to work, as he is getting well very fast. David Scott also was injured while playing in a ball game, being spiked in the leg. The injury is only a slight one.

Mr. and Mrs. Kasting leave soon to spend the summer at their Erie home.

Geo. McClure is beginning his practice for the bowling tournament. He has started to organize a team so we can hand Chicago a lemon in August.

R. A. S.

SCHOOLCRAFT, MICH.

Schoolcraft has secured a new industry, in the Schoolcraft Forcing Houses, a Grand Rapids company having organized to build greenhouses for the purpose of raising flowers and vegetables. Leo Cropson and Chauncey Simonds, two young men who received their training at the Michigan Agricultural College, will build two greenhouses, 23x100 feet, this summer and they expect eventually to cover several acres with greenhouses.

HARTFORD, CONN.—At the last meeting of the Connecticut Horticultural Society, J. F. Huss placed on exhibition thirty-two varieties of outdoor flowers.

NEW ORLEANS.

The Horticultural Society.

The last monthly meeting of the New Orleans Horticultural Society was better attended than could be expected at this time of the year, when warm weather keeps many members at home. Chairman E. Baker promised that at the next meeting a full report upon the next fall flower show will be made by him. In advance of the annual election, which will take place next month, it was proposed to nominate a few candidates for the different offices and the result was: Charles Eble as president; A. Alost, C. Ory and H. Cook as vice-president; C. R. Panter as secretary, and John Eblen as treasurer. It was decided to celebrate our anniversary in a quiet manner in the city, without any outing, as previously.

Various Notes.

The German Gardeners' Club took an excursion to Little Woods, a station close to Lake Pontchartrain. R. Reinecke is the president of the association. His place of business, at the corner of Dryades and General Taylor streets, is the picture of order and cleanliness, and whatever he grows is grown well. One house is devoted to adiantums, which are as perfect as can be desired for this season of the year. He is nursing with much expectation two different sports of nephrolepis, one between Boston and fish-tail and one between Scottii and fish-tail.

Mrs. Muller, wife of Joseph Muller, who died a few years ago, is dividing her ground, on Esplanade avenue, with the idea of selling it and retiring from business.

James Newsham is busy unpacking several hundred orchids, just received from his collector. He says they arrived in good order after a long journey, and some of the stock which he has on hand is blooming perfectly.

M. M. L.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—Carl H. Johannsen has filed a petition in bankruptcy, scheduling liabilities of $3,627.25 and assets largely consisting of a claim in a lawsuit.

BROCKTON, MASS.—H. F. Crawford will pull down several houses this summer and replace with new ones for roses, which he proposes to grow in quantity.

DAVIS BROS., MORRISON, ILL.

Record broken by Godfrey Aschmann, of Philadelphia, the well-known Araucaria Specialist of America.

Watch Us Grow

1907 is our 12th anniversary in a successful career in the importation, growing and shipping of that well-known and well-admired evergreen decorative plant,

Araucaria Excelsa, Compacta Robusta and Glauca.

Beginning with the first year, 1895, with an importation of 100, this Spring, 1907, our importation has swollen to the enormous quantity of 6000 of the 3 best known ARAUCARIAS, Excelsa, Compacta Robusta and Glauca. Our Araucarias are so well introduced that they represent every city, county and state of America, from the Atlantic to the Pacific and as far as Cuba and Mexico. It is always my earnest desire to improve my system in buying, raising, selling and shipping our production to such an extent that it not only benefits us but so that it will yield a fair profit into the pockets of the buyers.

Now is the time to fill your empty houses and make money fast, as the plants will grow into money while you sleep.

Araucaria Excelsa, 5-in., pots, 10 to 12 inches high, 2-year old, 3 tiers, 50c each. Larger sizes 5, 5½ to 6-in. pots, 2, 3 and 4 years old, 60c, 75c, $1.00 to $1.25.

Araucaria Compacta Robusta, 6-in. pots, 2 to 3 years old, 10 to 15, 18 inches high, 3 to 4 tiers, $1.00, $1.25, $1.75 to $2.00 each.

Araucaria Glauca, 3, 4, 5 tiers, 2 to 3 years old, very beautiful, as broad as they are long, 10, 12, 15 to 20 inches high, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75 to $2.00 each.

Compacta Robusta, specimen plants of last year's importation, 5 years old, 30 inches high, 6, 7, to 8-in. pots, 5 tiers, $2.50 to $3.00 each.

Specimen Glauca, beautiful, 36 to 40 inches high, 5 tiers, as broad as long, $4.00 each, worth $10.00.

Kentia Forsteriana and Belmoreana, European stock, 6-in. pots, 25 to 30 inches high, 5 leaves, $1.00 to $1.25; 4-in. pots, 18 to 20 inches high, 35c.

Cocos Weddelliana, 3-in. pots, 10, 12 to 15 inches high, 15c, 18c to 20c.

Areca Lutescens, 4-in., made up 3 in a pot, 20c per pot.

ST. PAUL.

The Market.

Business is gradually dropping off. Stock is plentiful. Prices have declined considerably. The dealers who have yearly contracts with growers are throwing away considerable stock, after trying to dispose of it to other dealers. Funeral orders have not been heavy, except in one instance where a great many designs were ordered and the orders afterward canceled, as the family requested that no flowers be sent.

Planting is still going on, although bedding stock, with the exception of geraniums, is pretty well cleaned out. Fishing trips seem to be in line, and about every dealer is taking a hand at it.

Various Notes.

Holm & Olson appear to be well satisfied with the results of their season's work. They have, in addition to a large cut flower trade, done considerable in nursery stock.

J. W. Hoffman, manager of the retail department of L. L. May & Co., was married June 19 and is now enjoying his honeymoon.

C. F. Vogt says that he is glad the plant business is over.

Colberg & Lemke have closed up. A. W. Lemke has been conducting the business alone for the last few months.

The Ramaley Floral Co. keep up a good stock of blooming plants, which, from reports, sell to good advantage. Their location appears to be especially adapted for the sale of plants.

C. Bussjaeger has leased his greenhouses to F. & W. Topel for five years. It is a well located establishment and they are young, ambitious growers and sure to succeed. Mr. Bussjaeger will go into landscaping and handling nursery stock, as he did before he went into the florists' business. FELIX.

LAFAYETTE, IND.—Fred Dorner & Sons Co. has broken ground at the corner of Twenty-first and Indiana avenue for the erection of five greenhouses, each 28x200 feet. All will be connected. The greenhouses will contain 35,000 feet of glass.

ORCHIDS

We beg to advise our customers that we have just received the following ORCHIDS direct from the forests, and for which we respectfully solicit your orders, assuring you that no pains or expense will be spared in order to please you.

CATTLEYA PERCIVALIANA. These are the finest plants ever received by us; not a leaf bruised or lost; all have strong, heavy bulbs; if potted now these will produce a nice crop of flowers in November and December. Any of the above by the dozen or hundred or case lots.

CATTLEYA LABIATA, in extra fine condition, well leaved; if potted now these will produce a crop of flowers late this fall.

ORCHIDS

CATTLEYA SCHROEDERAE. Just arrived in finest condition a shipment of this fine cattleya, the same type from which have resulted such celebrities as C. Schroederæ "The Baron" and C. Schroederæ "Hercules."

The following good things have also arrived:

LAELIA (CATTLEYA) ORIPA, LAELIA PRASSTANS, and LAELIA DAYANA; MILTONIAS, such as Cuneata, Candida and Clowesii.

ONCIDIUMS Crispum, Marshallianum, Luridum and Varicosum Bogersii, and many more. Write for prices.

DENVER.

The Market.

Business for the latter part of June continues fairly good, there being a good demand for cut flowers and just about enough stock to meet it, so there has been no break in prices, taking them all around. Roses are not what is termed plentiful and other stock thus far can not be said to be a glut, but with the advent of clear and warmer weather, and a large increase of outdoor stock, values will be lowered.

American Beauties, while still fairly plentiful, are not as large in bloom as heretofore, prices being somewhat lower on that account. Carnations are coming in larger quantities and are being quoted at 2 cents and 2½ cents.

Peonies, which have been scarce on account of the late spring, are not yet overplentiful, but are of much better quality than what were offered a week or so ago. The bright days we are now having will soon bring an abundance of these. Sweet peas and the better quality of daisies are moving freely at nominal prices.

On account of the late season and some replanting made necessary by frost, there is a scarcity of bedding plants.

Various Notes.

The Chamber of Commerce gave a banquet to Secretary Garfield June 19 and had a fine decoration, mostly pink and green.

The Denver Dry Goods Co. had its opening of the new store for three days of last week, with music and flowers, having over 500 palms for decoration, with American Beauty roses.

Several large funerals last week kept most of the florists busy, a great many designs being shipped out of town.

Among the recent visitors was Mr. King, of the Butte Floral Co., of Butte, Mont.; also Frank Hayden and John Berry, of Colorado Springs, who were here attending the land convention.

B. E. Gillis, of the Park Floral Co., is spending a few days at his cottage at Bull Gulch, near Golden. E. S. K.

PEORIA, ILL.—Cole Bros. are preparing to change their heating system to the vacuum system of steam.

PITTSBURG, PA.—The downtown fire companies were called out June 16 in answer to an alarm of fire from Breitenstein & Flemm's flower store, at Market street and Liberty avenue. The blaze originated from crossed electric wires in the basement of the store, but was extinguished by the chemical with but little loss.

ASTERS.

ROSBACH'S COMMERCIAL LATE.

We have been growing and perfecting this strain for the past five years and find it the best commercial variety that we have ever grown. On account of the uniformly double nature of the flowers it produces but little seed, consequently this is the first time that we are enabled to offer it to the trade. Shell-pink, rose (a grand flower) and purple, $3.50 per 1000. Olmstead's Commercial White, the best early all-purpose florists' aster in cultivation, $3.00 per 1000.

Sample's, as good as you can get anywhere—white, shell-pink and purple, separate, $2.50 per 1000.

Insects and Insecticides.

By CLARENCE M. WEED, D. SC. A practical manual concerning noxious insects and the methods of preventing their injuries. Profusely illustrated. A generally useful handbook on noxious insects. It covers the whole field of insect pests very thoroughly and is especially valuable for its complete and up-to-date methods of fighting insects. The work is intensely practical. All the important insect pests are described and remedies for them, and methods of preventing their injuries described in detail. Cloth. $1.50

Greenhouse Management.

By PROF. L. R. TAPT, of Michigan Agricultural College. A manual for florists and flower lovers on the forcing of flowers, vegetables and fruits in greenhouses, and the propagation and care of house plants. It treats of all the plants commonly cultivated by florists and amateurs, and explains in a thorough manner the methods that have been found most successful in growing them. Particular attention is paid to the growing of cut flowers, the growing of fruits under glass, etc. Of special value will be the directions for treating plants when attacked by insects and fungi. The preparation of the soil, the use of various manures, composts and fertilizers, watering, ventilating and heating receive careful and minute attention. Cloth. 400 pages. $1.50

TWENLOW'SOld English*Liquid and*Glazing Putty*Elastic*For Bedding Glass in Sash or for Filling Cracks or Seams*In Roof Joints or Frames of Greenhouses or Hotbeds.

It is used in Machine or Bulb. If too thick for bulb, thin with a little Pure Linseed Oil, boiled. So thinned, it can be brushed into any crack or leak, making a solid filling. It makes a solid bed, impervious to moisture, and holds glass in its place, and will stop any crevice or fault. When once set on dry wood it does not heave. As regards the goods, the article is no new invention, but simply an article of the very best class, to do thoroughly good work, like old-time gentlemen expected when sashes were made with lead, and small panes of glass used that caught the water and leaked unless set with an elastic putty which once set by a mechanic was expected to remain, and did remain in good shape. This Twemlow's Old English Glazing Putty does; nothing more, nothing less. SOLD BY THE FLORISTS' SUPPLY HOUSES.

EXPANSION JOINTS.

What success is being had with expansion joints in steam coils? Where should they be placed? Where can we procure them and at what cost? Please tell us of the experience some greenhouse owners have had with them.

X. Y. Z.

The expansion of the heating pipes used in all ordinary greenhouse structures can be compensated for by a simple arrangement consisting of a swing joint constructed with two ells and a close nipple joining the heating pipe at right angles with another pipe twelve to eighteen inches in height, according to the space at command. For long, straight runs of large pipe where no turns can be thrown in, an expansion joint is sometimes essential, but in ordinary work such joints can be avoided. If needed, expansion joints may be purchased of those who advertise heating specialties in the REVIEW.

L. C. C.

STEAM BOILER FOR HOT WATER.

I have two greenhouses, running east and west, each 20x100 feet, five feet high on the side walls and twelve feet to the ridge; no glass on the sides. The floor has a fall of two feet in 100 feet, to the east. I have a twelve horse-power, submerged-flue steam boiler. Can it be so installed as to use it for a hot water plant instead of for steam? I can sink the boiler in a pit at the lower end of the house. I have natural gas for fuel. I also have good city water pressure.

J. H. H.

You can easily arrange the steam boiler for hot water heating. I doubt, however, if the boiler in question will have capacity to maintain a satisfactory temperature in both houses during severe weather. It is about 300 square feet short of the actual capacity needed for the houses. It is usual to add a liberal factor of safety to the size of the boiler, after figuring the actual requirements of the houses. If hot water under pressure is used, each house should have a 3-inch riser and twelve 2-inch returns, arranged under the benches or upon the side walls, according to the use to which the house is devoted. The expansion tank should be placed well up, unless city pressure is used, in which case the expansion tank can be dispensed with, provided the pressure is not too great.

L. C. C.

PITCH OF HOT WATER PIPES.

Will you please tell me what is the least possible pitch I can give hot water pipes in 140 feet? I cannot see my way out in giving the returns under the benches any more than ten inches and the main return in the walk to the boiler ten inches. All flows are overhead.

P. J. S.

Under a pressure system with overhead flows you should have no difficulty in securing a good circulation with ten inches of fall in 140 feet, provided the pipes are carefully graded and are straight. One hundred forty feet is a pretty good distance to carry hot water upon a graded system, and all close turns and small pipes should be eliminated if you are to make it successful. Do not attempt to install anything less than 2-inch pipe on runs of this length.

Notable among the cut flowers was an excellent collection of peonies. The judge awarded this exhibit a certificate of merit. Scott Bros. showed quite an assortment of hybrid rhododendrons in pots. Geo. Middleton was awarded the prize for strawberries, Howard Nichols for twelve varieties of vegetables, John Elliot for six varieties of vegetables, Geo. Witlinger for sweet peas, W. H. Waite for shrubs, and Wm. Grierson for perennials. Special prizes were awarded Geo. Middleton for greenhouse grapes, peaches, figs, and melons, to Geo. Witlinger for grapes, Robt. Angus for grapes and tables of decorative plants, D. McFarlane for greenhouse melons and vegetables, J. W. Smith for perennials, John Woodcock for roses, W. H. Waite for perennials, and F. Gibson for perennials.

On account of the late season for roses, the judge did not award the J. H.

The Market.

The hot weather, coming on suddenly last week, glutted the market, and there was an accumulation of stock such as has not been seen in this city for some time. Considering the warm weather, however, the quality held up well, but there being such a heavy supply, even good stock brought unsatisfactory prices and inferior grades went on the dump or were sold at whatever prices were offered.

Roses appeared to have suffered the most, and it needed considerable sorting over to select good shipping stock. There was also an abundance of sweet peas coming in, as well as peonies and lilies, but it was impossible to maintain any price on account of the overflow in general. Although many of the higher grade schools held their graduating exercises and considerable stock was consumed in this way, yet there was so much of it that this did not have a noticeable effect on the market. Stock is, however, expected to shorten up now, as many of the growers are beginning to throw out some of their plants. Our public schools will have their closing exercises this week and it is expected that considerable stock will be used.

CINCINNATI

The Market.

The weather has been the hottest of the year and it would appear that summer is with us for keeps at last. Roses have been growing smaller and smaller every day, and the color is poor. Should the weather continue for a few days more it will about end the roses for the season. Carnations, too, show the effects of the heat, but there are still some good ones coming in from the north. Sweet peas are in good shape but sell slowly and at a low figure. Many of the shipped ones go on the dump. Peonies are good property, and candidum lilies sell well. Lily of the valley is in demand. There has been an unusual demand for ferns and they sell out as soon as they are received. Other green goods are in good demand.

In spite of the heat, business has continued good, and no one can complain. There has been a great deal of funeral work. As the market was well stocked up with white carnations, they sold out well. From present prospects it would appear that we can look forward to good business right up to July.

Various Notes.

On the afternoon of June 21 this city was visited by a heavy rain accompanied by hail. The heaviest hail occurred in the vicinity of Lockland, and market gardeners suffered much loss. W. K. Partridge, whose range of glass is located there, was a heavy loser. The latest estimate is about 30,000 feet of glass, or about one-third of his entire range. Including damage to stock in the houses, the estimated loss will be in the neighborhood of $8,000. There is no insurance.

THE PEONY

CONVENTION

AMERICAN PEONY SOCIETY.

The annual meeting and exhibition of the American Peony Society was held at Ithaca, N. Y., June 27 and 28. The "Forest City," the home of Cornell University, was at its best. Cornell has long boasted, and with justice, the finest location and college campus in the country. The beautiful scenery at Ithaca was well shown off by perfect weather, and it was almost like taking a vacation for the members of the society to attend the meeting this year. The College of Agriculture, one of the eight colleges comprising Cornell University, opened the doors of its fine new building to the society. The exhibition was held in the large auditorium of this building and the sessions in the adjoining rooms of the Department of Horticulture.

The Exhibition.

The nature and keeping qualities of the peony, together with the fact that the members of the society come from all parts of the country, necessarily limit the exhibitors to a few growers in the vicinity and within easy shipping distance. In spite of the fact that there are few growers of peonies near Ithaca, there was a large and creditable showing of blooms in the exhibition hall.

Ellwanger & Barry, of Rochester, N. Y., and C. W. Ward, of Queens, N. Y., were probably the largest exhibitors at the show. The displays of both, in the collections of fifty blooms, were especially noteworthy, and the honors were pretty equally divided between them. In the amateur classes, although the competition was not very keen, the quality of the exhibits was especially fine and was commented on by the judges.

The Awards.

For collections of the best twelve and most distinct varieties, six flowers each, C. W. Ward secured first prize. Mr. Ward also carried off first prizes in each of the following classes: Best collection of varieties in various shades of rose pink, three flowers each; best collection of varieties salmon and flesh-colored, three flowers each; best collection of white varieties, three flowers each; best collection of crimson varieties without stamens, three flowers each.

In the classes for fifty blooms, the flowers were among the finest ever exhibited. Mr. Ward had the best fifty white blooms, exhibiting Marie Lemoine in this class. Ellwanger & Barry were second, with Festiva maxima. For the best fifty blooms, dark pink or rose, the award was made to Ellwanger & Barry for Modeste Guerin. C. W. Ward was second in this class. Ellwanger & Barry again led in the class for the best fifty flesh or salmon pink, with Jeanne d'Arc. The second place was awarded to Mr. Ward. The latter was again first with the best fifty crimson blooms, for which he used Delache. Ellwanger & Barry drew second award with Rubra triumphans.

In the classes for amateurs, Prof. A. P. Saunders, of Clinton, N. Y., was awarded a first prize for the best collection of salmon and flesh pink varieties, one bloom of each. T. C. Walcott, of Utica, N. Y., exhibited the best six blooms of any one variety, and in addition was accorded special mention for the general excellence of the blooms.

The Cornell Test Plats.

The show had been postponed two weeks in order that the plants in the Cornell test plats might come into bloom for exhibition. The season in central New York this spring has been one of the most backward in years, and consequently the plants came on slowly. The plants have not been forced by high fertilization and excessive cultivation. The roots for these test plats were furnished by members of the association, the Cornell Experiment Station agreeing to furnish the ground and care for the plats. About 1,900 roots were set two and three years ago. These undoubtedly comprise between 500 and 600 varieties, as we now know them. Some 250 to 300 were in bloom at the date of the exhibition and were to be seen not only growing on the plats, but on the tables in the show hall, where they made an extensive showing and made up a large part of the exhibit.

The plants in the test plats really need another year or two to grow before their true value may be ascertained. Not only will these plants be left, but additional ones will be added.

Standard Collection.

It is planned that each member of the society shall send to the Horticultural Department at Ithaca one strong, vigorous root of each of all of what they consider to be their best varieties. These will be planted in plats and marked with stakes giving the name by which the grower has known the plant and the name of the grower. In this manner it is hoped, not only to straighten out the nomenclature of the peony, but to determine the commercial value of the different varieties and to select about 100 or 150 standard varieties. Provision was made by the society to aid the Experiment Station still further in its work, by appropriating from its own funds $200, which amount will be placed in the hands of the college treasurer to expend on the plats.

Members of the American Peony Society inspecting the Cornell Peony Test Plats June 28.

After the Thursday afternoon session the members spent an hour or two in inspecting and studying these plats. In the evening the members of the society were entertained by Prof. and Mrs. Craig at their home.

The Sessions.

The first session of the society was held on Thursday afternoon. Prof. Bailey, dean of the College of Agriculture, welcomed the society to Cornell. He said that the college stood for peony culture as well as that of any other agricultural or horticultural product. He explained to the members of the society what the university at Ithaca is and the relation the College of Agriculture bears to it, together with the work of the college. It is now a State College of Agriculture, and as such is supported by the state, which now appropriates $150,000 annually for its maintenance. The new buildings of the college cost $300,000 and are not yet fully equipped. The dean, who is perhaps the foremost agricultural educator in this country, holds that agriculture includes everything connected with the soil and the plants which grow upon it, so that the college is covering a large field—rather more than the money at its disposal warrants. Peony culture is one of these branches, and as much work has been done at Cornell with the peony as with any other flower, if not more. Cornell University has a larger staff of teachers than almost any other university in the country. The proportion of students to teachers is relatively small, which is a great advantage. More than 4,000 students are in attendance, 542 of whom are in the College of Agriculture.

President C. W. Ward presented his annual address. He said in part:

President's Address.

"The purpose of a college of agriculture is to teach agriculturists the most intelligent methods in the culture of plants and in the management of labor. There has been a great lack of such intelligent business methods among florists, which has cost them the loss of a good deal of money. They do not know the exact cost of production of their products, as do other producers. Why not apply the same business methods to the growing of flowers as the coal or lumber merchant applies to the products of his mine or forest? He knows just what it costs to produce each ton of coal and each thousand feet of lumber. Is there any reason why a florist should not know what it costs him to produce a thousand peony blooms? Many florists lose money, except for the increase in the value of their land. The sale of flowers is very important, and here is where many florists fail. We are looking to our agricultural colleges to help correct some of these loose methods and make up some of these deficiencies. The success of the college is measured by the success of its graduates in after life.

"At present there is little or no profit in peony culture, because its lists cannot be depended upon. A customer cannot be sure what variety he is getting, or whether a variety is correctly named or not, and no one is in a position to tell him. We now have some 3,000 peonies, whereas 150 would be ample to cover our necessities. The test plats here at Cornell are to determine varieties and to reduce their number to a commercial basis. Varieties must be identified accurately, so that the same variety can be bought anywhere.

"Another important work is to create a love for peonies on the part of the public. This may be best done by exhibition of the flowers, inviting the public in. These exhibitions of the society are accomplishing much in this direction. We propose to hold such an exhibition on our private grounds at Queens, L. I., next year for this purpose."

At the beginning of the Friday morning session President Ward gave the desirable points in a good peony, illustrating his talk with specimens. He said that he had been testing peonies at Queens for fifteen years. He selects for fullness of center, for commercial value, for points of habit of the flowers, as keeping quality and season of bloom, for erectness of stems, and for perfect flowers. Mr. Ward urged the selection of, say 100 best varieties, and the concentration of work on these, eliminating all others. He greatly favored the plan of sending these best varieties to Cornell to be tested.

The Committee on Nomenclature.

Prof. Craig, of the Horticultural Department, then presented the report of the committee on nomenclature, embodying in it a sketch of the system and presenting some excellent suggestions. He said that a system of nomenclature for plants was only established about 100 years ago. Linnaeus, the great botanist, founded the double name system, giving both a genital and a varietal name to the plant. Our present system was devised by De Candolle in 1813. After undergoing revision in 1842, and again in 1867, by French botanists—from which it is known as the "Paris Code"—it was finally modified and affirmed as official by the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

"Since there are 200,000 recognized species of plants," Prof. Craig continued, "and over 700,000 names, the necessity of a code of nomenclature will be seen. In 1869, Mr. Barry, of Rochester, N. Y., formulated a set of rules, which, with revision, are generally used for guidance in naming varieties. They are as follows: I. No two varieties may bear the same name. II. The name should be simple and brief. III. The name should be as characteristic as it is possible to make it without interfering with Rules I and II, which should come first. On page 11 of Mr. Coit's 'Peony Check List' may be found further rules of classification.

"The rules are absolutely essential to a good system of nomenclature. We expect some trouble in this way on the experimental plats, but we shall try to be just and impartial. We must work in this matter in a broad and altruistic sense. This society has been very fortunate in having Mr. Coit in this work so far, but he now has to leave to accept an advanced position. However, the work will go on and another man has already been secured to take his place."

Prof. Coit's Address.

Prof. Coit's address, which had been looked forward to with much interest, was fully up to expectations. He gave a brief sketch of the history of the peony as follows: "Up to about 100 years ago we had only the one double red peony of our grandmothers, with its 'sqapy' odor. Chinese peonies were then introduced. They were single whites, albiflora, but under intensive cultivation they sported to nearly every color and doubled. Most of our peonies are now albifloras. The peony of the ancients was the Moutan. It was not known in Europe until 1856.

"The tree peony originated, beyond all doubt, in China in 536 A. D. In 713 A. D., 1,193 years ago, there were so many varieties that a Chinaman found it necessary to make a peony register. So you see our efforts in this direction are not at all original. In 1794 an attempt was made to introduce peonies into Europe. The first successful introduction, however, was to England in 1805 (Fragrans). The same peony seems to have been brought to America in the next year, 1806, by Wm. Prince.

"There is no doubt but that the peony of today is very different from the old peony. Why this difference and the present great variety? What has brought it about? There are three chief causes of variation in plants: (1) environment, (2) change of food, (3) intercrossing. Peonies have shown all kinds of variations, especially of form, from these causes."

Prof. Coit has greatly aided the study of peonies by classifying them into six types which embrace them all. They are as follows: I, Singles; II, Japanese;

III, Bomb; IV, Semi-double; V, Crown; VI, Rose. The last type includes the highest and fullest developed peonies.

"Our chief difficulty as peony growers," continued Prof. Coit, "is incomplete and inaccurate descriptions and incorrect labeling. These evils must be eliminated before the present muddle of names can be cleared. I suggest that the society maintain a register of all old and new varieties. The question of just what comprises a variety is an important one. There are two views, one that everything coming from seeds not coming true to type, or seedlings, are varieties; the other, that only those plants and flowers of any race so resembling each other that they cannot be told apart are varieties. I believe that the latter is the correct view. As a guide to color, I have used the French color index, 'Repertoire des Couleurs,' published by the French Chrysanthemum Society, which may be secured through Gustav E. Stechert, book dealer, New York city."

This chart was later adopted by the Peony Society as its official color guide and copies were ordered purchased. It may be obtained through the secretary, Mr. Fewkes, the three volumes for $6.

Business Meeting.

At the opening of the business session, Secretary Fewkes presented his report, which was in part as follows:

"The present membership of the society is forty-one, not including two honorary members. During the year we have lost one member by death, F. A. Blake, of Rochdale, Mass., who passed away July 1. He was a charter member of the society and in his death we have lost a most valuable member. He was an enthusiastic horticulturist, taking great interest in the peony and the success of our society, but was too unassuming to appear in any prominent way. It was through his efforts that the list of Japanese peonies was secured, he being an intimate friend of a young Japanese of high standing in the government of his country, who was prevailed upon to secure an authentic list of such varieties as were known to exist there.

"In regard to the fungous disease mentioned in my last report, we were informed that it had been pronounced by Prof. Whetzel to be Botrytis vulgaris or the common brown mould, and only a temporary affection, dependent upon weather conditions. While that statement may be true in a measure, it is nevertheless a most troublesome disease in many places, particularly in old gardens, and I have known instances where nearly all of the stalks of large plants have been swept away by it. We were told at the last meeting that a change of location is a remedy for this trouble. Undoubtedly this is a great help, but not wholly effective, as I found the present season the disease had followed some of my plants which were moved into new ground last fall. It seems to me the society should take up the study of the diseases of the peony, and not only determine their nature, but also find effective ways of preventing them, for it is a vital matter, particularly with the amateur, whose garden room is usually limited and is constantly in use, so that he is unable to run away from diseases but must find some means whereby he can fight them on the spot.

"Another matter of importance is the registration of new varieties, and some systematic method of recognizing new varieties of more than ordinary merit. Registration would naturally fall to the care of the nomenclature committee, and I suggest that steps be taken to establish this.

"Recognition of superiority of new varieties is a more complex matter and needs careful thought before any system is decided upon.

"Another matter which seems to come within the jurisdiction of this society is the branding of dishonest dealers in peonies. Some means should be found whereby these unprincipled frauds can be driven out of business. We are all liable to mistakes and we all feel charitable toward the one who makes them honestly, but he who makes them dishonestly should be dealt with; with a heavy hand, by this society when detected."

A committee consisting of Prof. Craig, Mr. Humphreys and Mr. George was appointed and later brought in the following report on the secretary's recommendations:

Plant Diseases.

Your committee recommends that a special committee on plant diseases be organized. We recommend that this work be associated with the trial studies at Cornell, and we would recommend that the plant pathologist of the Cornell University Experiment Station, Prof. H. H. Whetzel, be chairman of that committee. We also suggest that all members of this society having diseased plants or coming in contact with parasitic troubles, should refer these, with samples of plant material, to the chairman of the committee on the diseases of the peony.

New Varieties.

Your committee recommends that proposed names for new varieties shall be submitted to the committee on nomenclature for the purpose of avoiding duplication.

We recommend the appointment of a committee on new varieties. The duty of this committee shall be to pass upon the merits of varieties whose names have been accepted by the committee on nomenclature and which have been tested in the Cornell trial grounds and exhibited at the annual exhibition of the association.

Your committee recommends that reports on new varieties be of three kinds: those recognizing merits; those specifying superior merits, and those specifying highest merit. Also that these certificates bear the seal of the society.

We desire to place ourselves on record as condemning strongly habits of carelessness, and of fraud in the handling and naming or renaming of varieties, which result in unnecessary confusion and duplication. We would further recommend that where any case of unquestionable fraud in the naming or renaming of varieties comes before this society, the perpetrator thereof shall be debarred from membership.

This report was accepted and adopted and the following committees appointed by the president: Committee on Plant Diseases—Prof. Whetzel, chairman; A. H. Fewkes, W. C. Barry, W. A. Peterson, O. A. Wild, H. H. Warren. Committee on New Varieties—A. H. Fewkes, chairman; S. G. Harris, C. J. Hunn. Committee on Nomenclature—Prof. Saunders, chairman; B. H. Farr, Jos. Dauphin.

Treasurer's Report.

The treasurer's report showed receipts amounting to $631.17 and expenditures of $120.34, leaving a balance in the savings bank of $510.83, drawing three per cent interest. A committee of Mr. Hedges and Mr. Fewkes audited this report.

Mr. Thurlow, of Massachusetts, Mr. George, of Ohio, and Mr. Humphreys, of Pennsylvania, were appointed judges and later reported the awards. They called especial attention to the fact that the quality of the flowers in the exhibits of amateurs was equal in many ways to anything shown in the exhibition hall. The judges also recommended that the society adopt rules for the guidance of those judging exhibits, the rules to cover such points as the correctness in the matter of numbers exhibited, colors as called for by the schedule, and such other items as may properly be governed by exhibition rules.

Officers and Meeting Place.

It was unanimously voted to hold the next meeting at Ithaca, subject to the call of the secretary and at the time of blooming of the test plats.

The old board of officers was unanimously reelected as follows: President, C. W. Ward, Queens, N. Y.; vice-president, W. A. Peterson, Chicago; secretary, A. H. Fewkes, Newton Highlands, Mass.; treasurer, J. H. Humphreys, Germantown, Pa. G. C. Thurlow, West Newbury, Mass., was chosen director for three years, to succeed W. A. Smith, whose term had expired.

The committee on resolutions, consisting of Messrs. Harris, George and Good, presented resolutions on the death of Francis L. Blake, of Rochdale, Mass., and resolutions thanking the college and Prof. Craig and his assistants for their hospitality, and especially appreciatory of the kindness and hospitality of Professor and Mrs. Craig. Thanks were extended to Prof. Coit for his excellent work.

New Members.

The following new members were elected: Geo. C. Thurlow, West Newbury, Mass.; Frank Seither, Cleveland, O.; Willis H. Robinson, Flint, N. Y.; Geo. F. Carter, Syracuse, N. Y.; S. H. Harris, Tarrytown, N. Y.; F. C. Walcott, New York Mills, N. Y.; Joseph Dauphin, Queens, N. Y.; R. T. Brown, Queens, N. Y.; C. Ward Welch, Springfield, O.; James Cowan, Oshawa, Ontario, Can. Prof. J. Elliot Coit and Prof. H. H. Whetzel were elected honorary members of the society.

Convention Notes.

The fourth annual exhibition of the American Peony Society was voted the most successful in its history and the New York State College of Agriculture at Cornell an unusually good place to hold a meeting.

The Cornell test plats furnished a fine place for the study of the different varieties of peonies, and the members improved the opportunity.

The membership of the society has increased by fourteen members over last year. It now numbers fifty-two.

The list of the French society is to be published by the treasurer and will be available to members.

Anyone joining the Peony Society, and paying the initiation fee of $5, will receive free a copy of the "Peony Check List."

Some prominent trade visitors were: C. W. Ward, of Queens, N. Y.; Mr. Reeves, of Cleveland, O.; G. H. Harris, of Tarrytown, N. Y.; A. H. Fewkes, of Newton Highlands, Mass.; J. H. Humphreys, of Germantown, Pa.; G. C. Thurlow, of West Newbury, Mass.; Frank Seither, of Cleveland, O.; James Cowan, of Oshawa, Ontario, Can.; F. C. Walcott, of New York Mills, N. Y.; Geo. F. Carter, of Syracuse, N. Y.; J. Wilkinson Elliott, of Pittsburgh, Pa.

Geo. Hollis, of South Weymouth, Mass., was accorded special mention for a fine display of nineteen seedlings of the peony, all originated by him.

PEONY DELICATISSIMA.

The illustration on page 9 is from a photograph showing one of the grandest sights in the big peony plantation of the Peterson Nursery, Chicago. These are the rows of Peony Delicatissima, which is one of the best clear pink varieties. It is so similar to Floral Treasure that some authorities consider these names to be synonyms. At the peony show in Chicago in 1905 Delicatissima was awarded second prize in the class for 100 pink, but the Peterson Nursery also had been given first prize in this class and the rules were found to prohibit the same exhibitor receiving both premiums, so second was bestowed upon J. F. Rosenfield for Floral Treasure. Wm. A. Peterson says that if there is any better pink peony than Delicatissima it is Livingstone, of which he says he now has the largest stock of any peony grower in the world.

REDEMPTION OF HOGBACKS.

[A paper by Thomas J. Oberlin, of Sinking Spring, Pa., read before the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, at its meeting July 2.]

Here and there throughout the county of Berks and the adjacent country in Pennsylvania can be seen bare, uncovered spots, usually at some elevation above the surrounding wooded or verdure-covered surface; in many instances they are inaccessible to the ordinary methods of tillage—where a plow would find it exceedingly difficult to draw a furrow through the hard, sterile or rocky soil, even if it were possible to get there with that implement.

These arid, desert-like spots hump themselves up in conspicuous fashion, visible frequently at long distances, and mar by their unsightly barrenness what would otherwise form a portion of a beautiful, verdure-covered landscape.

In the south they call such patches hogbacks, and we have borrowed the term and applied it to similar situations in Berks county. Just why our southern friends have called them hogbacks has not been so clearly explained to the writer, unless it is that through the exercise of a lively imagination they have observed some similarity in their general contour to the dorsal surface of a Georgia razor-back when his swinishness arises from his slumbers, yawns and elevates his spinal column to a maximum curvature.

Two Classes of Hogbacks.

The hogbacks of Berks county admit of classification. In the first class we would place those existing in the red shale and yellow gravel districts, in the second those found in the limestone formation; the former frequently are pictures of desolation, being entirely devoid of vegetation on their crests except perhaps some lichens and mosses, every particle of arable soil having been washed away by the winds and rains of past centuries; the latter are usually more accessible and respond more readily to the hand of the gardener, the sharp lichen-clothed rocks protrude at the apex and also at the sides through the shallow, loose soil bordered perhaps by thin grass, and some depauperate shrubbery struggles to live, wedged in tightly between the rocks.

The task of redeeming these seemingly useless spots from their native savagery, in which they have lain for centuries since the first pioneers cleared the surrounding land in the fertile valleys and dells and began its cultivation, seems to be a most forbidding and hopeless one. It seems as if it would be necessary to invoke a good fairy to pass her magic wand over these barren places before anything of beauty or value could be brought forth; and yet, it has been the experience of the writer to observe at least a few such spots that have been made productive without rubbing a lamp or resorting to any other Aladdin-like processes.

It also is strange that Nature herself has covered just such spots with suitable flowering plants and left a great many uncovered to be completed by man, but such is really the case. The flowering plants, however, that Nature has placed there have no particular value as a cut flower; their mission, it seems, has been to simply suggest to man what should be planted there either for profit or beauty, as will be shown later on.

Beginning of Redemption.

The next thought will be, How is this work of redemption to begin? We can say in a general way that if we dig or blast pockets into these barren or rocky places, wide and deep enough to hold a sufficient quantity of good rich soil, and the surface is not so precipitous as to be washed away by heavy rains, we can succeed in covering them with shrubbery or low evergreens. This has been successfully done. But when the sides of your hogback descend very abruptly, so that a foothold can scarcely be maintained and the foregoing method fails us, what can be done?

And this brings us to the consideration of two specific hogbacks which have been under our observation for a number of years.

A Specific Case.

A gentleman has a beautiful estate south of Reading, Pa.; its surface is very undulating, with some steep hills. Near the top of one of these is the mansion, commanding an extensive view of the surrounding country, the Schuylkill river and the city of Reading visible in the distance, the Blue mountains in successive ridges fading away on the hazy horizon. Overhead the banks of clouds speeding across the valley cast their shadows on the surface of the earth as if racing along. It is a charming picture and to mar it all, in the center of this beautiful estate there arises a barren red and yellow hogback in all its dreary nakedness, which has defied all efforts to be clothed.

Here, Nature appears to have somewhat reversed the order of things. This hogback is in the midst of cultivated fields and a beautiful spring which supplies the reservoir on the premises is near the top of a hill, with an old Indian trail leading to it, when you would naturally expect to find the spring near the bottom of the hill.

This barren spot looked particularly repulsive when you walked along the Indian trail in the direction of the spring and as this was a favorite walk of the owner it was decreed that the hogback or barren must disappear and if possible have a green covering during the entire year.

Unsuccessful Efforts.

Pine and cedar trees had been tried without success. Pockets were dug and evergreen honeysuckles planted, but at that elevation so high and so dry the struggle for existence became each succeeding year more precarious.

Finally the owner sent for the writer to help solve the problem. I went, I saw, but I did not conquer immediately. I approached it with great caution and some trepidation, as you would something uncanny or hoodooed, looked it over rather sadly, covered as it was here and there with the melancholy debris of former failures. The remains of the nurseryman's stock were still there, stiff and stark in death, like dead men's skulls and the bleaching skeletons of a desert caravan strewn about as a warning to newcomers. Of course, with so much mortality covering the hogback you could hardly expect me to promise anything except to wander homeward and think it over profoundly and seriously.

I tried to think of every flowering plant that grows on the barren summits of the South Mount. At last, I thought of Tephrosia Virginiana, hoary pea or catgut, and what a refreshing symposium of color and beauty it was on the dry and barren crests of the mountain! It has a root so long and tough and penetrating it takes all your strength to uproot it.

Ah! I thought, if we could stretch some catgut on this man's hogback, then, there would be some music when the fiddler comes along.

Commercially, you can procure catgut in all the letters of the chromatic scale when the violinist's article is needed, but when it comes to the other catgut, Tephrosia Virginiana, there was none to be found in the market.

Lathyrus Latifolius Succeeds.

There was nothing that we could do except to look for an allied plant now under cultivation and supplied by growers of hardy perennials, a plant of another genera and in the same family, the Leguminosæ or pulse family. We concluded that Lathyrus latifolius, everlasting pea, of a pink-purple color, which also has a long and tough root, would succeed on the barren.

As indicated before, it was the tephrosia that suggested the lathyrus, but we had never seen the latter grow under such conditions and its trial would be in a great measure experimental. If it succeeded, it would at any rate cover the hogback during the summer months. We hastened to the owner of the property with our explanation. "If it succeeds, we will also have flowers for cutting," he said. "That is very good; we will try it."

We went right at it in October and planted several hundred. We dug trenches transversely across the back, taking great care to place the excavated earth and stones at such places that they would not run away from us, loosened up the bottom of the trench and mixed some ammoniated bone phosphate thoroughly with the soil and laid in the roots at an angle, covering them with what loose soil we had, and placed stones and rocks on top to keep the soil from rolling; we might call this a stone mulch. We had to wait until the following June for results and the way those perennial peas grew and bloomed on that hogback was a surprise to everybody. There was such a plethora of flowers that all the blooms could not be used at the house for decorating. This was six years ago and the vines have since grown ranker and denser and when the season of bloom is over a thick mat of dark green foliage covers the barren. This is the story of a hogback of the first class.

A Limestone Hogback.

At present we are actively engaged in reclaiming one of the second class or in a limestone formation. In recent years there has been no income from this patch except that the scant growth of grass was grazed by cattle. In this case the strata of limestone have no dip but projected vertically from the surface of the soil. The surface soil, if there is any, is of various degrees of thickness; the subsoil is a very stiff yellow clay. Between the projecting rocks there often is sufficient space to drive a hole with a post-bar in which a root can be inserted and the earth gently tamped with a wooden rammer. In these holes and on the highest parts of the hogback we have planted 200 or 300 of the new perennial pea, Lathyrus latifolius Mary Lovett; of a beautiful carmine and shell-pink color, a very desirable florists' flower.

Hydrangeas Planted.

In places where the soil is deeper and the rocks do not obstruct, pockets have been dug, the yellow clay removed and the pockets filled with sand and scrapings from the street gutters, and about a quart of Quaker City pourette thoroughly mixed with the sand and scrapings. One hundred standard Hydrangea paniculata grandiflora and 200 of the new Hydrangea arborescens grandiflora alba have been planted in these larger excavations, another part of the premises, and mulched with stable manure kept several inches away from the stems of the shrubs.

As it would be impracticable to give this hogback horse cultivation on account of its peculiar contour, the inaccessibility to many of its parts and its rocky character, we propose to let the Mary Lovetts have their own sweet will and grow riotously among the grass and weeds where the latter cannot be held in check with scythe and sickle.

Where regular distances could be maintained, the hydrangeas have been set about six feet apart each way, so that the scythe can have a rather free swing to keep down the grass and weeds which will be permitted to remain as a mulch. Many of the projecting rocks have been knocked off with a heavy sledge so as to bring them on a level with the general surface and not interfere with the mowing. Immediately around the plants we will cultivate by hand with the hoe.

As yet, we can report no results, but we look forward to as happy a termination of our labors as in the previous case already related. We expect our labors to have their reward and we will send the products of this hogback to the Philadelphia markets—not a great quantity this summer, but more in the seasons to come.

No Soft Snap.

My hearers must not classify the work done in this instance with the so-called soft snaps; there is truthfully nothing very soft-snappy about it. It is a job full of hard work. To bestride a hogback in the hot sunshine and ride it successfully to an artistic finish requires courage and perseverance. It is not a ride in an Indian howdah with silken hangings and a shading canopy.

Nature unselfishly gives us many suggestions that are helpful, written on her hills and slopes, if we yield to her dictations and take them and apply them in our work.

In the way I have related, many of the hogbacks now lying idle as waste places could be redeemed from their apparent uselessness and be made objects of beauty in the landscape and sources of profit as well.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Sweet Peas.

Sweet peas are easily the most popular of our earlier summer blooming annuals. The indoor crop is not yet entirely gone, but with the first appearance of the outdoor ones they will be in little demand, having a faded, dejected look and being entirely lacking in the freshness of those produced in the open.

Anyone who has mastered the art of growing good sweet peas outdoors can secure very fair returns for his flowers. We don't mean the man or woman who has sown seed at the rate of about an ounce per yard run and never thinned the plants, who neither mulches nor waters them and allows seeds to be produced from the outset, but the intelligent grower who will sow thinly, or at least thin severely, cultivate freely, mulch heavily when hot weather starts, soak with water occasionally and keep the flowers closely picked. He will have flowers to be proud of. During hot, dry weather the plants appreciate a hosing overhead each evening. It is very refreshing after a day of 90 degrees in the shade. Watering is better left alone altogether unless done thoroughly.

In picking the flowers, care should be taken that they are dry, or as nearly dry as possible. If damp they will speedily spot if placed in water in a cold room or cellar. In the case of the orange, pink, scarlet and crimson shades it is unwise to pick them during the heat of the day, or the colors will bleach badly. To pick the flowers when they are hot, in bunches of fifty or 100, and lay them along the rows until the daily harvest is garnered is poor policy. Get them into water as speedily as possible, and to preserve the color let as little sunshine as possible fall on them. If you cannot pick in the morning, before 9 o'clock, leave the operation until at least 4 p. m. Don't allow any seed pods to develop. They speedily cripple the plants. Anyone can grow sweet peas outdoors, but the number producing good ones are not legion.

Asters.

Our earliest asters of the American branching type, which practically stood still during the cold weather in May and early June, are now growing freely and making some stout stems. So far we have been free from insect worries and bacterial botherments. We have not yet watered our plants, but in case of continued drought will do so, soaking them thoroughly one day and using the hoe among them on the morrow. A batch in benches under glass are making amazing growth and promise to be in flower by July 10. These we find invaluable for summer use, for carnations grow beautifully less as the torrid weather continues and asters are much preferable for design work, also working in nicely for vase decorations.

Several sowings of asters are needed to ensure a steady supply until frost. The latest should now be ready to prick out and should be planted outdoors about the middle of July. Mixtures of asters, like those of sweet peas, are in little request. A few separate colors will always pay the best. In the case of asters, pure white, pink and lavender blue are the most popular, with a more limited demand for dark blue and rosy red.

For one or two seasons we have planted our latest batch in some empty cold-frames where we could water them well, putting sash on when frost or heavy rains threatened to spoil the blooms. We have always found it repaid us for the extra labor incurred.

Gladioli.

Gladioli are another important and indispensable outdoor summer crop. Like asters and sweet peas, they love rich ground and plenty of moisture, but will withstand drought better than the two other plants named if they are kept well cultivated. If the first planting was made early in April it will not be long before some flower spikes appear. The latest batch is just planted and, given an open fall, will provide some useful spikes until well along in October.

It will hardly pay the average florist to grow a mixed assortment of gladioli. Better stick to one or two named varieties, or, at least, distinct shades. There is no finer variety in commerce today than America, although it is a little high priced for florists to plant in quantity. The color is one that appeals to everyone. No matter who raised this fine variety, and I note that much ink has been wasted in a futile effort to settle the question, we think it is destined to become as popular among gladioli as Enchantress is among carnations. G. Princeps I cannot recommend as a florists' flower. While the blooms are big and showy, they are poor keepers and rarely over three are fresh on a spike at a time.

In cutting gladioli for market, if you want your bulbs for another season, don't cut them down too hard. Also cut them when four or five flowers are expanded.

The others will open in water as well as on the plant.

General Outdoor Work.

In all probability you are planning a little more glass, a new boiler or at least some new benches. You are also, no doubt, anxious to get the roof of some house painted. The hot summer months is the time to do this, and on no account postpone making a start on it for a single day. There will, however, be considerable outdoor work needing attention for the next two months. If you keep live stock you probably have haymaking to do. This cannot be neglected, but while it is in progress there is danger of weeds getting the upper hand in field or garden. Plan to keep the ground thoroughly stirred with the cultivator and use the hoe on weeds. Where they grow very near the plants some pulling out by hand will be needed. Don't allow your lawn to go untrimmed and keep your front approach as attractive as possible. Use a scythe among the rank weeds which may crop up between the greenhouses, before they run to seed, and do not forget the loam piles, which will speedily be overgrown with rampant weeds if not given a little care. The worst of the insect war for the season seems to be over. Cutworms are on the wane. Leaf-eating insects on trees and shrubs have already done their worst, and if we can now keep aphides in check all may be well. Where you can use the hose, force of water is the best antidote for the last named pests.

Potting Retarded Lilies.

We have just finished potting batches of Lilium speciosum album and L. auratum, these being retarded bulbs. These are placed on the floor of a cool cellar and given one good soaking of water, being then allowed to dry out well before giving any more. For Christmas these lilies prove very useful and are something of a novelty. L. speciosum album is the best all-around variety and is splendid for design work, being a nice change from the omnipresent Harrisii or longiflorum. If intended merely for cutting, a good plan is to grow a number of bulbs in boxes six inches deep, thus providing a better root run for them.

Lilium Harrisii will arrive soon and, if needed for Christmas, should be potted as soon as possible. The bulbs of this lily were poor last season, discouraging many from trying it at all. It will be some years before we receive the quality of bulbs procurable a decade ago. Plants of speciosum and auratum potted in November are now coming into bloom.

NEPHROLEPIS AMERPOHLII.

The accompanying illustration is from a photograph of a plant of the new Nephrolepis Amerpohlil, taken at Philadelphia, where William P. Craig, who owns half the stock, is preparing for its dissemination. He will have a large exhibit of it at the S. A. F. convention.

Nephrolepis Amerpohlil originated with Edward Amerpohl, at Janesville, Wis., and was given a certificate at the Dayton convention. One of the special merits of the fern is that it shows its character in quite young plants. The specimen illustrated is in a 6-inch pot.

BABY RAMBLERS.

I am sending a specimen of my Baby Rambler roses. They are affected with some kind of disease, for which I cannot account. I bought the dormant plants from a nurseryman this spring. They have not done well at any time and are now dying. The leaves look as though the sun had scalded them. Please tell me what is the trouble. P. J. K.

These Baby Ramblers are not affected with any disease. The trouble with them is simply that they have been forced into leaf before they had acquired sufficient root action to sustain the growth. Dormant stock never does well when benched in the spring. The plants should first be potted and kept in a cool, moist house and in a rather dry condition until root action is well started, and then gradually exposed to light and higher temperature, when they can use more water and sunshine.

As for curing them after they get into the condition described, it is almost impossible. Lift them from the bench and heel them in outside and give no water, a few may survive. RIBES.

TEMPERATURE FOR CUT BLOOMS.

Will you please state at what temperature blooms of carnations, roses and mums keep best after cutting? J. M.

The first and most essential condition towards the successful preservation of cut blooms is to have a good cool room, one constructed on the most approved principles, which must combine dryness of atmosphere and airiness, and the chamber of which must be sufficiently isolated from the influence of outside atmospheric conditions.

The temperature of the sorting room should, if possible, never exceed the temperature of the house the cut came from; in fact, it is safer to have it a few degrees lower. The temperature of the cold chamber should never get lower than 48 degrees, ranging from that to 52 degrees, above which temperature the flowers will go wrong.

After being in storage for twenty-four hours the stock should be taken out, re-assorted and have half an inch of the stem cut off, so that they can absorb a fresh supply of water. In forty-eight hours, and especially during the summer months, they begin to enter the salted stage and the less of that kind of stock the grower handles, so much the more satisfactory will it be, both for himself and his customers.

Regarding the right temperature of water to be used for storage purposes, care should be taken not to give the cut a sudden chill by putting the stems in water which is too cold, or to raise the temperature with hot water previous to putting them in the cold room. A safe rule to go by is to strike a medium between the temperature of the house they were grown in and the temperature of the cold room. Thus, if the temperature of the house the blooms were grown in is 56 degrees and that of the cold room is 50 degrees, the water should be 53 degrees. As water approaches its greatest density at about 41 degrees, it should never be used near or below that point for storing the cut from a greenhouse.

These last remarks apply with more force to carnation blooms, they being more sensitive to sudden changes than roses are. Thousands are sent to sleep daily by inattention to these seemingly trivial matters. RIBES.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Little need be written about market conditions, which are now about as poor as can possibly be. The end of the June weddings and school graduations took away any little support remaining and growers are glad to accept any reasonable offer for the bulk of what they are now sending in. While some nice summer roses, such as Carnot and Kaiserin, are arriving, as well as some nice outdoor hybrids, the general run of indoor flowers has been seriously affected by the hot wave. Carnations are also selling low, although first-class flowers still make moderate prices. Peonies have been a glut and hard to move at any price. They will soon be over, with a continuation of hot weather. Indoor sweet peas are becoming poor, but some outdoor ones are already arriving, Sunbeams, Earliest of All and Mont Blanc, while a few days will see all the popular sorts represented. There is no special call for any other flowers and no change in prices of green goods.

Rose Show.

The intense heat and drought brought hardy roses on with a rush, but we have seen better quality flowers than were staged June 29 and 30 at Horticultural hall.

M. H. Walsh, usually the largest individual exhibitor, was unable this season to show at all, his blooms being too late. In his absence the principal prizes went to W. J. Clemson, J. O. Christensen gardener, who was first for general display of 100 bottles, twelve varieties, three of each; for six named varieties, three of each; for six blooms Frau Karl Druschki; for three blooms, any novelty, and for display filling fifty vases. Other successful competitors were E. Lewis, W. Whitman, M. Sullivan gardener; J. Bazeley, Mrs. J. L. Gardner, W. Thatcher gardener, and Mrs. Frederick Ayer, Geo. Page gardener. For 100 bottles there was a spirited competition, prizes going to W. J. Clemson, Mrs. J. L. Gardner, E. L. Lewis, J. G. Wright and Mrs. E. M. Gill in the order named. Mrs. Harriet Foote had a fine table of hybrid teas.

Blue Hill Nurseries were first and second for thirty varieties herbaceous plants with good collections. Mrs. J. L. Gardner was first for display of Canterbury bells and thirty vases delphiniums.

A number of peony classes carried over from the preceding week attracted good competition. For thirty or more double varieties, prizes were awarded to George Hollis, Dr. C. S. Minot and T. C. Thurlow. For twelve varieties, three of each, James McKissick won with a splendid lot; E. L. Lewis, second; W. Whitman, third. Geo. Hollis was first for twelve Japanese singles. For six named doubles J. McKissick was first and T. C. Thurlow second. For six rose pink T. C. Thurlow won; J. S. Chase, second. T. C. Thurlow was again in the lead for six salmon pink and six blooms, red or crimson, J. S. Chase being second.

There were numerous miscellaneous exhibits. E. J. Shaylor filled a large table with a splendid collection of peonies, these comprising many fine novelties and a couple of first-class seedlings, pale pink in color, of large size and equal to the finest productions of Dessert or Kelway. T. C. Thurlow also put up a large collection of his varieties, as well as some fine kalmia. George Hollis had a good table, which included Enchantment, double light pink; Admiral Togo, dark red, and Geo. Hollis French, white, all fine seedlings. The last named were awarded honorable mention. Blue Hill Nurseries and R. & J. Farquhar & Co. also had large displays of peonies, the last named firm also having an extensive collection of herbaceous plants, bay trees, palms, aralias and other plants. F. J. Rea had a table of herbaceous plants. Iris orientalis Snow Queen received honorable mention. J. L. McKissick received a first-class certificate for Peony Rose Bonheur, one of the finest in the show, also exhibited by E. J. Shaylor.

J. E. Rothwell, E. Johansson gardener, received a certificate of merit for Cypripedium Emil Johansson (C. Euryale x C. Philippinense), a very good cross. From the same exhibitor came a large table of cut orchids. As usual at the summer shows, however, these attract far less notice than the popular outdoor flowers. E. J. Mitton, J. Lawson gardener, received honorable mention for well grown Crassula coccinea. Wilfred Wheeler had a fine collection of digitalis, also outdoor-grown sweet peas, etc. Mrs. R. Leason, James Cartwright gardener, received a certificate of merit for a finely bloomed specimen of Oncidium sphacelatum. He also had other fine and rare plants. Mrs. E. M. Gill had a general display of flowers. W. H. Heustis had a table of branches of shrubs and trees. Mrs. E. A. Wilkie a tank of nymphæa, Walter Hunnewell tables of rhododendrons and kalmias and several exhibits of sweet william and roses.

Various Notes.

Although there are no other prize exhibitions scheduled before July 20, there will be displays at Horticultural hall each Saturday, and the public will also be admitted on Sundays. There is great interest shown in the weekly shows, as evidenced by the large attendance of the public.

There was an excellent attendance at the Gardeners' and Florists' Club's field day in the Boston park system June 29. Piloted by J. W. Duncan and others of the staff, the members spent an enjoyable afternoon examining the shrubs and trees in the several parks and riverways.

Johnson & Nelson are adding a 300-foot house to their plant in Framingham, to be used for carnations, which they grow well.

We are pleased to report that J. A. Pettigrew is convalescing satisfactorily after his operation.

John Flood, late of Buffalo, has assumed charge of the H. A. Stevens Co. plant in Dedham. Carnations, mushrooms and peonies are specialties with this firm, which will now be known as Flood & Co.

S. J. Goddard is building an iron-frame house for violets, the material being from the Lord & Burnham Co.

Mr. Briggs, of the Steele-Briggs Co., Toronto, Canada, was among the visitors to Boston last week.

Mrs. James Wheeler is convalescing after a critical operation.

Marshall again proved the champion strawberry June 29 at Horticultural hall. Abington showed up well, as did McKinley, Sample and Golden Gate. For an early crop, Senator Dunlap is much the best, being of rich crimson color, good size and of fine flower.

GRAND RAPIDS.

Current Comment.

The hot spell is with us at last. It gave a quick impetus to the sale of bedding plants, which is just beginning to wane. Everyone is cleaned out close on bedding plants and there is much astonishment, a great deal of pleasure, to say nothing of the financial benefit that has accrued from advancing the retail prices of bedding stock, hanging baskets, window-boxes, etc. The few who were too timid to ask the advance did not sell out any closer than those florists who asked $1.50 per dozen for 4-inch geraniums, as against the former $1 per dozen. Twelve-inch hanging baskets jumped from $1 to $1.50 each, refilling from 75 cents to $1.25, border plants from 50 cents to 75 cents per dozen. The most remarkable feature about the advance is the fact that the people took the raise in price very easily; it seemed no trick at all. When asked why prices had gone up, the reply, "Everything has gone up and it was necessary to raise the price on plants as well," called for little comment except, "Yes, that's so," and immediately the customers proceeded to order what they wanted. Of course an occasional customer did kick, but the number were so few that they are not worth considering.

The cold, backward spring and late frosts have had a bad effect on the carnation plants in the field. Bruins Slot & Sons say that out of 25,000 planted they expect to get between 5,000 and 6,000; the rest succumbed to the frost. Henry Smith planted out from pots, and while they are only just beginning to make proper growth, they weathered the gale in good shape. Eli Cross planted both from pots and from the sand; except for ordinary losses, they will come all right. Chas. Chadwick's patch shows the effects of the weather, the plants looking as if they had not budged from the time they were put out, but the loss is small and the plants will come. Crabb & Hunter's loss, out of 110,000 planted out, will not exceed eight per cent; the rest are doing finely. The carnations of the Grand Rapids Floral Co. are beginning to break and grow nicely, although some of them got it hard. From now on it is expected they will grow fast and make up for the time lost on account of a backward spring.

The hot weather brought flowers out too fast. There are plenty of carnations, although the quality is steadily getting poorer. Roses are also growing smaller and getting scarce, as replanting is in progress.

Business has fallen away somewhat, yet is steady enough to keep all hands busy.

The florists are glad that the filling of boxes and baskets is about over, so their attention can be given to getting ready to plant for next winter.

ST. LOUIS FLORISTS' CLUB.

The St. Louis Florists' Club was organized June 28, 1887, in the rooms of the Mercantile Club. There were present at the first meeting the following florists: J. M. Jordan, S. Kehrmann, L. Armstrong, J. S. Wilson, Wm. Ellison, Chas. Cannon, Chas. A. Juengel, E. W. Guy, R. Frow, H. Michel, Alex. Waldbart, Wm. Schray and Julius Koenig, Sr. Of these five are dead, J. M. Jordan, Chas. Cannon, H. Michel, Wm. Schray and Julius Koenig, Sr. Four are still members of the club. They are J. S. Wilson, Chas. Juengel, E. W. Guy and R. W. Frow. Messrs. Kehrmann, Armstrong, Ellison and Waldbart are still among the living but not members of the club.

The first officers of the club were: President, J. M. Jordan; vice-president, H. Michel; secretary, L. Armstrong; treasurer, A. Waldbart; trustees, Messrs. Kehrmann, Cannon and Juengel.

The club in its twenty years of existence has had seventeen presidents, seven treasurers and four secretaries, and has entertained two S. A. F. conventions, the first in 1893 and the other during the World's Fair year, 1904. J. M. Jordan, the club's first president, served the S. A. F. as its president in 1880, when the convention was held in Boston. Prof. Wm. Trelease served the S. A. F. as vice-president in 1893, and J. J. Beneke in 1904.

The club at the present time is in a most prosperous condition, with all of its members working in perfect harmony. Meetings have never been so well attended as at the present time. Its meetings are held on every second Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The annual election of officers will take place August 8, when a new set of officers will be elected to serve the ensuing year.

In the accompanying illustration appear the faces of all the club's seventeen presidents, as follows:

Top row—Chas. Cannon, J. M. Jordan, J. F. Ammann, Alex. Waldbart, James W. Dunford.

Middle row—John Young, C. C. Sanders, H. C. Irish, J. W. Kunz and Frank J. Fillmore.

Bottom row—J. J. Beneke, E. W. Guy, Fred H. Meinhardt, E. H. Michel, Chas. A. Juengel, A. S. Halstead and Henry Michel. J. J. B.

WE highly appreciate the work you do in encouraging the trade and hope the REVIEW may continue to improve.—GRANER BROS., Washington, D. C.

ANNVILLE, PA.—D. A. Whiskeyman is improving and enlarging his greenhouses. One house will hereafter be used for vegetables and another for chrysanthemums.

THE WEEKLY FLORISTS' REVIEW

is printed Wednesday evening and mailed early Thursday morning. It is earnestly requested that all advertisers and correspondents mail their "copy" to reach us by Monday, or Tuesday at latest, instead of Wednesday morning, as many have done in the past.

THE DEATH ROLL.

John Halliday.

John Halliday, aged 88, a well-known florist, of Lynchburg, Va., was instantly killed by a fast passenger train on the Southern railway in South Lynchburg June 26. He was a native of Scotland, coming to America when 13 years of age. He lived first in Baltimore, where he now has many relatives, some of whom are florists. He came to Lynchburg about 1850.

Results bring advertising.
The REVIEW brings results.

HENRY A. DREER, Inc., Philadelphia, calls its new wholesale list the "Convention Number."

THE Rapid Addressing Machine Co., Chicago and New York, makes a business of supplying lists of addresses, or addressing envelopes, in any department of the business world. Having what it claims to be superior facilities through its connection with R. G. Dun & Co., for securing all the new names and getting rid of the dead ones, it is interesting to note that its list of florists, seedsmen and nurserymen includes just 10,862 names. This is especially worthy of note as showing how thoroughly the REVIEW's 8,000 weekly edition covers the whole trade.

THE READERS' CORNER.

Sweet Peas and Lettuce.

I find here a peculiar state of affairs. Sweet peas live out over winter and form clumps, and can be transplanted just like the hardy variety. Now, it occurs to me that I could pot them in the fall and ship to some greenhouse in the east in January. Why not?

Also I can grow lettuce in the fall, have it in 2-inch pots and ship in January to some grower under glass, and he ought to be able to grow three crops where he grows one ordinarily. This could be done after cleaning off a bench.

Will you please refer this to some grower for me, who might be interested?
Ashland, Ore. CHAS. H. BARTOW.

STUNTED FERNS.

Inclosed find some of my fern leaves. Will you please state what is the matter with my ferns and what I ought to do with them?
J. W.

The ferns in question are apparently Bostons, and the specimens show signs of a sudden check in growth, the tips of the fronds being stunted. This condition might be brought about by either one of two or three causes, the most likely cause having been dryness at the root on some bright day. Too much feeding with strong manure before the plants are well rooted will also cause trouble of this kind. The plants will probably outgrow this condition in a few weeks' time, and the stunted fronds may then be gradually cut out, if they disfigure the plants at that time.

Do not get the plants sodden before they are well rooted, but water more freely as they become established, also giving plenty of light and air all the time.
W. H. TAPLIN.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Both demand and supply have been steadily receding in the last week, but have maintained about the same relative proportions as a week ago. The receipts are now down nearly to the ordinary summer level and demand is, if anything, a little better than usual for the first part of July. There are abundant supplies for all requirements, although the proportion of low grade stock is now high and it takes some skirmishes to get material which will stand shipment and give satisfaction.

The item most in demand is the American Beauty rose. Supplies are rather larger than usual at this season of the year, for a number of growers have planned summer crops. Quality is nothing to brag about, being on the usual hot weather basis; small buds and not much color. Prices hold fairly firm. Of other roses, the best demand is for Kaiserin and the best grades are selling well. There has been a good supply of this rose up to this week, but now cuts are off with several growers; and when Kaiserin is off, it is away off. There are some fine Richmond. Killarney is now being cut by only a few growers, but it holds its color excellently and is selling as well, relatively, as at any time this season. Brides and Maids are soft and the color of the latter is poor.

The receipts of carnations continue ahead of market requirements. The flowers are growing smaller day by day and the pink varieties are losing color. Some good Genevieve Lord sell fairly well, but it is impossible to clean out the daily receipts at prices that are profitable to the growers. Rather than spending their time cutting and bunching the soft stock many of them now are sending in, they would better be devoting their attention to preparing for the approaching season.

The indoor sweet peas are about at an end and outdoor ones are taking their place. Quality, therefore, is not so good as it has been. There are now practically no peonies except those from cold storage and the quality of these is generally not up to what it usually is. Easter lilies are still received in considerable quantity in some of the houses, and in some there are quantities of auratums. Each sells slowly. The demand for valley is past.

There are now moderate receipts of outdoor summer flowers, including gladioli and irises. There is no great demand for this stock, although the retailers use them to keep up window display. There is an abundance of all green stuff for the existing demand.

Remember that the wholesale houses now close at 5 p. m., and get your orders in early.

from the wholesale market shows that the quantities of peonies in storage have been much overestimated. It appears that a number of houses which expected to put quantities of the local crop in storage have in reality stored none at all, the quality of the stock being such as to not stand storage. Others have stored less than they expected to, because of the partial failure of their crops, and there are not now many more peonies in storage than there were a week after the cutting ceased last year. There is much difference in the quality of the stock in storage, some of it being in shape to keep till the end of the month without trouble, unless the late frosts have worked an injury not now apparent. Other growers have stock that is wide open and not worth the storage charges which are accruing.

Peonies have been coming out of storage for a week and many houses say they will be cleaned up by July 15, while one or two think their supplies will hold out to August 1. If quality warrants, prices will stiffen as the supply runs down.

Galax.

Bronze galax is reported to be scarce in other markets and Chicago dealers are shipping quantities to jobbers at other points, just as they were shipping large quantities of common ferns a few weeks ago. One order last week was for twenty cases—200,000. You can get a special express rate on that many.

E. C. Amling says that it is with much pleasure that he hears of the reported scarcity of galax, for he says he has 2,000,000 still in storage. Ordinarily bronze galax does not come into this market in the autumn until very near the first of the year, so that he thinks he may have six months of good galax business in sight.

A Nicotine Accident.

The six-year-old son of Herman Lochman took a swallow of nicotine extract Sunday afternoon and died before his father could reach a physician two blocks away.

Mr. Lochman has charge of the section of the Bassett & Washburn plant which is devoted to smilax, asparagus and other greens. He is one of their oldest and most highly valued employees. He has a pleasant home at Hinsdale, with some roses in the garden. Sunday he procured a bottle of nicotine extract from the greenhouses for the purpose of spraying the rose bushes. Using only part of the contents of the bottle, he hid the rest under the porch. The boy went under the porch after a baseball which had rolled there, and found the bottle. Tasting its contents, he screamed and the father, who was only a few feet away, took him in his arms and started for the doctor's. When he reached there the boy was dead. He had strangled. The shock to Mr. Lochman was so great that Sunday afternoon it was necessary to restrain him from doing himself violence. He has a wife and two daughters.

Keep the nicotine extract under lock and key.

Boxwood.

The business done in this market with boxwood has been something enormous in the last eight months. Rarely if ever has a new article sprung into such universal use in so short a time, for it is only a couple of seasons that boxwood has been handled by the wholesale florists. Last year E. H. Hunt and one or two others made experiments in carrying it through the summer in cold storage, but were only partially successful, and now boxwood is practically out of the market until the fresh supply comes in the autumn.

Art versus Labor.

A puzzling problem involving labor and art has been propounded to members of the west park commission by the florists and gardeners' union. The gardeners want the commissioners to decide which is the more skilled and artistic calling—that of making flower plots or driving sprinkling carts. The latter employees receive $5 more a month.

Last April gardeners in all the parks were given an advance in wages to $65 a month. They were satisfied until the teamsters had their pay raised to $70.

June Weather.

The mean temperature at Chicago in June was 66 degrees, which is exactly normal for the month, according to the weather bureau's averages for thirty-seven years. But the first half of the month was cooler than usual and the latter half warmer than normal. It was as cool as 49 degrees June 8 and as hot as 91 degrees June 17. The rainfall was double that of June, 1906, but about normal for the season.

Various Notes.

Anton C. Zvolanek, of Bound Brook, N. J., widely known as a sweet pea grower, was in Chicago one day last week on his way home from a trip to California. It was his first visit to the west.

J. D. Thompson has installed a handsome new Orr & Lockett ice-box in his retail store at Joliet. It is a duplicate of P. J. Hauswirth's box for his new store except that Hauswirth's box is in marble and Thompson's in mahogany.

Preparations for the club's picnic at Morton Grove are progressing favorably.

N. J. Wieter and John Sinner are away for their annual fishing expedition on the Wisconsin lakes.

W. L. Kroeschell, the boiler-maker, has been serving his country for a fortnight, on jury.

H. E. Stump, traffic manager of the American Express Co., who was killed by a fall from an automobile June 27, had many friends in the wholesale cut flower market. He never failed to do his best to relieve the troubles of any wholesaler who called upon him—and the visits were frequent. Mr. Stump's funeral on Sunday brought out a big display of flowers, and many of the wholesalers showed their appreciation of Mr. Stump's friendship by sending designs.

The janitor who looks after the cut flower houses in the Atlas block was killed Saturday afternoon by a fall down the elevator shaft.

E. F. Winterson's son completed the public school course June 28. He expects to go to Culver Military Academy in the autumn and to have a college course before going into the flower business.

E. E. Pieser, of the Kennicott Bros. Co., has been ill with lumbago for a couple of days.

Flint Kennicott is doing jury duty in the Superior court.

The family of A. L. Randall has taken up its summer home on Mr. Randall's Michigan fruit farm, where the commission man himself will spend most of the summer.

Klehm's Nurseries planted a field of peonies two years ago at Goodland, Ind., but they forgot to mention it around the market. A good part of the stock now in storage was cut there this year and is in fine shape.

The retailers have reported a fair run of wedding work for June and it appears from the public records that there were more weddings in town than ever before, 3,306 marriage licenses having been issued in the month.

E. H. Hunt has a new line of grass-growing novelties, which really are deserving of the name. They are the product of a local firm of artists and sculptors.

Two-ply jute twine, of which the wholesale florists use such large quantities, in the last few months has advanced from 9½ to 15 cents per pound.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. says it has had excellent success with its first crop of Kaiserin. Quality has been excellent and the buyers were clamoring for a share of the daily cut.

Ned Washburn is at home for the summer from college at Madison and continuing his course in horticulture at the greenhouses and store of Bassett & Washburn.

Vaughan & Sperry say that at the rate their peonies have been pulled out of cold storage in the last week, they will be cleaned up much sooner than they had expected.

Peter Reinberg's rose crop is holding out heavier than that of most growers. A. C. Spencer says that for the first of July they consider business good.

C. W. McKellar says that the crop of cattleyas in common with other crops is much reduced, but still equal to demand.

George Reinberg reports having sold out clean in rose plants.

Among recent visitors were A. E. Crooks, of Benton Harbor, Mich., and H. W. Buckbee, Rockford, Ill., the latter accompanied by his architect, for he is preparing to remodel his store.

ELKHART, IND.—William Currier has bought the interest of his partner, William H. Snyder, in the greenhouses, for $1,500.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Trade among the retailers was only fair last week and they are not looking for much for the next two months. Funeral work and a few odds and ends of other work will be all that the florists will get during that time. The wholesalers have been up against it the last week or two for fancy stock in roses, for which the trade is craving. There are plenty of the other grades in all varieties, from which they have had to fill their orders.

Carnations are still good, considering the warm days we have been having of late. White is in excellent demand. Colored stock does not fare so well at this time of the year.

Sweet peas are so plentiful that ever so many have to be dumped. The best did not bring over 10 cents per hundred and they were cheaper in thousand lots. All the wholesalers are loaded down with them. Some extra good spikes of gladioli are coming in, which are selling fairly well. There are no peonies in the market at present.

Lily of the valley is still coming in well, with light demand. Among the outdoor stock that is coming in are daisies, cornflowers and candytuft. These do not sell well. There is plenty of good smilax, Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri; also fancy ferns.

Nearly all the retailers will close up Thursday, July 4—one holiday that brings nothing to our business.

The Florists' Club Smoker.

The celebration of the club's twentieth anniversary at a smoker given by the members was largely attended June 29. Before 9 o'clock fully seventy-five were in attendance, including a number of old-timers who were at the first meeting of the club. These were Luther Armstrong, J. S. Wilson, E. W. Guy and S. Kehrmann. It was regretted that more of these did not come. Chairman Smith and Frank Weber were on hand early to welcome the members as they came in. Our suburban members came out in full force. At 9 o'clock Chairman Smith called upon J. J. Beneke to take the chair and open the evening's entertainment.

The first speaker called was President Irish, who welcomed the members, and after some well chosen remarks, expressed the hope that all of the company would make themselves at home, since they were here for a good time, which some of the younger generation would enjoy twenty years hence.

In response to this the chairman called on Luther Armstrong, the first secretary of the club twenty years ago. Mr. Armstrong's remarks were confined to the early day florist and how the club was formed twenty years ago. After this the band played and the members sang.

The next speakers called on were ex-President Fillmore, ex-President Kunz, ex-President Guy and ex-President Sanders. Each spoke of his experiences while he occupied the chair. More music, songs and funny sayings followed. Ex-President Ammann, who served the club two terms as president, then spoke. Mr. Ammann, being an able speaker, during his well pointed remarks made the members sit up and take notice.

The next speakers called were J. S. Wilson, Frank Weber, S. Kehrmann, W. C. Young and Henry Lohrenz. This ended the speaking. Then came the fun. When the chairman called for songs and stories from the different members, those from Charlie Schoenle, F. Fillmore, Sr., Frank Fillmore, Jr., and Fred Ammann were well received. As the hour was growing late, W. C. Smith stated that there was still plenty of refreshments and cigars on hand. A vote was taken that this was one of the most enjoyable affairs ever given by the club.

Various Notes.

We had quite a number of visitors last week. Among them were J. S. Wilson, Western Springs, Ill.; J. E. O'Neil, of Chicago; Mrs. A. C. Canfield, of Springfield, Ill., and A. M. Augspurger, of D. U. Augspurger & Sons, Peoria, Ill. All except Mrs. Canfield attended the club's smoker Saturday night.

W. J. Pilcher, of Kirkwood, is kept busy building his new houses, but found time to come in last week to treat the boys with cigars on his birthday.

Miss Alice Scott, of C. Young & Sons Co., left last week for Atlantic City, N. J., to spend six weeks and to enjoy a much needed rest. Miss Scott will be at Philadelphia for convention week.

W. C. Smith and Frank Weber had to do all the hustling this week for the club's smoker, as Carl Beyer, the other trustee, is laid up at home with a sprained foot, which he got in a jumping match at a picnic June 23. This prevented him from attending the smoker on Saturday night, and he was greatly missed.

W. C. Young, state vice-president of the S. A. F., reports a new railroad rate, a fifteen-day trip for the convention and Jamestown Exposition at $25 for the round trip over the Vandalia railroad. This rate will no doubt be voted O. K. by the club members at the next meeting.

Frank and Edward Sanders, of the Sanders Nursery baseball team, have ar-

The trustees are instructed to make an effort to make this the best attended meeting of the year. J. J. B.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

To add to the summer dullness now so completely established, the wholesale florist is confronted with two strikes, either one of which would be sufficient to give the trade an attack of paralysis. One important city department, the aristocracy of labor known as the garbage collectors, want more money or less hours. Imagine the conditions on the streets where the wholesale flower merchants mostly congregate. On Saturday some of them were paying $4 a load, and over, to private teamsters to cart the discard away. Every wholesaler was clogged with the accumulations. An epidemic is threatened if the strike continues. To add to the general alarm, the icemen have struck and the wholesalers are having trouble in getting a supply of ice for the cool rooms.

There has been no change in prices from a week ago, because they are on rock bottom and low enough for the most unreasonable buyers, and the buyers are now the autocrats; their say is law. Beauties have held well during the week and prices for selected stock have even improved a little. But in no other department of the cut flower industry has there been an advance, and with society away, European travel lessening, the commencements over and the schools all closed, we may as well accept the inevitable for July and August and make the best of it.

the stock lately has been below the standard. There seems to be little general effort made to cold storage them, but those who have the big ice-box facilities reap some benefit from their enterprise.

The season is likely to be late for gladioli grown locally. The south, however, has begun its shipments and the quality is excellent. George Saltford is already receiving over 2,000 daily. Valley and lilies remain at the low quotations of a week ago. Orchids are superb in quality and abundant. The call for them from Newport and the other summer resorts has begun.

The early closing movement is on, but the hour is not a definite one and there seems to be no concerted action. Some will close at 1 o'clock. Several have made 3 p. m. their ultimatum. A few still think it necessary to stay later. It is a pity there could not be an agreement suitable to all. The amount sold after 3 p. m. in the hot summer months will add few ducats to any man's exchequer. Even yet it is possible there may be a compromise that will include every wholesaler in the trade. It will pay in increased loyalty and service on the part of the faithful employees.

The Club Picnic.

The seventh annual outing of the New York Florists' Club, on Tuesday, July 2, was fully the success anticipated. The weather was perfect for the occasion and the attendance up to all expectations. The special efforts made by the committee to cater to the enjoyment of the young folks was warmly appreciated.

The baby exhibit was encouraging. The decision as to the most beautiful was no easy task, and every baby was awarded a prize and deserved it. The dinner was up to the reputation of the Witzel corporation, and all the games were strenuously contested. Such a splendid collection of premiums, from gold pieces to handsome dolls, was never before at the disposal of the committee, considerably over $300 being so distributed.

The sail on the sound, the music and the elaborate refreshments were all in keeping with the club's reputation. No accident marred the universal enjoyment. Full particulars, owing to the early issue of the REVIEW this week, will appear in the next issue. It was an outing that will never be forgotten by the happy crowd that attended it. Next year there should be double the number.

Various Notes.

The Jamestown exposition has attracted few of the New York florists to date. Philip Kessler spent a day there. There seem to be more interesting and profitable ventures in fast travel close at hand. Some of the wholesalers find the equine exhibit worthy of daily visitation. Rumor has one of the speculative contingent $10,000 ahead on the season.

S. Groot, of Sluis & Groot, Enkhuizen, Holland, sailed for home on the steamship New Amsterdam July 3.

Anton Schultheis sailed July 2, with his family, on the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, for a summer in Europe.

Mr. Ross, who represents the F. R. Pierson Co., of Tarrytown, sailed June 29 for Scotland.

Summer vacations have already begun with many of the wholesalers, and the lieutenants also are commencing their well earned respites. Three of Mr. Froment's force started for the mountains July 1. Mr. Froment himself has been recreating for a week in the service of his country as a juror.

William Sharke has several hotels in his care, his work on the terrace of the St. Regis being especially commendable. Privet, ivy, vincas and Boston ferns are used in the decorations.

The roof garden on the Hotel Astor, where the seedsmen held their convention, is one of the most elaborately decorated roofs in the country. Large evergreens and poplars add to the ensemble and huge banks of geraniums lit up by electricity give a most charming effect. A section of the garden was set aside by the hotel management for the exclusive use of the visiting seedsmen. As many as 2,000 on the average visit this beautiful spot, far above the noise and dust of the busy streets, every evening. There are many of the big hotels adding this feature to their modern methods.

Charles Millang has closed his conservatory for the summer. He retains his branch at 7 West Twenty-eighth street and will handle a great many evergreens there in the fall.

NEW TONEWARE IMPORTATIONS

The new designs in Pompeian Toneware Vases received lately from Europe are classic in their simplicity, carrying out admirably the idea that a vase should display and not rival the flowers or plant it holds. These Toneware Vases are beautifully proportioned in all the sizes, deep green in color, though there are other sober hues and in some of them the idea of strength is increased by a metal chain. Send for a sample order.

beyond expectations, especially in the bulb department. Al Rickards is now visiting his Long Island patrons.

William H. Donohoe's new store is a beauty and when its decorations are complete there will be few more artistic, roomy and convenient. The location is excellent.

Alexander McConnell's nursery, at New Rochelle, is well worth a visit now and the stock of blue spruce and specimen retinospora are especially attractive. The demand for nursery stock has been continuous, Mr. McConnell says, and even now shipments are made daily, there being no limit to the evergreen requirements.

A. Warendorff maintains his daily artistic window, rain or shine, hot or cold. He has set himself a standard that keeps his decorator alert and hustling all the time. Orchids are freely used here and, in fact, in all the high-class retailers' windows. Just as well to so educate the public taste while they are so reasonable in price and abundant in variety.

The Kervan Co. is much pleased with the removal to West Twenty-eighth street, where the firm has abundant room. They will occupy the first floor, also, of their premises for offices and storage and are installing in the rear one of the largest ice-boxes in the business, where wild smilax will be a specialty.

Six weeks only and the great convention at Philadelphia of the S. A. F. George Watson, who attended the seedsmen's convention, promises a great welcome and an abundance of interesting features, all in the city and near it.

Geo. Cotsonas & Co. have had several fern gatherers hustling during the last month and the supply is now equal to the demand.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

Conditions have improved slightly in the cut flower market. The supply has fallen off; the demand is about equal to that of a week ago. There is enough business of the discriminating kind to make occasional flurries in the higher grades of several standard varieties—Kaiserins, long-stemmed Beauties, carnations equal to shipping requirements, and fancy Maids, chiefly from down east, have all experienced times of demand. The bulk of the business, however, is cheap. The prices are so low they do not pay cost of packing. Carnations of poor grade are useless. Sweet peas are a loss to the grower and to the wholesaler, except in rare instances. Local peonies are entirely over. The cold storage supply has been drawn upon sufficiently to exhaust the white, which were not overplentiful. Colored varieties will be obtainable for some time. Liliun candidum has arrived, also coreopsis. There is a slight demand for greens.

Review of the Year.

The season is over. July 1 to June 30 is the generally accepted business year with florists, seedsmen, nurserymen and supplymen. Stock is at the lowest point. Stock-taking and balancing of accounts are in order on all sides. A glance over the twelve months just ended is full of interest.

The demand for cut flowers commenced earlier in the fall and was better sustained than ever before. October and November were unusually active months, with no serious overproduction, such as is usual during a part of October and during the height of the chrysanthemum season early in November. December was the best month of the year, with prices well sustained throughout the holidays, being remarkable in this respect. A change came after January 1. The heavy yield, absence of sunshine and unseasonably warm weather, followed by cold, stormy weather, played havoc with the supply, reducing it to an absurdly small quantity. The demand was active, prices ruled high; higher in many cases than seemed possible in view of the increase in glass area during the previous summer, but the volume of business was unsatisfactory. Lent came early, February 13 to March 30. It was fair, some varieties of flowers being scarce and high in price, while others were plentiful and very low. Easter was most unsatisfactory, owing to the mid-summer weather prevailing during Passion week. The volume of business was unprecedented, but complaints were never so numerous. April, May and the first half of June were most remarkable, the demand being so heavy that a phenomenal increase over the corresponding period of last year is reported in many cases. The supply, owing to the late spring, was excellent, values being well maintained.

With the plantsmen it has been an excellent year. Foliage plants were a little more difficult to sell in the fall than usual, prices ruling low. This was more than made up during the spring, when a wonderful demand swept clean the benches of the growers at most remunerative figures. The demand for blooming plants was heavier than ever before, both at Christmas and at Easter, the warm wave so detrimental to the cut flower market before the latter holiday being a positive godsend to the plantsmen. Quality was an essential where good prices were obtained. The bedding plant season, though retarded by cold, wet weather, has, on the whole, been excellent. The business in hardy roses, in hardy perennials and in vegetable plants in pots has shown marked increase.

The seedsmen have had a long spring, enabling them to get orders out in better shape than is possible when their busy season is concentrated into a few weeks. The replanting so general with certain varieties of seeds, owing to the cold, wet May, is not wholly a source of profit to them, one of our brightest seedsmen giving it as his opinion that in the long run it was not good business to make money for him out of his customers' misfortunes.

The nurserymen were helped as they have rarely been helped before by the elements. Their season was long, large, and should prove more than usually satisfactory to their customers.

An index of the general prosperity is perhaps best shown in the supply houses. They all imported, manufactured and sold more goods than ever before, at satisfactory prices. The present unusually good demand indicates that these goods have not remained in the hands of their customers.

The above carefully prepared statement of facts leads to the belief that our business in all its branches is in a healthy and prosperous condition.

Various Notes.

William P. Craig has kindly furnished the photograph of a specimen Nephrolepis Amerpohlii in a 6-inch pot that appears elsewhere in this number.

A Philadelphian writes from Plymouth, England, that "there are flower shops every other block, where you can buy bunches of flowers for a penny apiece, and plants resembling forget-me-nots for 2 pence each."

The street asserts that John Burton will carry over nearly his entire stock of roses for next season, replanting but two houses.

William Warner Harper was surprised and delighted by the large number of visitors attracted by his peony show at the Andorra Nurseries.

Charles H. Campbell, Joseph K. Campbell and another florist will erect two houses, 31x300 and 24x300 feet, respectively, on a tract of fourteen acres of land near Penllyn station, Philadelphia & Reading railway. The building material and plans are from Lord & Burnham Co.—D. T. Conner. The houses will be devoted to carnations, Mrs. Lawson, White Lawson and Enchantress being among the varieties to be grown. The product will be divided between Mr. Campbell's store at 3601 Germantown avenue and a wholesale house.

Thomas J. Oberlin's paper, read before the Florists' Club July 2, is a splendid example of a thoroughly practical essay of a most polished type. It deserves careful perusal.

The Philadelphia Wholesale Flower Market's lease of 1237 Filbert street expired June 30. D. T. Conner, William Stevens and Edgar Upton have vacated the premises. The other stall-holders left earlier. D. T. Conner has opened an office on the ninth floor of the Heed building, in Filbert street above Twelfth.

Charles E. Meehan and family have opened their cottage at Ocean City, N. J.

The Henry F. Michell Co. has accepted an original design especially prepared for its bowling trophy to be competed for at the S. A. F. convention in this city next month.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. have two more steamers with large consignments of choice supplies in this week.

The wholesale commission houses will all close at 6 o'clock this week, to continue during July and August.

M. Rice & Co. are busily engaged taking account of stock during the breathing spells between the arrivals of fresh importations from Europe.

The Crimson Ramblers now in full bloom in the suburbs make beautiful decorative material.

Walter D. Stokes, of this city, was one of the essayists at the seedsmen's convention in New York. His essay was full of good practical ideas.

I hope you enjoyed the glorious Fourth and didn't blow anybody to pieces.

THE call for insecticides has begun; it always comes with the good growing weather.

ROBERT FULTON, of Henry & Lee, New York, was at Chicago this week on his sixth annual trip to Japan.

THE general prospect for seed crops in France was reported, June 8, as not being what could be called favorable.

EUROPEAN seed growers report inquiries from America for practically all seeds to be heavier than usual at this date.

THE sweet peas in California were late in flowering this year and the rains of the latter part of June did some damage to the seed crop.

THE printers' copy for one of the widely circulated fall bulb lists shows changes in prices on almost every item, and not many changes are reductions.

THE business of Rennie & Thomson, Providence, R. I., has been liquidated by the trustees. The partnership will be dissolved, but Alex. Rennie may continue the business.

THE Georgia cantaloupe growers sustained considerable loss because of dry weather during the last ten days of June. More rain would have increased the yield and improved the quality.

THE Dakota Improved Seed Co., Mitchell, S. D., expects to get to work within a short time on the excavation of the ground on the corner of Railroad and Lawler streets for its warehouse. The new company will be ready to take in the 1907 crop of seeds when delivery begins.

ANT. C. ZVOLANEK, Bound Brook, N. J., has returned from a trip to California for the purpose of inspecting the methods pursued in the growing of sweet peas for seed, and particularly for the purpose of looking over his own crops of winter-flowering sweet peas, small lots of which are in the hands of four growers in the Santa Clara valley.

GEORGE S. GREEN.

George S. Green, who has just been elected president of the American Seed Trade Association, began his business career in St. Louis, in connection with the seed firm of D. I. Bushnell & Co. After being associated with this firm for a dozen or more years, he removed to Chicago, where he conducted a wholesale grass and field seed business until 1894, when he sold the business and went west. Later he was engaged in the produce commission business at Colorado Springs, for a period of four or five years. In 1901 he returned to Chicago and entered into the grass seed business on an extensive scale as president of the Illinois Seed Co., a firm which had been in existence since 1888. About the time when he assumed control of this business he also became a member of the Chicago Board of Trade.

Mr. Green's election as president of the Seed Trade Association may be regarded as testimony to the widening popularity of a man who has always been respected and esteemed, in an unusual degree, by his fellow board members and by his other business associates, including his employees. His selection for the presidency of the Seed Trade Association is especially fitting in view of the large interest the grass seed houses now have in the work of the organization, a work in which Mr. Green has had a leading part for several years. He is a comparatively young man, being in the forties, but is a conservative in all things. He will lead the association along safe paths.

SEED TRADE CONVENTION.

The Closing Days.

To our report of the seed trade convention, which was in session at Hotel Astor, New York, for two days after our forms closed for last week's issue, the following may be added:

Wednesday was better than Tuesday, as to weather; the attendance was much larger and there was more of that freedom which comes from better acquaintance. Philadelphia, which on Tuesday was not represented, was in strong evidence, as Messrs. Herbert Johnson, Walter P. Stokes and two members of the well known house of Landreth were on hand.

The membership committee reported the following names as applying for membership: Herbert Coy Seed Co., Valley, Neb.; H. E. Fiske, Boston, Mass.; Manitowoc Seed Co., Manitowoc, Wis.; A. J. Pieters Seed Co., Hollister, Cal.; M. J. Brunjes, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Essays and Discussions.

A good part of both morning and afternoon sessions on Wednesday was taken up with essays and discussions. The full list of the papers read at the convention is as follows:

"Reminiscences of the Seed Trade," by F. W. Bruggerhof.

"What the Department of Agriculture Is Doing for the Seed Trade," by Dr. B. T. Gallo-way.

"History of the American Seed Trade Association," by S. F. Willard.

"The Congressional Seed Distribution," by Alexander Forbes.

"The Twentieth Century Seed Catalogue," by J. Horace McFarland.

"Is It Advisable to Offer Discounts from Catalogue Prices?" by Walter P. Stokes.

The matter of revising the seed trade telegraph code was given considerable attention and a committee was appointed to take up the matter and report at the next convention.

Initiative in Seed Tests.

G. B. McVay, as chairman of the committee appointed to take up the suggestions in the president's address, offered a resolution that the seed trade take the initiative in pushing the tests of clover and other field seeds at the different state experiment stations. After much discussion pro and con it was thought best that the association take no definite action at this time and the resolution was withdrawn.

During the discussion, which was one of the closest ever held in the association, it became evident that in the minds of many members there has been a radical change since the government first undertook its seed tests. Opinion is broadening, and with it comes the conviction in the view of many dealers that the purity tests by the state and general governments can be turned strongly to the account of the trade in general if the seedsmen encourage, rather than oppose, the expert and authoritative test of their stock. Dr. Galloway showed how greatly the number of government tests made for seedsmen has increased, and it appears that while sentiment was adverse to the association taking the initiative in the matter of experiment station seed tests, still some houses have resolved to act individually. The trade hardly could take any other step which would go so far to reassure the public as to the seedsmen's integrity.

Other important suggestions in the president's address which had been referred to committee were taken up and discussed, and such action as was thought best was arranged for, some being referred to the executive committee and others being referred to sub-committees to be reported on at the next annual meeting.

Alexander Forbes made a lengthy report on the efforts to stop the congressional seed distributions, but the members were barren of new ideas and no action was taken other than to keep up the work.

Postal Troubles.

Charles N. Page, chairman of the committee on postal affairs, reported on the troubles seedsmen have had with the post-office in the last year. He was able to report some additional latitude in the rules for mailing catalogues in bulk, but could afford no information on the matter of prize offers in catalogues, except that already provided in the REVIEW, that any such offers are included at the seedsmen's risk of much inconvenience and loss. It is hoped to get a more favorable ruling on prize offers before time to print the 1908 books.

Warranty.

Secretary C. E. Kendel read the decision in the Brinker case at Cleveland, as published in full in last week's REVIEW. It was considered one of the most important events of the year, as affecting the interests of the general seed trade, but called for no action on the part of the association.

Election of Officers.

Thursday morning the association met to finish up the business of the convention and to elect officers for the coming year.

Some discussion was brought out by the resolution empowering the association to elect honorary members, the outcome being a vote that the association may elect not more than one honorary member each year. Upon the passage of this resolution the name of William Meggatt, of Wethersfield, Conn., was presented for honorary membership and the members, by a standing vote, elected Mr. Meggatt with great enthusiasm.

Several names for president appeared on the informal ballot, George S. Green, of Chicago, leading. Mr. Green took occasion to say that he felt sure that Mr. Duryea, of New York, was the choice of the majority of the members, and he felt it his duty to decline in favor of Mr. Duryea, whose modesty was the only reason for refusing to let the convention elect him. Mr. Duryea replied, refusing to be a candidate for president, but said that he was willing to assist Mr. Green, should the members insist, by taking second place. The election then was proceeded with and resulted as follows:

President—George S. Green, Chicago.
 Vice-president—M. H. Duryea, New York.
 Second vice-president—F. W. Bolgiano, Washington.
 Secretary and treasurer—C. E. Kendel, Cleveland.
 Assistant secretary—Leonard Vaughan, Chicago.

The informal vote for next place of meeting was not indicative of any pronounced sentiment and the matter, always in the hands of the executive committee, was left with little to guide them. The vote was scattering, even Bismarck, N. D., having four votes. Charles P. Braslan's invitation to hold the next convention at San Jose, Cal., was couched in terms that did him much credit, and if it were not for the distance there is no doubt but what the members would be unanimously in favor of San Jose.

Adjournment followed the election. It may be added that in point of numbers and enthusiasm no convention of the American seed trade has excelled this one, and it is to be hoped that the same kindly feeling and sociability will char-

The banquet Wednesday evening was an enjoyable affair. Mr. O'Mara was toastmaster and his native wit left nothing to be desired in his introduction of the different speakers, and the appointments were a credit to the hosts, the New York seedsmen, for they were in best style of the great Hotel Astor.

Thursday morning an automobile ride was given to the members and their guests. It gave a splendid opportunity of seeing Greater New York. At the closing session a vote of thanks was given the entertainment committee for its splendid efforts and for the magnificent way in which they were carried out.

The Banquet.

Nearly 200 attended the banquet. The menu was superb, the music charming and the occasion one of great enjoyment to all. Patrick O'Mara was the toastmaster and at his best, keeping everyone in good humor.

President Wood was the first speaker. He named a host of seedsmen who were looking younger than the first day he saw them and advised as the secret of perpetual youth the honor of the presidency of the society. He spoke of the spirit of optimism in the seedsmen everywhere and urged its continuance.

Capt. Landreth, of Philadelphia, was introduced as "the man whose name was a household word." "The Nestor of the seed trade and its dean," was Mr. O'Mara's characterization of C. L. Allen, "the old man eloquent." Mr. Allen gave a humorous address and cast his mantle on Prof. Johnson, of the American Agriculturist, declaring him to be "full of good nature, sound sense and practice." Professor Johnson gave a long and eloquent speech, full of witty stories and replete with information concerning southern horticulture and California and the northwest with its immigration and Jamestown and its history.

W. J. Stewart spoke for the S. A. F. and Albert McCullough, of Cincinnati, was eloquent in reminiscences. Charles P. Braslan, of San Jose, Cal., gave an interesting address, referring to Peter Henderson's prophecy as to the seed and bulb possibilities of his state.

In response to the toastmaster's eulogy of Canada and its future, S. E. Briggs, of Toronto, gave a fine address. Mr.

Briggs has been a member of the association twenty-one years and is an ex-president.

W. P. Stokes gave an interesting address on the enjoyment of friendly personal intercourse, the value of fraternal association and the delightful entertainment afforded the society by the New Yorkers. He proposed a toast to Wm. Meggatt, one of the oldest members of the society.

C. N. Page, of Des Moines; S. F. Willard, of Wethersfield; Henry Nungesser, of New York, and S. Groot, of Enkhuizen, Holland, were the final victims of the toastmaster, who was given carte blanche and sprang toasts on unsuspecting victims until about everybody present had taken his medicine.

HELPS FOR THE SEED TRADE.

Talking on the topic, "What the Department of Agriculture Is Doing for the Seed Trade," Dr. Beverly T. Galloway, chief of the Bureau of Plant Industry of the United States Department of Agriculture, at the seed trade convention at New York last week, outlined some of the more important work of his department and explained the relations of this work to the seed trade. In addition to that part of the address printed in last week's REVIEW, Dr. Galloway said:

Agricultural Exploration.

The agricultural exploration work of the department, as an example, calls for the services of experienced men, to go into various parts of the world in search of new and promising crops. The results achieved by M. A. Carleton, in securing grains from Russia and other parts of the world for use in this country, were mentioned as an illustration of the importance of sending practical men upon explorations of this character. Mr. Carleton had made grains a special study for twenty years, and he was able to select varieties of wheat which produced last year in the United States about 50,000,000 bushels, valued at about $37,000,000. The work of an agricultural explorer now in China was illustrated, pictures of fields of poppies, used for the manufacture of opium, and of Chinese vegetable gardens being shown, together with interesting illustrations of the methods of handling the important soy bean crop.

Particular attention was called to the Japanese salad plant, udo, which is handled and served much like celery, and is proving a promising plant for use upon the tables of Americans.

About $5,000,000 worth of matting is imported every year, and the department is trying to establish the manufacture of matting from a Japanese grass which is readily grown here. As the types of juncus used for matting do not come true from seed, it has been necessary to secure a large shipment of these plants from Japan, and they are now in successful cultivation in California. Machinery has already been perfected for weaving this grass, by which an American operator can produce as much matting in a day as is made by an oriental in thirty days.

Improvement of Grasses.

The work upon the improvement of timothies inaugurated by Dr. A. D. Hopkins has resulted in securing some valuable types, including a mammoth form called the Stewart, or Mammoth, which is also an extra-early type. In all, Dr.

Improvement of Grasses.

The work upon the improvement of timothies inaugurated by Dr. A. D. Hopkins has resulted in securing some valuable types, including a mammoth form called the Stewart, or Mammoth, which is also an extra early type. In all, Dr.

Marshall H. Duryea.

(Vice-president of the American Seed Trade Association, photographed at the Roof Garden of the Hotel Astor, June 27.)

Hopkins has grown some sixty distinct strains of timothy, one of the types being about two weeks earlier than the ordinary form, and of this a second crop can be grown the same season. The Stewart variety, when tested beside ordinary types, has produced a crop from ten to twenty-five per cent larger.

About 500 kinds of sorghum, particularly of the nonsaccharine types, have been tested with a view to their use in the drier regions of the United States, and several types have proved sufficiently valuable to warrant general dissemination. As soon as the value of a certain kind of timothy or sorghum is determined, the department relinquishes the work for attention by seedsmen.

The life history investigations of the Bureau of Plant Industry have resulted in the introduction of the Orel and other superior types of red clover. The Orel clover was secured from Russia and is exceedingly hardy, long-lived, perfectly smooth, and yields a superior quality of dustless hay. It promises to be of great value in the northwestern states.

Valuable propaganda work is being carried on in connection with forage crops. An extensive exploitation of alfalfa is being made throughout the east, and farmers are encouraged to cultivate this crop. Arrangements are often made with farmers for coöperative work with the department in growing one or two acres of alfalfa, and this results in the permanent cultivation of this crop.

Extensive propaganda work is being conducted with cowpeas, soy beans, vetches, a number of grasses, and various leguminous forage crops.

Improvement of Cowpeas.

Work in the improvement of cowpeas, the use of which crop has increased greatly within ten years, has been undertaken. George W. Oliver, a master at hybridizing work, is engaged in efforts to secure types of cowpeas suited to certain specific sections of this country and having definite characteristics. It is desirable to obtain a cowpea of bush type that can be readily made into hay and that will yield a good quantity of seed and hold its leaves well. Further, it must not be subject to root-knot, leaf-rust, or other diseases. The securing of this ideal type has been undertaken through the crossing of varieties each of which has some of the characteristics mentioned. Efforts are being made to secure types of cowpeas which may be harvested by machinery and to determine some way of preventing the rapid deterioration of seed. As seedsmen well know, practically all of the cowpea seed sold this year has been of low vitality. The department has secured the seed of a type of cowpea from India, ninety-eight per cent of which, though five years old, has germinated. This type has been used as a parent for several hybrids.

Work of a similar nature is being carried on with vetches and other forage crops. Vetch has been used in the tobacco-growing sections of Connecticut with great satisfaction, 400 acres having been planted this year in the Connecticut valley alone, as a result of demonstrating the fact that vetch is valuable as a winter leguminous cover crop for planting in fields from which tobacco has been harvested in early September.

Adzuki bean from India were mentioned as likely to prove of special value in certain sections of this country. At the Arlington Experimental Farm, besides a good yield of hay, a variety of Adzuki bean produced about twenty-six bushels of seed to the acre.

For a number of years the Department of Agriculture has been engaged in endeavoring to determine how far local conditions affect the character of the plants grown. Special work along this line has been carried on with sugar corn and cabbage, and the investigations give promise of very interesting and valuable results.

Sugar-beet Seed.

For several years the growth of sugar-beet seed in the United States has been encouraged by the department in every practical way, and expert breeders have been developing beets of high sugar content and heavy tonnage. During the last year, experimental work with beets raised from American-grown seed and from European seed was carried on by forty-nine collaborators throughout the sugar-beet area. On 278 acres, the American-grown seed yielded 14.32 tons of beets to the acre, with an average sugar content of 14.9 per cent, making a total of 4,267 pounds of sugar to the acre, while the imported seed as used by the various factories averaged a yield of 12.14 tons to the acre, with a sugar content of 15.1 per cent, making a total of 3,666 pounds of sugar to the acre—a difference in favor of the American-grown seed of more than 600 pounds. This, on the basis of the 376,000 acres harvested in the United States in 1906, would mean an increase in the total quantity of sugar produced, without additional cost, of about 226,000,000 pounds. Nearly half a million dollars is now sent abroad annually for the purchase of sugar-beet seed which could readily be grown in America.

Three years ago efforts for the production of a sugar-beet seed having a single germ were inaugurated, and at the present time beets yielding from forty-five to fifty per cent of single-germ seed and having a very satisfactory sugar content have been obtained.

Work With Bulbs.

In connection with the investigation of the Bermuda lily disease, the commercial production of bulbs in the United States was investigated. It has been shown that the disease mentioned can be controlled by resorting to nature's method of reproduction, which eliminates the diseased stock—by seed—and the department has published the results of its work along this line. The production of varieties of tulip, narcissus and hyacinth on the Pacific coast is being encouraged, and three gardens having this work as their object are maintained in the state of Washington, all promising excellent results. The climate of Puget Sound is especially favorable to the development of tulip and narcissus bulbs, and it is probable that the cornerstone of the American bulb industry will soon be laid in that region.

Garden Work in Schools.

Two important projects for which the department is responsible, and which have a direct bearing on the seed trade, relate to the garden work in our public schools. The first efforts were directed to the training of young women in the normal schools of Washington, who were eventually to become teachers in the public schools. This work, through the efforts of Miss Susan B. Sipe, in both the white and colored schools of Washington, has met with pronounced success. The young women have been trained in the elementary lines of horticulture, in handling the ground, propagating plants from seeds, propagating plants from cuttings and by budding and grafting, and in greenhouse work in general. The surroundings of the homes of the pupils have been improved. Special pride in the improvement of school grounds has been taken. At first, a few packages of seed were sent to schools in the ordinary congressional distribution. Since that time, seeds have been furnished through local dealers. During the last year, more than $1,600 was spent by the school children of Washington for seeds in penny packets, 160,000 packets being planted, and in addition $800 was expended for bulbs. As an enlargement of this work, a considerable number of special packages for school gardens have been distributed by the department to schools throughout the country. At first, 5,000 packets were sent out, but last year the aggregate was 30,000 packages of vegetable seed and 48,000 packages of flower seed, each package containing five packets. This seed is largely sent direct to teachers in the public schools, and each teacher requesting seed is supplied with a copy of the bulletin on school gardens, which sets forth the methods of handling various crops and gives suggestions regarding the laying out of school gardens.

The second feature of this work consists in substituting sets of seeds illustrative of work in commercial geography for ordinary garden sets. Teachers are greatly interested in gardens which will enable them to illustrate their instruction with reference to useful plants, such as cereals and fiber plants. Small packages are distributed through the school-garden teachers. The coordination of this work with class-room instruction has been attempted, studies in arithmetic being put into practice when children are required to measure their plots of ground and determine the size of each. The instruction of the class-room regarding cotton and wheat is emphasized when the pupils are furnished samples of seed from which these crops can be grown. Aside from this is the effect of this outdoor work on the bodies and minds of the children, which means, it is believed, the laying of a foundation for

"FRADARROW."

H. Frank Darrow became connected, in 1887, with the business of importing seeds and plants, when he joined the force of Theodore Pabst & Co., at 26 Barclay street, New York, who had for several years and then represented Vil-morin, Andrieux & Co., Paris, and Louis Leroy, of Angers, France. Mr. Darrow went with the late August Rhotert as office manager, when that gentleman started in the business in 1893, and upon his death, in 1906, he succeeded to the business, which had been steadily increasing during the thirteen years of its existence. The painstaking attention given to details under Mr. Darrow's management, coupled with Mr. Rhotert's personal standing, had resulted in additions to the list of European firms represented until it included the following: Vil-morin, Andrieux & Co., Paris; Louis Leroy, Angers, France; The Haerens Co., Somergem, Belgium; E. Neubert, Wandsbek, Germany; H. M. Hardyzer, Boskoop, Holland; John Palmer & Sons, Annan, Scotland, and G. H. Richards, London, England. All these now are represented in America by Mr. Darrow.

Henry Kallen, of Mr. Darrow's staff, sailed for Holland July 3 and will remain abroad until the fall shipments are dispatched. Mr. Darrow himself will sail for Europe July 11 to visit his foreign connections and to personally purchase Holland bulbs to fill the import-orders he has booked.

IMPORTS.

The imports of seeds through the port of New York for the week ending June 22 were as follows:

Kind.	Bags.	Val.	Kind.	Bags.	Val.
Canary	7,141	$12,774	Cumin	168	$1,430

Castor	683	3,164	Mustard	183	1,346
Celery	25	354	Rape	7	19
Clover	337	6,618	Other		1,379

In the same period the imports of trees and plants were valued at $1,823.

ERFURT CROP REPORT.

In the days approaching the middle of June, a glance over the great seed growing district of Germany of which Erfurt is the center, shows most things backward. Pansies are late in blooming. Forget-me-nots look all right and the single wallflowers are making a good show. Planting is not yet finished. Annuals are coming through strongly. Perennials are behind time, but aquilegias, campanulas and others are doing their best to brighten up the long stretches of gray soil. The increased demand for seed of perennials is quite a noteworthy feature of the last few seasons.

On the stages the winter stocks and double wallflowers are looking well. In the greenhouses cyclamen and primulas are standing full of pods, while cinerarias are just drooping and we are already beginning to collect seed. Calceolarias are still at their best and the brush of the fertilizer is busy.

Vegetables are looking well, though radishes in some regions have lacked sufficient moisture, in spite of the rains which have broken the occasional hot waves, mixed in with a cool spring.

DUTY ON CYCAS STEMS.

Henry & Lee, New York, protested at the duty assessed by the customs collector on an importation of cycas stems. The stems were assessed with duty under paragraph 251, tariff act of 1897, and claimed to be free of duty under paragraph 548 (drugs), paragraph 552 (palm leaf), 566 (crude fibrous vegetable substances), or paragraph 617 (crude vegetable substances).

The special report of the appraiser accompanying the protest stated that the merchandise consisted of cycas stems. He further states that "the plants themselves are imported in the shape of dormant trunks or clumps, which are potted fore each of the claims is overruled. Thus it only remains to determine whether the collector's classification under paragraph 251 was the correct one. It may be open to question whether the cycas palm dried off, with the leaves removed, is a palm within the meaning of the language of said paragraph 251; and we think it unnecessary to decide that question, since if it is not it is certainly greenhouse stock not specially provided for, under the provisions of paragraph 252 of said act, dutiable at the same rate assessed in this case by the collector."

IMPROVING THE SEED SUPPLY.

Doubtless the adulteration of seeds will be always practiced to a certain extent, but it is unquestioned that the thorough work of the Department of Agriculture in exposing dealers in adulterated seeds has exerted a most wholesome influence over the trade. It is a matter of much pleasure to note that quite a number of the most eminent seedsmen in America were not caught in the dragnet spread by the department, and it is reassuring to learn that the most reputable firms recognize the value of the work done by the department under direction of congress. From a letter written by a representative of one of the best-known eastern seed houses the appended quotation is made:

We suppose that publication of the names of seedsmen found dealing in adulterated seeds was necessary in order to keep unscrupulous dealers in line. We are always willing to cooperate heartily in anything that will tend to put the seed trade on a higher plane and keep it there. One can not help but feel sorry for the small dealer who has unintentionally sold adulterated seed on account of lack of familiarity with grass seed in general. On the other hand, the dealer who handles grass seed in large quantities lays himself open to criticism should he buy seed of poor quality, as it is a very easy matter to buy on sample subject to samples being found satisfactory by the United States Department of Agriculture.

If this commendable spirit had been manifest on the part of all seedsmen who seek to conduct their trade on a high level, the support given the department would have made its work even more efficient. These reputable seedsmen can not fail to understand that the legislation by congress on this subject is directly in their interest, in that its rigid enforcement will weed out the professional adulterators of seeds and drive from competition in this field the dealers who traffic in inferior, mixed and misbranded seeds at low prices. Unfortunately it appears that some of the leading seedsmen have not been able to view the matter in this light, but reflection will certainly give them more accurate perception of the effect of this wholesome overhauling of the seed trade by order of congress.

The fact is that many seedsmen treated seed inspection with indifference or contempt. They evidently did not believe that the law would lay its hand on their industry. They certainly were generally informed of the situation. Ample time was allowed and repeated warning given in every possible way of the enforcement of the law, so that it would seem that not even the smallest dealer could be uninformed of the application of the test. certain it is that if all the big houses had come heartily to the support of the department and had served notice on all growers that they would buy only subject to examination by the Department of Agriculture, and had notified all of their customers of that fact, the published list of dealers in adulterated seeds would have been much smaller. It seemingly required a "jolt," and the law faithfully administered is capable of giving a jolt that will awaken the most indifferent.

Observe the advantage that a firm can acquire when it avails itself of the aid of the law. Before us lies a circular from a western seedhouse advertising its alfalfa seed. This is the statement: "Our brand has been tested for purity by the United States Department of Agriculture." The ability to sell from a stock which has been found free from adulteration by the department is worth many dollars to a seedsman. The only wonder is that all the reputable seedsmen did not promptly apply to the department for its aid in protecting themselves in their purchases and in promoting sales through the stamp of purity affixed by Uncle Sam. We are working toward a much cleaner condition of our seed trade and to that consummation the reputable seedsmen can lend powerful aid.—Breder's Gazette.

Vegetable Forcing.

RED spider in cucumber houses must be fought with ceaseless vigilance.

VEGETABLE MARKETS.

CHICAGO, July 2.—Cucumbers, 50 to 75c doz.; leaf lettuce, 10c to 15c case.

BOSTON, July 1.—There is a larger supply of outdoor vegetables. Cucumbers, $2 to $3.25 box; tomatoes, 10c to 13c lb.

NEW YORK, July 1.—Outdoor vegetables now rule the market. Boston cucumbers fetch 50 cents to 65 cents per dozen for the best; mushrooms, 25c to $1.25 lb.; indoor tomatoes, 5c to 15c lb.

TOLEDO, OHIO.

In the case of Arthur Cowdrick against Searles Bros., the jury in Judge Kinade's court, June 19, returned a verdict of $1,285 in favor of the plaintiff.

Arthur Cowdrick was superintendent of construction when Searles Bros. last season built their big range of greenhouses. He claimed for his services $4,500, but the greenhouse owners refused to settle because of alleged delay in the work and the alleged inferior character of the construction. Cowdrick brought suit and in a counter claim Searles Bros. asked as an offset $10,000 for the loss of a crop, due to delay in completing the houses.

LETTUCE AND CUCUMBERS.

The Principal Crops.

Some of the growers use different houses throughout the entire season for the two vegetables, cucumbers and lettuce, but the majority grow cucumbers in the fall and spring, when the weather is more suitable, and lettuce in the winter, which is much easier to handle, as it requires a low temperature, while with cucumbers in severe weather it is difficult and expensive to maintain the high temperature required. The days being so short and cloudy much of the time, even if the houses are equipped with sufficient heating apparatus to hold the proper temperature, the output is so small that few growers find it profitable to use the houses for cucumbers through the worst winter months. Many proprietors state very positively that they are unable to make any money on cucumbers between Thanksgiving and Easter and do not try to grow them then, as the risk is great of getting a poor crop, which would mean a severe loss on account of the heavy expense for fuel and labor whether the crop is a success or not. They prefer to grow cool crops, like radishes or lettuce, and wait for better weather.

But there are a few establishments which produce cucumbers all winter, and the owners say that they make a fair profit; as much or more than they could on lettuce. The prices of greenhouse cucumbers in midwinter are usually high, sometimes going up as high as $2.50 per dozen for fine fruit, and would seem quite an inducement to the growers; but it being almost impossible to produce one-half as large a crop as in the spring, and at a much greater expense, the net profits are not nearly as good as in the spring, when prices are one-half or one-third lower. This is why lettuce is usually substituted for a midwinter crop in the cucumber houses.

The cucumber seeds are planted about August 1 for a fall crop and begin to bear soon after frost cuts off the outdoor supply, and should continue until Thanksgiving, when they are removed and the beds spaded up for the lettuce plants, which have been previously started and transplanted into boxes or benches in a cooler house or sometimes in a cold-frame outside. Two or three crops are usually grown, a batch of young plants being ready to replant the houses as soon as the older lot is marketed and beds made ready again. After the last crop of lettuce is sold, cucumber plants are again placed in the beds, the temperature raised to suit, and then the race is on in earnest, win or lose. The best of care is given this crop, as it decides whether or not the owner makes enough money to build more houses that summer.

In growing both lettuce and cucumbers one cannot be too careful in selecting and preparing the soil, as this is the most important part of their culture. Both vegetables like a light, loose soil. Sod from a sandy loam with one-third manure added makes an excellent soil for them. For lettuce the compost should be well rotted, but for cucumbers it is not necessary. The fresh soil, even with large pieces of sod in it, and fresh, hot manure, makes an excellent cucumber soil, provided the manure is buried in the soil so the heat and ammonia cannot rise and injure the foliage. Where a house is to be used for cucumbers in fall and lettuce in winter, the new soil will be thoroughly decomposed before the cucumber crop is through bearing, and if a little more rotted manure be spaded in, and some sand, when the soil is not sufficiently loose, the beds will be in fine shape for the lettuce.

The soil should be well spaded or forked over and more manure added each time new crops are planted. It is best to remove the soil each summer and refill with fresh, but if free from disease and ell-worms, it can be used two or more years with fairly good results by removing only a part of the soil, leaving room enough in the beds for the top dressings the following winter.

Next in importance to soil comes temperature, ventilation and watering, which will be treated in our next article.

THE MEANEST MAN.

Here is a yarn that is going the rounds of the daily newspapers, credited to "a New York florist":

"The man under discussion recently bought a fine summer home and estate about a half mile from my nursery," said the florist. "A few weeks ago he was entertaining some friends and showing them around the neighborhood. In the course of their peregrinations he brought them to my flower patch, on which I have a number of large glass-houses. Wishing to display his wealth by purchasing something, he stopped at a cucumber frame and asked me the price of various specimens of that vegetable. I pointed a large one out to him at 25 cents, another at 15 cents, and so on; but Mr. Suddenwealth would have none of them. His eye fell on a particularly tiny specimen. 'How much?' he asked, pointing to it. I told him 5 cents. Mr. Croesus brought out a $50 bill. I couldn't change it just then, so I told him he could pay later. That suited him fine. Just as I was about to pull the cucumber he requested me to leave it where it was, as he would send his man for it in the evening. He went away smiling, and sent his coachman to the nursery at the end of a week, by which time, of course, the tiny cucumber had lengthened into a large and brilliant vegetable! What's more, he's forgotten to divvy up the nickel!"

"It won't be long before it will be universally used."

ALOIS FREY, Head Gardener, Lincoln Park, Chicago.

"It is the King of Sprinklers; beats everything in the watering line."

J. B. ADAMS, Paes Christian, Miss.

To show the small cost of equipping an acre of ground for outside watering, as far as nozzles and swivel wheels are concerned, will submit the following figures: There are approximately 44,000 square feet to the acre. My $\frac{1}{8}$ -inch nozzle will, with a good pressure, cover 300 square feet of ground and by first watering on one side of pipe and then on the other side, each nozzle will cover 600 square feet, or about 80 nozzles to the acre, which, at 15c each, will cost \$12.00 per acre for nozzles. Four swivel wheels will easily control the nozzles on an acre. These at \$2.00 each, \$8.00, would make the cost of wheels and nozzles only \$20.00 per acre.

Send for circular of testimonials from those who use the Wittbold System under Glass.

The Market.

At last we are in the clutches of summer, with the thermometer registering up to 98 degrees in the shade, which naturally causes a decrease in business. The market is glutted with flowers and many go to the dump. Our exchange in one day had 20,000 carnations on hand and was unable to dispose of all of them. The street boys are out in full force and one could go to the market and buy for 25 cents a bunch equal to a dollar's worth a few weeks ago. Even one of the street boys a short time ago was compelled to throw 1,500 carnations on the rubbish pile.

The farmers are throwing thousands of garden lilies on the market, selling as low as 5 cents a dozen.

The pot plant trade has at last ended, but many growers will carry over a large surplus.

Gardeners' Club.

The regular meeting of the Gardeners' Club was held June 24, with a rousing attendance. President F. C. Bauer was in the chair. John Severon was proposed for membership.

The committee on Jamestown was heard with interest. Among those who spoke on donating flowers for the exhibition were E. A. Seidewitz, R. Vincent, Jr., C. L. Seybold and J. J. Perry.

Another interesting talk was heard from R. Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, who entertained the club for an hour. Mr. Vincent, through the ladies' aid society, will devote one day in September to entertaining the Gardeners' Club at his place.

President Bauer gave a smoker and refreshments; he received a vote of thanks.

Various Notes.

G. A. Lotze, Glen Burnie, sent to the Jamestown exposition a large collection of sweet peas, for the Baltimore day.

Lehr Bros., Brooklyn, are repairing the damage done by the recent hail storm. Over 150 boxes of glass will be used.

Miss Elsie Beall, of Baltimore, and R. E. Akehurst, of White Marsh, were married June 26 and are on a trip through the south and west.

Competition among members of the Baltimore Chamber of Commerce, in growing fine flowers, has become more pronounced this summer. Every day displays of handsome blooms are shown on the floor. Members of the Chamber of Commerce Floricultural Society are E. Hewes, C. D. Reid, Luther M. Jackson, T. H. Botts and J. L. Vincent.

J. H. Arndt, Arlington, displayed a choice box of his Orem strawberries at the last club meeting. J. Oler & Bro. also had an extra fine box of strawberries of the same variety at the club.

NEWPORT, R. I.

Mrs. Weld's Greenhouses.

Eagerly accepting an invitation from Paul Volquardson, I visited the greenhouses on the estate of Mrs. Weld, on Bellevue avenue, where Mr. Volquardson is gardener. The houses, in construction and equipment, are ideal for such a craftsman as Paul Volquardson is, to show in what excellence he can produce what his employer desires. There are two houses of grapes, where the fruit at the time of my visit was in various stages of development, but all of it showing unmistakable signs of good growing and promising heavy crops of fine fruit. The Muscat of Alexandria were especially large in bunches and berries in the farthest advanced house. Gros Coleman also showed well, as also did Black Hamburg.

A house of nectarines were for the greater part in the stoning stage, but they looked well, with a good crop assured.

What attracted my attention more even than the exceptionally fine fruit, as seen at that stage, was a house full of tuberous begonias and gloxinias, grown in pots varying in size from 6-inch to 12-inch. I never before saw plants of either that on the whole equaled them, either in the luxuriance of their foliage or in the size and abundance of bloom. Mr. Volquardson furnishes gloxinias and tuberous begonias for house and table decoration in their growing state, and there is no gainsaying the fact that, grown as they are by him, they are superbly fitted for such uses. Everything on this place showed evident signs of the high cultural skill of the grower, as well as a taste for neatness and perfect order. D. M.

BENTON HARBOR, MICH.—Albert Sykes, whose firm has been known as the Benton Floral Co., has sold his greenhouses to F. Pullen.

WASHINGTON.

After a week of hot weather, it has turned delightfully cool. Last week was a record-breaker for weddings. The record at the marriage license office was broken June 26. The decorators were kept on the go. Sweet peas are abundant and sell for any old price. Candidum lilies made their appearance and that was all; the crop was very small this year.

Summer windows are all in and look cool.

From present indications Washington will be well represented at the S. A. F. convention.

James Hardy, with Z. D. Blackistone, was married this week.

The Washington Florists' Co. is showing a tastily arranged basket in its window, of lavender irises and cattleyas.

PACIFIC COAST.

SANTA CRUZ, CAL.—E. Leedham has resumed the active management of the Leedham Bulb Co., former manager Lilly retiring. At the recent stockholders' meeting G. H. Normand was elected president, Montroyd Sharpe vice-president and Henry Willey treasurer.

LABOR ON THE COAST.

The extraordinary conditions prevailing on the Pacific coast at this time regarding the status of labor have developed a wonderful disregard for everything stable and a tendency that is especially marked by the spirit of unrest and a desire to keep everything in a whirlwind of excitement and uneasiness.

The troubles brought about by the various labor unions in San Francisco have all but disrupted the town, and the retail dealers are in a quandary. It has been a fact for many months, among the employers of labor in the gardening line, that it was almost impossible to secure help of any kind. Everyone was bound for San Francisco, where the wages paid to artisans, both skilled and unskilled, were the highest ever known. Many a grower gave up in disgust.

The temptation to get to town and get a few days' work at bigger wages than the poor grower could afford to pay was to blame for all the difficulties encountered by our craft. The unrest has been in the air and its effects have been not only to raise the wages beyond all ability of the grower to pay, but also to make help so scarce that prospective growers hesitated to go into work of any kind when they were liable to be unable to get sufficient help, even at any price, to complete the work.

But labor overreached itself in the beautiful city of San Francisco, and at the present moment probably over 7,000 men are out of work, with little or no hope of an immediate renewal of operations. Of course, many thousands of other related industries are also affected, so that many more men will be thrown into the field in a short time.

The significance of all of this was forcibly brought to my attention a day or two ago, when I happened to be calling on one of our largest growers in the neighborhood of San Francisco. In the space of one hour he received three calls from big, able-bodied men who were anxious to obtain work of any kind, and two of them mentioned the fact that they had several years' experience in greenhouse work, but had left the business because of the higher wages paid to helpers in the iron working industry. To a grower who had been vainly endeavoring for months to keep a large enough force on hand to handle his business this might be called a godsend, but behind it all it did not speak well for the continued prosperity of the town itself, or of the grower, whose business depends on the demand for material which after all can be to a great extent dispensed with unless the conditions prevail where business in all lines is good and money is plentiful.

Regarding the effect of these conditions on the business in general, it is certainly to be deplored, and whereas on one hand the supply of labor is now practically unlimited, on the other hand we have to contend with the limited demand for such material as is grown by the florists and nurserymen, and which at the present time is at a lower price and harder to dispose of than ever before within the knowledge of the writer.

Unless labor troubles are speedily regulated and a resumption of building and allied industries takes place, the outlook for the continued prosperity of the business is not overbright. The fact that growers can get all the help they need for the first time in the last year is more than counterbalanced by the fact that there is but little demand for their output, and where any movement is recorded it is always at ruinous prices. G.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Business in general is a shade better than it was at this time one year ago, but still there is little doing and stock moves slowly. Flowers of all kinds, with the exception of roses, are plentiful enough to supply all demands, and with a surplus. Roses, however, continue to be scarce in all grades except those of poor quality, and the prices received for any good stock offered are above the ordinary quotations for spring flowers.

Carnations in all except a few fancy sorts are in good supply and at low prices. Lawson and Estelle, owing to the continued cooler weather, do not exhibit as much thrills as is usually seen at this time and, in fact, the quality of everything is being kept up to the highest standard by the absence of heat.

Sweet peas continue to be the most popular flower and are being handled by thousands by the street hucksters as well as by the stores. The price to the retailers has been 50 cents per dozen bunches, and from present indications they will not go higher for some time.

Lilium longiflorum is plentiful and sells well. Valley is in larger supply than for several weeks and costs the dealers about $3.50 per hundred. Peonies are out of season, and gladioli are now at their height and are being used this season more than ever. Other kinds of hardy outside stock are being used for window decorating, but do not have a lively sale.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; Vice-pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. O. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 33d annual convention will be held at Milwaukee, June, 1907.

CHANGES in classification and minimum carloads are effecting a steady increase in freight rates.

WESTERN nurseries are finding shrubs to be rapidly increasing in importance as compared to other classes of stock.

THE florists who handle nursery stock as a side line are learning that it is not always the lowest price which determines which is the cheapest offer of shrubs.

At the A. A. N. convention the fact was made apparent that the stocks of ornamental trees are not increasing as fast as is the demand, especially for the larger sizes.

W. F. SCHELL, of the Wichita Nursery, Wichita, Kan., reports a steadily increasing call for evergreens, in response to which he is increasing his acreage and list of broadleaved and coniferous evergreens.

G. M. BENTLEY, who has charge of the nursery inspection in Tennessee, warns nurserymen to keep their promises free of weeds, as "it is a protection from insects and lessens the spread of scale."

A NUMBER of the nurseries at Oudenbosch, Holland, have pooled their interests in the American trade, combining to conduct the rapidly increasing American trade together under the title of the Union Nurseries. H. W. Van der Bom, of the Alma Nursery, is director.

THE rains throughout the west have brightened the farmers' prospects the last few weeks. The nursery agents everywhere report trade conditions wonderfully improved. Reports of $300 or $400 in sales a week per man are frequent, according to the Sherman Nursery Co., Charles City, Ia.

NURSEYMEN have been doing their part to flood the city cut flower markets with blooms from the peony fields. Much of the stock has brought little, largely because the nurserymen do not cut, bunch and pack the flowers as carefully and understandingly as do those who grow peonies expressly for cutting.

THE Jackson, Tenn., Sun has discovered that the nursery business in Tennessee began in the early seventies, and it now comprises 225 nurseries, embracing about 6,000 acres. The Knoxville Sentinel adds that the nurseries in East Tennessee produce congressmen as well as apple trees, referring to N. W. Hale, of that town.

JUDGE LITTLEFIELD has sold his estate in Lexington, Mass., to Alfred E. Robinson, treasurer and manager of the New England Nurseries, who came in one afternoon, saw the property, bought and took his deed, and paid cash. The estate is the former home of his father on Parker street, consisting of a large house of twelve rooms, quite modern, together with 15,000 square feet of land. It is said to be the quickest real estate deal on record in the town.

EVERGREEN CUTTINGS.

How and when are evergreen cuttings made? J. L. J.

Many evergreens are raised entirely from seed, but thuyas, retinosporas, thuyopsis and taxus may be rooted from cuttings, which may be taken off, preferably with a heel, four to six inches long, or even longer in the case of retinosporas, if desired, and planted in boxes or benches of sandy loam in a cool greenhouse from the beginning to the end of July—not later than the middle of August, or the wood will be a little too hard. If a greenhouse is not at service, utilize a coldframe, which will answer fully as well and in some ways better. Sandy loam, well firmed, is needed. Soak well with water before putting in the cuttings. Be sure to firm the latter thoroughly and water again after they are put in. Keep the frame shaded either with shading on the glass or with plant cloths, which are best taken off on cloudy days. Keep the frame quite close until the cuttings start to callous and form roots, when air may be given more freely. Never allow them to become dry at the root. Spray overhead at least once a day, and several times on very hot days will be helpful.

Euonymus radicans and its variegated sport root quickly at any time during summer. Cut off shoots ten to twelve inches long, especially those which show a few rootlets, and keep soaked with water. English ivy roots freely in the same way, or in winter in an ordinary propagating house. The buxus or boxwood, especially the low variety, nana, used so much for bordering flowering beds and garden paths, can be pulled in pieces in late April or early May, planted rather deeply and very firmly in the open ground, given a good soaking of water, and few will fail to root.

Several other evergreen shrubs may be rooted under glass, but as the propagation is a little difficult and the varieties in question may not come within your nursery list, we will forbear at this time saying anything as to methods of rooting them. W.

BUDDING.

Budding is an operation by means of which a bud, along with a portion of the bark, is removed from a plant and inserted beneath the inner bark of another plant or beneath that of the plant from which the bud was removed. As in grafting, only allied species or genera succeed when budded on each other. The union is effected by means of the cambium existing between the alburnum and the inner bark, and the success of the operation depends upon that matter being present in such abundance as to allow the bark to be easily raised from the wood. When both the stock and the plant from which the bud is taken are in that condition, union is most readily effected. There are certain periods when the flow of sap is more or less arrested and the bark adheres firmly to the wood. When such is the case, budding should not be attempted.

Buds are usually inserted outdoors in June, July and August. June budding is practiced chiefly upon peaches, which will, when budded, produce shoots from three to five feet long from the buds the same season, a fact that means a great deal when in that way marketable trees can be had the same season in which they were budded and grown.

Early summer budding of a different kind is sometimes performed on apples and many other kinds of fruit trees, stocks being used that are two years old from the time of their removal from the seed bed. For this work dormant buds are used, buds that have been removed the previous winter and kept in as dormant a condition as possible until the time arrives when it is convenient to use them. This method is favored by some because it lengthens the budding season, and because, in the case of top-working trees, the buds start the same season in which they were set, saving a whole season.

SEEDLING APPLES OF MAINE.

Bulletin 143 of the Maine Experiment Station, "The Seedling Apples of Maine," is just out. The purpose of this bulletin is to call attention to those varieties of Maine origin which are worthy of wider dissemination; and to record, as accurately as possible, the history of such varieties.

While Baldwin, Greening, and other standard varieties, mostly of New England origin, will doubtless remain for many years the leading market sorts, new and valuable sorts are continually appearing, and these will be most likely to excel near their native home, or in their native state. The wholesale injury to orchards by the cold of the past few years is also an incentive to search out the merits of native hardy varieties.

Among the most valuable of the thirty-eight native sorts mentioned in the bulletin, are Deane, Dudley, King Sweet, Rolfe, Starkey and Stowe.

CRIMSON RAMBLER ROSE.

Few novelties have become so universally grown in such a short time as the Crimson Rambler rose, which was only introduced to the public by C. Turner in 1893. It is a variety of Rosa multiflora, though its immediate parentage seems to be unknown. No less remarkable than the rapidity of its capture of the gardening world is the number of famous roses of which it is already the parent, among them Lady Gay and Hiawatha.

It has given color to many a garden where it was badly wanted, and yet there are few roses we so often see badly grown, as it will not do well in every soil and position. One of the finest specimens I know, says a writer in an English gardening paper, is growing on a wet clay soil, and where it has the sun little more than half the day, and here it sends up every year one or two shoots ten or twelve feet high, or even more, the result being that, instead of a dense mass of blossom with a little russetygreen foliage, it makes enormous trusses of blossom that stand out boldly in all directions, and are intermixed with plenty of dark, healthy foliage—a method of growth which is productive of a much finer effect and conducive to a lengthened period of flowering.

This rose, to be grown to perfection, must have rich feeding, and a good supply of moisture, like most roses, and is better perhaps for some little amount of shade. Hence it does not succeed at all well, as a rule, on a south or southwest wall—in the eastern counties, at any rate—neither does it often do well on galvanized wire arches, the proper place for it being on wooden arches and pergolas, while good effects are sometimes obtained by letting it run up trees.

CLEVELAND, O.—The Gasser Co. donated 4,000 roses to the Newburg state hospital June 27.

PORT ALLEGANY, PA.—W. R. Ventres, of the Port Allegany Greenhouses, is superintending the erection of an additional building, which will consist of a greenhouse 27x105 feet and an office 18x42 feet.

DAVENPORT, IA.

The Tri-City Florists' Association met June 25 at the home of the Ewoldt brothers, on Cemetery road, north of the city, and enjoyed its annual strawberry social. Some fine large strawberries were served, being of a variety raised on the Ewoldt farm and called the Edna.

At the business meeting of the club the picnic committee reported having practically completed arrangements for the annual outing of the members and their families, to take place Thursday, July 11, which is also the date of the next regular meeting. The affair will be held at Black Hawk's Watch Tower.

The picnic is always a big affair for the members, and one to which they look forward with great expectations every year. Since the organization, the club has always made an effort to have an outing of this kind at least once every summer, at a season when it is most convenient for all to attend. Rose culture was the topic for general discussion. Robert Grapengeter was elected to membership.

MONTREAL.

Warm, sunny weather is now our daily portion. Business is quiet, although there are still a few weddings booked. Peonies are now on the market, selling at $3 per hundred. Carnations and roses are poor. Local American Beauties are over.

Mr. Campbell leaves next week for Europe, where he will remain some months.

Mr. Robinson left June 29 to spend a few days in Ottawa.

Mr. Walker, Mr. Robinson, Mr. Vreugde and others visited J. Bennett, at Lachine, June 23, and found everything in nice order. TOMMY.

CHEYENNE, WYO.—C. H. Garwood will soon move his establishment into a store which he has purchased on Ferguson street, south of the Cheyenne Feed, Fuel & Transfer Co.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—The concerted effort of a large part of the firms engaged in the trade here resulted in getting rather better prices than usual for the spring bedding plants.

LONDON, ONT.—J. Gammage & Sons, Limited, has been incorporated to carry on a florists' business, capitalized at $100,000. Provisional directors are: George Nelson Weeks and Henry Stephen Blackburn, esquires; William Wallace Gammage, florist, all of London.

ST. PAUL.

C. Bussjaeger, who, as stated in last week's REVIEW, will return to his former business of landscape gardening and handling nursery stock, has so wide an acquaintance in and around the Twin Cities that he expects to have more work than he can attend to. The busiest time is over, but still there is a lot of planting to do, and orders are coming in fast.

Holm & Olson have done a most satisfactory business in planting. The shipping of plants was greatly increased as compared with former years. The store trade during the period of graduations and weddings was so enormous as to seem almost incredible except to actual beholders.

Trade has now become dull, however, in roses and carnations, and stock of that kind is so plentiful that it can be bought at almost any price. There are also a few thousands of geraniums left. It was a mistake to charge $2 to $2.50 per dozen plants, as some florists did. It is pretty hard to speculate in plants. Everybody, rich or poor, expects to buy a good little plant for 10 to 12 cents, and hates to hear a florist lamenting about the long winters, the price of coal, and so on.

C. B.

PAINESVILLE, OHIO.

W. C. Werner, who is a member of Federal Local Union 11651, has suggested that the labor unions of Painesville select a memorial day to decorate the graves of the deceased brothers, and promises that if the date be made in the month of October he will furnish all the flowers for such purpose free of charge, and would also furnish a conveyance to have the flowers taken to the cemetery. The matter will be referred to local unions.

I WATCH for the coming of the REVIEW each week and certainly get much pleasure and profit from reading it.—E. P. HALL, Shelbyville, Ky.

PEORIA, ILL.—Thomas Wotton, head florist at Glen Oak park, met with a painful accident June 13. With seven other men he was assisting in lowering a large tree which had been sawed off. Guy ropes were attached to it to prevent its falling across a bridge. As the tree fell, Mr. Wotton had hold of the loose end of a running rope and he was drawn with such violence into the pulley as to disable both his hands, and after he struck the pulley was hurled twenty feet. The left hand was so badly mangled as to necessitate the amputating of the first and middle fingers.

Current Comment.

Summer conditions now prevail, although trade in all lines has been remarkably good. Benching mums is the order of the day.

The picnic held June 26 at Willowmere, on invitation of Frank Harritt, was an enjoyable affair, for the location is an ideal place for such a gathering. Mr. Harritt spared no pains to make all welcome and to provide a good time. Willowmere is just being brought into control and Mr. Harritt has a busy time before him before his plans are all carried out. For the short time he has been on the place he has worked wonders and has a world of hardy stuff planted. He is now making a pond to grow aquatics. Willowmere is located on the Rushville traction line about eight miles from the city.

Homer Wiegand is putting in his time solving the mysteries of installing a successful heating plant.

E. A. Nelson is experimenting with a railroad of his own to empty and fill the benches.

Several of the local craft are talking of the trip to Philadelphia in August and planning side trips. This should be the banner year for the S. A. F. S.

MANCHESTER, MASS.

The rose show of the North Shore Horticultural Society will be held July 10 and 11, on the grounds of the Essex County Club, Manchester.

At the last meeting of this society, Eric Wetterlow showed a fine collection of cut blooms of gloxinias, arranged with maidenhair ferns. James Scott had a table of rhododendrons, Xanthorrhiza lorbifolia, and anemones. James McGregor had a collection of German and Spanish iris, and William Till a collection of perennial lupines. W. T.

AUSTIN, TEX.—E. Friedrich is building another greenhouse, so as to be able to supply the increasing demand for ferns, begonias, geraniums, etc.

PORTLAND, IND.—During the wind storm of Sunday night, June 23, the framework for the new greenhouses being erected by Frank & Sons was blown down. The timbers in several places were thrown against the present houses and some glass was broken. The damage will not be great.

Record broken by Godfrey Aschmann, of Philadelphia, the well-known Araucaria Specialist of America.

Watch Us Grow

1907 is our 12th anniversary in a successful career in the importation, growing and shipping of that well-known and well-admired evergreen decorative plant,

Araucaria Excelsa, Compacta Robusta and Glauca.

Beginning with the first year, 1895, with an importation of 100, this Spring, 1907, our importation has swollen to the enormous quantity of 6000 of the 3 best known ARAUCARIAS, Excelsa, Compacta Robusta and Glauca. Our Araucarias are so well introduced that they represent every city, county and state of America, from the Atlantic to the Pacific and as far as Cuba and Mexico. It is always my earnest desire to improve my system in buying, raising, selling and shipping our production to such an extent that it not only benefits us but so that it will yield a fair profit into the pockets of the buyers.

Now is the time to fill your empty houses and make money fast, as the plants will grow into money while you sleep.

Araucaria Excelsa, 5-in. pots, 10 to 12 inches high, 2-year old, 3 tiers, 50c each. Larger sizes 5, 5½ to 6-in. pots, 2, 3 and 4 years old, 60c, 75c, $1.00 to $1.25.

Araucaria Compacta Robusta, 6-in. pots, 2 to 3 years old, 10, 15, 18 inches high, 3 to 4 tiers, $1.00, $1.25, $1.75 to $2.00 each.

Araucaria Glauca, 3, 4, 5 tiers, 2 to 3 years old, very beautiful, as broad as they are long, 10, 12, 15 to 20 inches high, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75 to $2.00 each.

Compacta Robusta, specimen plants of last year's importation, 5 years old, 30 inches high, 6, 7, to 8-in. pots, 5 tiers, $2.50 to $3.00 each.

Specimen Glauca, beautiful, 36 to 40 inches high, 5 tiers, as broad as long, $4.00 each, worth $10.00.

Kentia Forsteriana and Belmoreana, European stock, 6-in. pots, 25 to 30 inches high, 5 leaves, $1.00 to $1.25; 4-in. pots, 18 to 20 inches high, 35c.

Cocos Weddelliana, 3-in. pots, 10, 12 to 15 inches high, 15c, 18c to 20c.

Areca Lutescens, 4-in., made up 3 in a pot, 20c per pot.

ASTERS.

ROSBACH'S COMMERCIAL LATE.

We have been growing and perfecting this strain for the past five years and find it the best commercial variety that we have ever grown. On account of the uniformly double nature of the flowers it produces but little seed, consequently this is the first time that we are enabled to offer it to the trade. Shell-pink, rose (a grand flower) and purple, $3.50 per 1000. Olmstead's Commercial White, the best early all-purpose florists' aster in cultivation, $3.00 per 1000.

Simple's, as good as you can get anywhere—white, shell-pink and purple, separate, $2.50 per 1000.
A. & G. Rosbach, Pemberton, N. J.

Horticultural Books

We can supply any of the following books at the prices noted, postpaid, and any other book at publishers' price:

The Dahlia.

By LAWRENCE K. PEACOCK. A practical treatise on the habits, characteristics, cultivation and history of the dahlia with a descriptive list of all the best varieties. Copiously and elegantly illustrated. 30 cents

Ornamental Gardening for Americans.

By ELIAS A. LONG, landscape architect. A treatise on beautifying homes, rural districts and cemeteries. A plain and practical work with numerous illustrations and instructions so plain that they may be readily followed. Illustrated. Cloth. 390 pages. $1.50

Handbook of Practical Landscape Gardening.

By F. R. ELLIOTT. Designed for city and suburban residences and country schoolhouses, containing designs for lots and grounds, from a lot 30x100 feet to a 40-acre plant. Cloth. $1.50

The Chrysanthemum.

By ARTHUR HERRINGTON, formerly president of Chrysanthemum Society of America. The most complete and comprehensive work on the cultivation of the chrysanthemum that has yet been published in America. The book will be welcomed for the lucid, comprehensive, as well as the practical character of its contents. Handsomely illustrated. 168 pages, 5x7 inches. 50 cents

Greenhouse Construction.

By PROF. L. R. TAFT. A complete manual on the building, heating, ventilating and arrangement of greenhouses, and the construction of hotbeds, frames and plant pits. Lucid descriptions and 118 diagrams and illustrations make every detail clear to the amateur and professional gardener and florist. Cloth. 218 pages. $1.50

Gardening for Profit.

By PETER HENDERSON. The standard work on market and family gardening. The successful experience of the author for more than thirty years, and his willingness to tell, as he does in this work, the secret of his success for the benefit of others, enables him to give most valuable information. The book is profusely illustrated. 376 pages. Cloth. $1.50

Cabbage, Cauliflower and Allied Vegetables.

By C. L. ALLEN. An explanation of the requirements, conditions, cultivation and general management pertaining to the entire cabbage group. The chapter on seed raising is probably the most authoritative treatise on this subject ever published. Insects and fungi are given due attention. Illustrated. 128 pages. Cloth. 50 cents

Mushrooms—How to Grow Them.

By WM. FALCONER. This is the most practical work on the subject ever written, and the only book on growing mushrooms published in America. The author describes how he grows mushrooms and how they are grown for profit by the leading market gardeners, and for home use by the most successful private growers. Engravings drawn from nature expressly for this work. Cloth. $1.00

The History and Culture of Grafted Roses for Forcing.

By ALEX. MONTGOMERY, JR. The most important contribution to the modern literature of the rose. Of much interest to every rose grower and of utmost value to growers of grafted roses. Containing practical description of the process of grafting with full details of planting and culture; also directions for treatment to carry the plants a second year. 35 cents

Greenhouse Management.

By PROF. L. R. TAFT, of Michigan Agricultural College. A manual for florists and flower lovers on the forcing of flowers, vegetables and fruits in greenhouses, and the propagation and care of house plants. It treats of all the plants commonly cultivated by florists and amateurs, and explains in a thorough manner the methods that have been found most successful in growing them. Particular attention is paid to the growing of cut flowers, the growing of fruits under glass, etc. Of special value will be the directions for treating plants when attacked by insects and fungi. The preparation of the soil, the use of various manures, composts and fertilizers, watering, ventilating and heating receive careful and minute attention. Cloth. 400 pages. $1.50

BUFFALO.

The Market.

Business last week was good, but the warm weather has played havoc with the stock. Maids and Brides are small and carnations are good only for one day. The cleaning up time is now here, so stock of this kind will be scarce for some time. Around this section the big growers are scarce, so we do not have the advantage of early planted stock. However, everybody manages to keep enough, so we pull through all right.

We have had some heavy rains throughout this section, which are a big relief to the growers with outdoor stock. Everybody has reports of fine carnations outdoors, but something always happens just before planting time, which finds some one short.

Various Notes.

In a recent article in a Buffalo paper there was a story which read as follows: "A lady had a most successful patch of dahlias, which were greatly admired by all who saw them. The result was that she promised the neighbors some of the bulbs the next spring. Everybody received a share and the richest patches of ground were procured for the planting. The crop grew splendidly, but the flowers were those of the everyday potato. Everybody went to the lady for an explanation and she explained it as the result of bud variation." We are now awaiting a reply from the dahlia

CARE OF UNUSED BOILER.

Kindly advise me how to care for my hot water horizontal tubular boiler. We are through firing. The boiler is in a pit under the potting shed. We have drawn all water from the boiler and pipes.
C. A. M.

Thoroughly wash out the pipes and boiler by filling it with clean water and a good boiler compound; then draw off the water and compound and refill with clean water, preferably rain water. Keep the pipes and boiler full during the resting season. If the boiler is not bricked in, whitewash the exposed metal parts or paint them with asphaltum varnish.
L. C. C.

FEWER RETURNS THAN FLOWS.

We have a rose house 20x100 feet, heated by hot water. On each side there are four flows and three returns, all 2-inch pipe. From the boiler is a 3-inch riser, dividing into two 2½-inch pipes, one feeding the four 2-inch flows on each side of the house. Can the 2½-inch pipe deliver the water to the four 2-inch flows rapidly enough?
M. J.

The piping you have installed is sufficient in quantity and the flow pipes are large enough. The only criticism is that you have impeded the circulation by using fewer returns than flows. If you had three flows and four returns, the circulation would be better, and if you were to carry the 2½-inch pipe the length of the house and use the seven 2-inch pipes on each side as returns you would have a still better arrangement.
L. C. C.

STEAM FROM A PUMPING PLANT.

We have a house, 20x80 feet, which we use for general greenhouse stuff. Our hot water boiler has proved to be too small. Now, there is an electric power and pumping plant located about eighty feet from us. Would it be practicable to use steam from that plant in our house, and could we use our hot water pipes? We have four runs of 4-inch pipe running around the house, under the benches. Which do you think would be the better plan, to use the steam or buy a new boiler?
P. A. H.

It is perfectly feasible to heat the house in question with steam from the pumping plant, but you can not use 4-inch cast-iron pipe for the purpose. You can substitute a 2-inch flow and twelve 1½-inch returns for the cast pipe and use steam, or you can increase the size of your boiler. The piping you have, with a boiler rated to supply 1,000 to 1,200 feet of 4-inch pipe, should give you good service.
L. C. C.

DON'T USE STEAM.

I have one house 20x75 and another 20x56 feet, Pennsylvania climate, and intend to heat by steam. What kind of boiler would you advise me to buy?
J. C.

It will, unless there are exceptional circumstances not mentioned in the inquiry, be much better to use hot water and not steam for heating these two houses.

To install a plant for hot water is slightly more expensive than to install an apparatus for steam, because of the greater amount of pipe and larger size required; but in an establishment of this size there would be no occasion for a night man, who would be a necessity if steam heat were used.

As to the boiler to buy, consult the advertisements in the REVIEW; each is a good boiler, else it would not be advertised.

The Market.

With the advent of July business has settled down to the usual summer quietness. There is about enough doing in the selling way to keep the craft awake, but the wholesale houses are kept on the move unpacking stock in the mornings, taking care of it and getting rid of that left over from the day before. Carnations and sweet peas have been coming in by the thousand. There seems to be no end to them. I doubt if ever before there have been so many of them coming into this market, nor has a glut ever held on so long. As yet the end is not in sight.

Roses are only moderately plentiful and good ones are scarce. As a consequence they sell fairly well and at pretty good prices. The fakers have been having their innings all around and a good portion of the stock which was moved was sold to them. There are quite a few street salesmen in this city now.

This market is now well fixed for ferns. Some good smilax is to be had, also Sprenger. Asparagus is inclined to be scarce.

Various Notes.

The annual meeting and election of officers of the Florists' Society will be held in the club rooms Saturday, July 13, at 8 p. m. The nomination and election will be held at the same time, owing to the fact that there was no meeting last month. There will also be several items of importance to be brought up at this meeting and a large attendance is earnestly requested by the retiring officers.

John Ernstohoff, aged 78 years, whose greenhouses are located near the Evergreen cemetery, Campbell county, Kentucky, died June 27 of apoplexy. He was one of the oldest florists in this locality and was well known and respected by all of the craft. He conducted the greenhouse business at the present local-

CARE OF UNUSED BOILER.

Kindly advise me how to care for my hot water horizontal tubular boiler. We are through firing. The boiler is in a pit under the potting shed. We have drawn all water from the boiler and pipes.
C. A. M.

Thoroughly wash out the pipes and boiler by filling it with clean water and a good boiler compound; then draw off the water and compound and refill with clean water, preferably rain water. Keep the pipes and boiler full during the resting season. If the boiler is not bricked in, whitewash the exposed metal parts or paint them with asphaltum varnish.
L. C. C.

FEWER RETURNS THAN FLOWS.

We have a rose house 20x100 feet, heated by hot water. On each side there are four flows and three returns, all 2-inch pipe. From the boiler is a 3-inch riser, dividing into two 2½-inch pipes, one feeding the four 2-inch flows on each side of the house. Can the 2½-inch pipe deliver the water to the four 2-inch flows rapidly enough?
M. J.

The piping you have installed is sufficient in quantity and the flow pipes are large enough. The only criticism is that you have impeded the circulation by using fewer returns than flows. If you had three flows and four returns, the circulation would be better, and if you were to carry the 2½-inch pipe the length of the house and use the seven 2-inch pipes on each side as returns you would have a still better arrangement.
L. C. C.

STEAM FROM A PUMPING PLANT.

We have a house, 20x80 feet, which we use for general greenhouse stuff. Our hot water boiler has proved to be too small. Now, there is an electric power and pumping plant located about eighty feet from us. Would it be practicable to use steam from that plant in our house, and could we use our hot water pipes? We have four runs of 4-inch pipe running around the house, under the benches. Which do you think would be the better plan, to use the steam or buy a new boiler?
P. A. H.

It is perfectly feasible to heat the house in question with steam from the pumping plant, but you can not use 4-inch cast-iron pipe for the purpose. You can substitute a 2-inch flow and twelve 1½-inch returns for the cast pipe and use steam, or you can increase the size of your boiler. The piping you have, with a boiler rated to supply 1,000 to 1,200 feet of 4-inch pipe, should give you good service.
L. C. C.

DON'T USE STEAM.

I have one house 20x75 and another 20x56 feet, Pennsylvania climate, and intend to heat by steam. What kind of boiler would you advise me to buy?
J. C.

It will, unless there are exceptional circumstances not mentioned in the inquiry, be much better to use hot water and not steam for heating these two houses.

To install a plant for hot water is slightly more expensive than to install an apparatus for steam, because of the greater amount of pipe and larger size required; but in an establishment of this size there would be no occasion for a night man, who would be a necessity if steam heat were used.

As to the boiler to buy, consult the advertisements in the REVIEW; each is a good boiler, else it would not be advertised.

The Market.

With the advent of July business has settled down to the usual summer quietness. There is about enough doing in the selling way to keep the craft awake, but the wholesale houses are kept on the move unpacking stock in the mornings, taking care of it and getting rid of that left over from the day before. Carnations and sweet peas have been coming in by the thousand. There seems to be no end to them. I doubt if ever before there have been so many of them coming into this market, nor has a glut ever held on so long. As yet the end is not in sight.

Roses are only moderately plentiful and good ones are scarce. As a consequence they sell fairly well and at pretty good prices. The fakers have been having their innings all around and a good portion of the stock which was moved was sold to them. There are quite a few street salesmen in this city now.

This market is now well fixed for ferns. Some good smilax is to be had, also Sprengerii. Asparagus is inclined to be scarce.

Various Notes.

The annual meeting and election of officers of the Florists' Society will be held in the club rooms Saturday, July 13, at 8 p. m. The nomination and election will be held at the same time, owing to the fact that there was no meeting last month. There will also be several items of importance to be brought up at this meeting and a large attendance is earnestly requested by the retiring officers.

The Market.

Summer is in evidence at the stores at last. There is little doing in the way of business.

White roses were remarkably scarce last week and are still none too plentiful, although a good crop of Kaiserin is expected soon. There was an unusually big demand for white roses for several days, which more than cleaned up the market. Brides and Maids are showing the effects of the hot weather, becoming smaller daily, and the stems are weak. For some time large shipments of La Detroit have arrived, but Robert Klagge's crop is just about off, causing a falling off of these shipments.

Carnations are more of a glut than was at first expected. White is about the only color that sells fairly well. Enchantress is piling up by the thousands. Lawson, reds and the Harlowarden color are also plentiful.

Sweet peas meet with good sale, but it is thought that this will drop off this week. Michigan ferns are now arriving in large quantities and some southern is still arriving.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

CARE OF BENCHED PLANTS.

Fight the Flies.

One of the first things to be attended to, as soon as the plants begin to grow in the benches, is the green and black fly. Get your plants absolutely clean and they will often keep entirely clean all summer, so far as fly is concerned. One or two good fumigations will, as a rule, be sufficient. It is a very common thing to see a nice lot of plants badly burned round the edges by fumigating, but personally I have never had any harm come to my stock when I used the tobacco dust made and sold for the purpose. It is much quicker than spraying with a liquid, costs less and is safer.

Weeds.

When your plants are cleaned, attend to the benches. For the first few weeks, weeds will make considerable work. The surface should be frequently rubbed over, and by that means many of the weeds will be killed shortly after germination. I like to see soil that produces a good crop of weeds. It shows that the soil is "live" and in good condition. When a soil is too poor or too sour to grow weeds it will not grow good mums, so I always consider a crop of weeds a healthy sign, but I do not permit my liking for the weeds to go to the point of smothering the young plants and causing them to struggle for a living at the outset. A frequent stirring of the soil soon destroys the weeds. I like to go over the benches once a week all through the season, cleaning out suckers, dead leaves, caterpillars, etc., and consider it time well spent.

Buds.

Many kinds are producing buds and some call for careful handling at this season. A variety like Duckham, which produces a bud and then comes away at once with a clean, kind growth, is no trouble at all, but there are others which, instead of making a growth shoot, will produce just a mass of buds. W. R. Church is perhaps the worst variety grown today, in this respect. Keep the buds closely picked off and eventually you will get a shoot or else a sucker out of the ground that will push along and make a stem. I have heard many theories expressed as to why some plants run all to bud. While some kinds are naturally disposed to do this to a certain extent, the reason for their doing it is a sudden check of some kind. It may be an atmospheric condition, or the plant may be checked at the root by being dry at various times, or the cutting may have got hide-bound by being too long in the sand before potting.

Where a cutting is handled as soon as it is ready for handling from the first, and grown along properly, there is rarely any trouble with it. A day of blinding sunshine following a protracted dull spell of weather will check plants, but not enough to cause them to go buddy if sufficient moisture is given at the root and in the atmosphere.

It is not wise, no matter how good the shoot looks, to retain the first shoot immediately below the bud, as it often makes three or four leaves only and then produces another bud. Do not remove any of the shoots until you are reasonably sure that the one you are keeping is good.

Some growers cut a plant right back to the ground that persists in making buds instead of a growth, but unless a sucker is showing or the plant is very small it means considerable time lost, and when we get into July we have no time to spare.

CHARLES H. TOTTY.

BEST MUMS FOR POT CULTURE.

Please let me know which you think are the best chrysanthemums to grow in pots. I only grow about 600 of them. Please name the best incurved varieties in white, pink, yellow and red. S. S.

The best incurving varieties to grow for pot culture would include the following kinds: White—Beatrice May, White Duckham, Merza. Pink—Mary Mann, W. Duckham, Winter Cheer. Yellow—Col. Appleton, Bonnaffon, October Sunshine. Red—W. R. Church, S. T. Wright, Mrs. H. Partridge.

I can understand why so many florists grow only the incurving types for cut flowers, but I do not see why S. S. would have to confine himself to incurved varieties for pot plants. The two kinds most widely grown as pot plants are Pacific and its sport, Polly Rose, but I did not list them in the above, as they are not incurving varieties, though excellent for pot work.

Other kinds splendidly adapted to pot culture are Cheltoni, Nellie Pockett, Lady Hopetoun, Old Gold and Mrs. T. W. Pockett. S. S., unless he is wedded to his own idea of incurved, would do well to try these. They are very dwarf, with fine foliage and stem, and these are very important essentials for pot plants.

C. H. TOTTY.

TROUBLE WITH ASTERS.

I take the liberty to write to you to ask a little advice concerning cutworms on asters. I would like to know the best remedy for them, if you could tell me what to use. The aster crop is looking first-rate. They had a late start, but are doing nicely. There will be an over-supply of asters in this section. O. G.

Cutworms usually cease troubling garden plants early in July and we do not think you will have much further trouble with them. If they continue to attack your plants, make a mixture of fresh shorts or bran and molasses, adding a spoonful or two of either Paris green or white arsenic, and drop in their haunts. Lime and soot dusted over the plants also helps to keep them in check. Slug-shot has been successfully tried by some growers and is said to kill the pests. If your land is full of cutworms we would advise liming it in the fall, before freezing up weather, and plowing it over.

C. W.

CARNATION NOTES.—WEST.

Eschew the Hose.

During this month and next we are apt to have some prolonged spells of dry weather and one is tempted to run the hose out to the field to water the carnation plants. If large plants were the desired object, this would be the proper thing to do, but for some years we have considered the size of the plants as of minor importance. In fact, we rather prefer a plant of medium size and well matured for housing. This can best be secured in a season of only average rainfall.

I have always held that in our section we seldom have a summer during which we do not get enough rain to produce splendid plants, if they were strong young plants when set out, at the proper time. Sometimes they will appear a trifle undersize at a certain date, but if housed at the usual time, they will be found in good condition to take hold, and by the beginning of winter they will be carrying as many buds as usual.

By this I do not mean plants that were propagated late and were hardly rooted through by the end of the planting season. Such plants will seldom make good stock for early planting and, if such a thing is desired, then some watering must usually be done, but it should be done at the right time in order to get the plants into proper condition for housing. The watering should be begun as soon after planting out as the plants seem to need it to give a good start and to get them into a strong growth. When that stage has been reached it should be diminished and gradually withheld until none is given except what falls in the shape of rain, and the less of that the better during the last couple of weeks the plants are in the field.

Years ago we used to delight in seeing the plants almost double in size every couple of weeks during the last of August and September, but not so now. Close observation during dry seasons soon taught us the value of a well hardened plant. During such seasons the loss of plants would be light, less difficulty would be experienced in preventing wilting and the early crop of blooms would invariably be of better quality. This has also been largely responsible for the present methods of early planting, when the plants are just between the early summer and the fall growths.

Best Soil for Field Use.

This of course applies mostly to a soil that will crumble readily when dry, but even in clay soil it applies in all particulars except at digging time. When at all possible, carnations that are to be lifted should be planted on land that is naturally of a sandy nature, for the above named reason. A clay soil is apt to hold the moisture and produce a soft plant, and if you wait for a dry spell, when the plants are hardened off some, the soil will come up in lumps that tear the roots.

Water Soon if at All.

So if you think you must do some watering in order to get plants of fair size, then do it during the next few weeks. If it is not needed then, it will not be needed at all. Be sure you give the plants several weeks of dry weather before you begin housing them, so they will be ripened properly. And when you water, give enough to go through the dry soil, and then some. After allowing the top to dry off, go through them with the cultivator, the same as you would after a rain. Such a soaking will not last so long as a good soaking rain, because of the condition of the atmosphere. After a rain the atmosphere is charged with moisture and evaporation ceases for some time, while after your soaking with the hose evaporation is rapid and much of the water you applied soon goes up in the air instead of moistening the soil. So while a soaking rain once each week is sufficient to keep the soil in fine shape, it will require at least twice as many soakings from the hose to have the same beneficial effects, if the same effect can be secured, which I doubt very much indeed.

The best time to apply the water is during the night. Evaporation is less than during the day; in fact, during dry spells the dew is usually heavy. This gives the soil a chance to take in the water. When applied at night there is no danger of scalding the foliage. While carnation foliage does not scald easily, yet it can not be the best thing to wet the plants while the sun is the hottest. Especially is this true if the roots are dry.

No fear need be entertained about starting disease by having the plants wet over night any more than if water were applied during the day. If it were applied every night, such a thing would be possible, but when several bright days elapse between each watering, no such danger will exist. A. F. J. BAUR.

LIFTING PLANTS FOR HOUSING.

Is it advisable to remove the soil from the roots of carnation plants when lifting them from the field to transplant in the house? I have plants which were raised in pots before planting in the field and naturally the roots form quite a ball of earth. W. B.

I would not consider it wise to shake all the soil from the roots when lifting them from the field. We try to lift with a ball of soil as large as our fist, whenever it is possible, but in many cases the soil will all shake off. While we consider the former some advantage in reestablishing the plants, yet the difference is not great enough to cause us any worry if the soil all shakes off. The main thing in lifting carnations is to break the roots as little as possible. If you get all the roots it will not take the plant long to recuperate, even if all the soil was shaken from the roots, if close attention is given to syringing, etc. Plants taken from pots will usually lift with a good ball better than those grown in flats. A. F. J. B.

mon occurrence among the sweetbrier tribe of roses, and sometimes it extends to the mosses and hybrid teas, although not frequently. It prevails during cold, damp weather, particularly among old bushes in shady situations, and but rarely where exposed to full sunshine.

It is really a diversion of most of the petals—in some cases all of them—and pistils into stamens, which in some cases become so crowded as to assume the appearance of a tuft of moss.

This is no real disease, as perfectly developed buds can be found on the same bush; nor has it a tendency to spread to other plants. It does not affect hybrid perpetual roses and has not been observed on any class of roses under glass.

It is in all probability caused by some insect interfering with the bud in its embryonic stage, or it may be due to climatic conditions.

It is more an object of curiosity than of alarm. RIBES.

THE PEONY BUSINESS.

"At present there is little or no profit in peony culture, because its lists cannot be depended upon. A customer cannot be sure what variety he is getting, or whether a variety is correctly named or not, and no one is in a position to tell him."

The above quotation from the address of C. W. Ward, president of the American Peony Society, at the Ithaca convention, puts the peony business in a most unfavorable light. If it be true that there is "little or no profit" in the peony business, for the reason alleged, or any other, it does not afford much encouragement for the scores of men who, in the last two or three years, have invested goodly sums and much time in large plantations of peonies for commercial purposes. Fortunately there are peony growers who do not take the same view.

"You can quote me," said William A. Peterson, "in saying that there never was as great a demand for high-class varieties as there is today; and more money than ever before is being invested in them by thoughtful buyers. I consider peonies one of the most profitable departments of our business."

"Is the nomenclature of the peony in as bad a way as it has been made to appear in the last few years?" he was asked. "Is it impossible to buy and be sure of getting what you want?"

"There are, as we all know, instances of varieties being sold under more than one name, but we have for some years, and do now, guarantee to replace with three any plant we sell which does not prove true, and that, we think, refutes the idea that it is impossible for one to know what he is buying."

SWEET PEAS.

I have two benches which are at present devoted to mums and I intend growing sweet peas in the same benches after mums are over. Could I sow the seed in boxes, about two feet six inches long and five inches wide and about four or five inches deep, making the boxes in such a way that I could draw them apart and put into the benches after the mums are over? If so, when would you advise sowing the seed to have bloom about October 1?

I also have another bench on which I intend growing sweet peas. When would you advise sowing the seeds to have the flowers about October 1? I would like a good white, apple-blossom color, pink

BLACKENED ROSE LEAVES.

What causes the tip of leaves of outdoor, shaded Crimson and Baby Rambler tree roses to turn black and then dry up? Would syringing be helpful? The roses can be reached with a hose. A READER.

Without the opportunity of examining the plants and surroundings, it would not be safe to give an opinion as to the cause for this trouble. As a rule, ramblers do much better where exposed to full sunshine than they do in the shade; in fact, all roses do, being decided lovers of sunshine.

Cultivating around the roots frequently and using the syringe freely will in most cases tend towards helping the plants, encouraging root action and keeping the foliage free from insects, and also providing a sufficiency of moisture among the leaves. RIBES.

GREEN CENTER IN ROSEBUDS.

Can you throw any light on the cause of the green center in my rosebuds? It is an outdoor rose and these green centers come alongside of some without them. A. H.

This malformation is not an uncom-and several other good colors. In these three benches I have about four feet six inches headroom. Would the mum soil do for the planting? These benches are about two feet six inches wide. I would like to grow something in the form of the sweet pea that would be good for cutting. SUBSCRIBER.

I would not recommend growing sweet peas to bloom so early as October 1. Chrysanthemums, even if you grow only early varieties, like Pacific and Polly Rose, will not be out of the way before the end of the month and if a general assortment is grown it will be a month later. There is but a poor call for other flowers during the mum season and I think if you would time them to bloom about Thanksgiving they would pay you much better. To bloom them at that date will take about fourteen weeks. The seed does not germinate so well in hot weather, as a rule. You can sow in flats or small pots and later transfer to boxes if you wish, keeping the plants outdoors as long as the weather permits. You will find it rather difficult to take your boxes apart and not disturb the balls of earth. Better make the boxes eight inches deep and twelve inches wide, and grow the plants in them instead of the benches.

Your headroom is too little for sweet peas, unless you run them up on strings and can continue to lower them as they reach the glass. If you prefer to plant in the benches, give the chrysanthemum soil a dressing of well-rotted manure and turn it over before planting the peas.

Only a few varieties succeed well under glass in winter. The best are Earliest of All, pink and white; Mont Blanc, pure white, and Sunbeam, pale primrose. A. C. Zvolanek has, however, several other colors which succeed well in winter.

Along the edges of the benches you might plant forget-me-not or sweet alysum. We think you would find antirrhinums a good crop with which to follow the mums. Root cuttings now and pot along as needed, or sow seeds of separate colors, using the best selection of the tall varieties. C. W.

Magnolia Stellata.

MAGNOLIA STELLATA.

One of the hardiest of the magnolias, which are among the most ornamental of our trees and shrubs, is M. stellata, which makes a beautiful shrub or small tree. Its flowering season is usually in April, but in mild seasons its blooms appear even earlier. It precedes the well-known forsythias and a well-grown bush makes a most striking object in early spring. Like all magnolias, it does not take kindly to transplanting and the best success is attained by moving it with a good ball just before growth commences. A rich, well-drained and moderately moist location suits it best, although it succeeds in less favored places. The plants commence to flower when quite small, little bushes two feet high being often white with flowers. Propagation is by seed and grafting.

The excellent specimen illustrated was grown by Thomas Howden on the Whitin estate, Whitinsville, Mass., where there is a fine collection of choice trees and shrubs. W. N. CRAIG.

plant-bed cloths can be spread to prevent drying out of the soil until the little plants are well above ground.

Seeds may be procured, either mixed or in separate colors. Collection packets of six or twelve colors are purchasable and invariably give fine flowers, being carefully selected seeds. The strain known as Chater's has a world-wide celebrity and is of superior quality. While double hollyhocks are most in demand, the single ones are pretty and well worth a place in any garden. There is a strain of single annual hollyhocks introduced by a New York firm some years ago. Seeds of these sown in February and March will bloom the same year. Mixed assortments only are procurable of this variety. We think that eventually an annual race with desirable colorings will be evolved.

The seedlings, when large enough to handle, should be transplanted into good garden soil a foot apart and the ground be kept well cultivated. In some locations the plants can be planted out in fall and will come through with a light coating of leaves or straw, but it is safer to place them moderately thick in coldframes and plant out in April.

The hollyhock fungus, which has proved so destructive, usually shows itself in the form of raised spots, reddish brown at first, becoming darker later, on the under sides of the leaves. Affected leaves should be picked off and burned and the plants sprayed either with Bordeaux mixture or some other fungicide. The disease has been much less rife of late years and we all are glad to see these popular plants once more coming to the fore. In favorable locations the plants will stand for several years and give a fine crop of spikes each season.

Coreopsis Grandiflora.

For cutting at this season few plants are superior to that popular yellow composite, Coreopsis grandiflora. If the seed pods are picked off, a crop of flowers may be had until fall. In order to have strong plants for next year, sow now. Probably you can find some pods

SEASONABLE

SUGGESTIONS

Hollyhocks.

That popular hardy herbaceous plant, the hollyhock, has come back into favor in the last few years. It is to be regretted that the ravages of the disease, which has limited it more or less for the last half century, should have so restricted its culture, for certainly no other summer-blooming plant can compare with it for stately beauty. The present season our plants are immune from disease and are just coming into flower. The cool, moist weather in May and the first half of June suited them to a nicety. The stems will now need staking, or they are liable to be broken in heavy storms of wind and rain.

Seed may now be sown to secure strong flowering plants another summer. There is usually a good call for such plants in the spring and the average retail florist can sell a good many if he will but flower a few nice plants himself and tell his customers to place orders for stock for another season. Seed may be sown either in the open or, better still, in a coldframe over which some of ripe seed on your plants which will answer just as well as any you can purchase at the seed stores. The seeds soon germinate and if pricked out in the open ground a foot apart, will make splendid plants before fall.

While moderately hardy, we find it better to give the plants the benefit of a coldframe protection over winter.

In addition to its value as an outdoor summer-flowering plant, C. grandiflora makes a desirable subject for pot culture. For this purpose select a number of the strongest clumps, pot into 6-inch and 8-inch pots in October, keep outdoors until sharp frost sets in, then place in a cold pit. Give the plants a carnation-house temperature after the New Year and you will have flowers for Easter; or, if you wish to hold them later, they will be found useful for Memorial day bouquets. The plants require copious supplies of water when in pots, and plenty of feeding. They also need some support before they come into bloom.

Leptosyne maritima is another plant adapted for pot culture, producing large pale yellow flowers on long stems. Sown in October it will bloom the following spring. This is an annual, while the coreopsis is a perennial but is best treated as a biennial.

Campanu'as.

Campanulas are beautiful subjects for the hardy border, while one or two varieties make desirable pot plants. Probably C. medium, better known as Canterbury bells, are the most popular. During the last few years these have been on the markets at Easter from a number of wideawake growers and meet with a ready sale. For pot culture the plants should be lifted and potted in October and treated as recommended for coreopsis. If seeds were not sown when recommended in these columns, lose no time in getting them in.

The single varieties are considered the best for pot culture, although some prefer C. calycanthema, the cup and saucer open after April and securely staked as the flower stems grow.

C. persicifolia, with large, blue, cup-shaped flowers, may be sown now. There are several forms of this, including alba, grandiflora and the new pure white semi-double Moerheimi. All are of easy culture and the flowers are good either for design work or for cutting on long stems. All the forms are perfectly hardy. C. Mariesii, the Japanese balloon flower, is a late blooming variety with rich, violet flowers, usually in season during August and September. In the way of dwarf campanulas the pretty little C. Carpatica, the Carpathian bellflower, with erect, blue, bell-shaped flowers, and its white form, should not be omitted. Whether in rock garden or mixed border they are effective, forming large tufts six inches in height.

Lychnis.

These popular and profuse blooming perennials are all of the easiest possible culture and give a succession of bloom from the end of May until September. All may be raised from seeds sown in a shaded frame. They can be propagated also by division of the clumps in spring or fall. L. viscaria splendens, with rosy-scarlet flowers, carried on spikes eighteen inches high, is one of the finest perennials grown. The flowers are fine for cutting. L. Flos-cuculi, commonly known as the cuckoo flower and ragged robin, is another excellent variety. There are some fine forms of this with double flowers. The plants bloom persistently. L. Sieboldii, with white flowers, and L. fulgens, scarlet, growing eighteen inches high, are each desirable. The well known L. Chalcedonica, or London pride, with brilliant scarlet heads of bloom, makes an excellent border plant. There is also a pure white variety of this. L. Haageana and its several hybrids show a wide range of color. They all grow easily from seeds and are good for the borders or for cutting. L. diurna flore pleno, double crimson, and L. vespertina flore better. Care is taken to pick off the heads of pollen daily, to keep the blooms clean. It is a pity that this is necessary, for we think the pollen masses add much to the flower's beauty.

L. auratum has spikes well advanced and some flowers will be open in a few days. These, like all hardy lilies, have been well mulched with old manure to assist in keeping the roots cool and moist. As the flowers are heavy, the stems are now staked up to keep them intact. This lily has rather a powerful odor for room decoration, but stood on the piazza in large vases it is quite effective.

L. speciosum and its varieties are of great value later in the season. The first buds are showing on some spikes. These generally do without supporting, but in the case of extra fine stalks it will pay to support them.

L. Henryi is the strongest and most satisfactory lily grown. Its freedom from disease is one great advantage. The stems are now of good length and had better be supported.

The various forms of L. elegans have just passed out of bloom, but L. longiflorum, fall planted, will soon be in bloom. The stalks of this are sufficiently stout to render staking unnecessary. L. superbum and L. tigrinum, the well-known tiger lily, have stems of considerable length now and will give a wealth of flowers later. When they grow five to seven feet in height, as some of ours do, staking is necessary. Each of these is fine for cutting, and for decorating the store window in late summer they are excellent.

L. Brownii, with its big, trumpet flowers on moderately slender stems, should be tied up at once or the flowers will lie on the ground.

L. excelsum and L. Batmanniae, two lovely varieties, will also be the better for some support.

While some of these lilies are not grown much commercially, all are valuable and, given a suitable location where they can have some shade and be kept well mulched at the root, will prove useful, especially to the florist with a retail trade.

Brief Reminders.

Keep putting in poinsettia cuttings. Be sure to pot off those rooted before they get hard in the sand. Cuttings inserted for a month or more yet will make nice stock for pans.

Some pelargonium cuttings taken now will give you splendid plants for flowering next April and May. Do not over-water them.

Buy some pansy seed to sow in July. The best is cheapest. Also secure packets of the tufted pansies, Viola cornuta. These latter are pretty and extremely floriferous.

Keep genistas pinched or clipped to keep them shapely and pinch the tops out of any of the Indian azaleas which are growing strongly.

Do not forget your old stock plants of marguerites. Plant them out in the field, so that you can get a good batch of cuttings later.

Keep down the black aphid on mums by spraying or fumigating. Give light doses of smoke, for the foliage burns readily these hot nights.

Prune back spiræas, viburnums, dier-villas, syringas and other flowering shrubs as the flowers fade. Any newly planted stock which is growing feebly will need a severe pruning.

variety. Of the several colors, pink, pale blue and white are the most taking. C. pyramidalis, the chimney campanula, is a stately, hardy perennial, good either in the open border or for culture in large pots. For late summer piazza decorations it is fine. We have seen numerous plants in 12-inch pots and over, five to six feet high, smothered with bloom. These are usually grown in the pleno, double white, bloom all summer and should be given a place in any collection of hardy border plants.

Hardy Lilies.

The popular Madonna lily, or L. candidum, is now in season. We cut the spikes when the first flowers open and place in a cold room, where they expand fully as well as on the plants and keep much

HAIL IN MISSOURI.

By request of John G. Esler, secretary of the Florists' Hail Association, I send you a snapshot of my houses after the hail of June 14. I couldn't get a picture of all the houses from the position taken, but enough to show some poor florist how his houses may look at any time. The damage was great, owing to three houses being full of cucumbers, all trained to the roof and in full bearing. The falling glass and hail nearly put them out of business. Two acres of asters and 20,000 carnation plants in the field were almost annihilated. The streak of hail was only about a quarter of a mile wide and about two and one-half miles long, near Joplin, Mo., but I seemed to be in the strongest spot of its work. I am thankful I was insured in the Florist Hail Association, for I had 6,746 feet of broken glass.

CALCEOLARIAS.

Well-grown plants of hybrid calceolarias are not especially common, but if strict attention is paid to them from the time the seed is sown, there is no reason why any one cannot grow them. It is absolutely essential, though, that they receive constant care right through; otherwise all the labor expended on them is simply wasted.

Very soon now the seeds should be procured and sown in shallow pans, well drained and filled with a mixture of leaf-mold and sand, with perhaps a little sifted fibrous loam thrown in. The seeds are small and for that reason should not be covered with soil, but simply pressed down on the moist soil in the pans. It will also be necessary to avoid watering the seeds in course of germination in the ordinary way until the seedlings appear over the surface of the soil; instead, the pans should be dipped up to the level of the surface of the soil in water. Shade will be necessary if the pans are placed where the sunlight strikes directly. A pane of glass should be placed over each pan, gradually admitting air until, by the time the seedlings appear, the glass may be removed entirely.

Just as soon as the little plants can be handled they should be pricked off into pans similar to those from which they are taken and into the same kind of soil. A couple of inches apart will do them for this shift. The pans containing the transplanted seedlings should be placed as near the glass as possible, in a cool greenhouse or frame, preferably one with a northerly exposure.

When the young plants have made leaves an inch or more in length they should be potted into 3-inch pots, using this time a compost containing more fibrous loam and less leaf-mold. The plants, when potted, should be put again in a cool place and kept carefully watered, never allowing them to become dry at the root.

Like other quick-growing plants, they should not be potted at any shift very firmly. However, the soil should not be left too loose around the roots, because in that case the water would drain away too rapidly. In the subsequent shifting of calceolarias, pots two sizes larger than those then containing the plants may with advantage be used. As the plants develop and get near the flowering stage, use, when repotting, a compost containing three parts good turfy loam and two parts leaf-mold and well rotted manure in equal proportions.

In winter a temperature not much over 45 degrees will suit them better than any higher temperature. When the plants have grown luxuriantly it will be well to tie out the shoots so as to give them room to develop thoroughly. Manure water at frequent intervals will be very beneficial to the plants when they have fairly well established their roots in their flowering pots; it is hardly possible to overfeed them from this stage forward. The foliage of calceolarias is very apt to be ruined by carelessly watering too freely overhead, and, in order to prevent that happening, the water should be applied from underneath the leaves. To prevent the ravages of greenfly or of any other pest, tobacco stems should be strewn among the pots on the shelves where they stand.

CALCEOLARIA GOLDEN GEM.

While the herbaceous calceolarias are commonly met with in both commercial and private greenhouses, the shrubby or rugosa section, so popular in Europe for bedding purposes, is less seen than its merits deserve. It is unfortunate that our hot summer sun makes the outdoor culture of this class impossible, but for pot culture for late spring and early summer blooming they are in many respects far preferable to the larger, showier and more delicate herbaceous class.

For pot culture, cuttings should be rooted early in September in a cool house and kept potted along as needed, being flowered in 6-inch or 7-inch pots.

For the early shift a compost of leaf-mold, loam and sand will suffice, but for the final potting some old cow manure and a dash of Clay's fertilizer should be added. The plants should at all times be grown in a cool and airy house. The sunshine, which would soon ruin the herbaceous varieties, will not hurt the shrubby section in the least, but when in flower some shade will prolong the flowering period. The shoots should be pinched until the middle of March, after which the flower shoots should be allowed to come up. A few stakes should be given the plants before the flowers appear, as they are rather easily broken.

This calceolaria is in season from the middle of May to the end of June, being usually at its best about Memorial day. It is strange that it has been so neglected by commercial growers, for, whether as a pot plant or for cutting, it is excellent. The flowers last remarkably well in water. For bouquet work for Memorial day trade it should prove invaluable, while bushy plants in 6-inch pots ought to sell on sight.

If extra large plants are desired, the first season's stock can be pruned back, potted along and flowered a second time, when specimens a yard in diameter may be had. A few plants will yield an abundance of cuttings if given a slightly shaded location outdoors, where they can be occasionally watered in dry weather. Plants may also be raised from seed, which germinates readily. Brown, red and yellow shades are usually sold in the same packet. While all are good, the yellow form is the best.

SUMMER DECORATIONS.

Table decorations for summer lunches, wedding breakfasts, etc., are most attractive when they are most simple. The principal point is to create an impression of fresh outdoor blossoms and also to produce a decorative effect without lapsing into the elaborate arrangements suitable for the more important social affairs of the winter. Of course supreme simplicity may be obtained by the unvaried employment of bowls or baskets of flowers for the centerpiece, or of short-stemmed roses scattered over the table. But although simplicity is desired, variety is equally admirable, and no matter how attractive a table decoration may be it becomes monotonous in time, so that the really enthusiastic hostess feels the need of new styles if she is to produce a satisfactory setting for her hospitality. Study the use of other flowers than the winter staples and it will add to your reputation as a decorator.

THE BRIDE'S BOUQUET.

The accompanying illustration shows a simple treatment of lily of the valley in which several single strings of light smilax are used to brighten up the shower. The spikes of valley are attached to the smilax with invisible wire and give the effect of lightness. It will be noticed that the scarf is embroidered in sprays of valley, and point lace is used to protect the hand from contact with the flowers. This bouquet was carried by Miss Billups, of Mobile, Ala., who was recently married to Col. E. L. Russell, who is one of the best known and most popular men in the south, and who is especially a friend of the florists.

KUROKI'S WREATH.

While our Japanese friend, General Kuroki, was visiting the United States, he had a force of sharp-eyed Japanese on the lookout for all the monuments to America's great men. Whenever one of these was discovered in any city visited, General Kuroki took occasion to show the friendship of Japan for this country, and his own respect for America's soldiers and statesmen, by placing wreaths of flowers upon tombs or statues.

In Lincoln park, Chicago, there is a statue of Lincoln said to be one of the best works of art in any public place in the United States, and here on Memorial day, May 30, Kuroki placed the wreath shown in the accompanying illustration. The wreath was the handiwork of P. J. Hauswirth and consisted of cape jasmines with a knot of cattleyas at the point where the orchid ribbon was attached. Cape jasmines were used on stems of good length, so that the wreath had a loose and graceful appearance. Not much green was necessary other than the foliage of the jasmines and for Memorial day purposes nothing better could be suggested. The wreath is illustrated here for the purpose of affording a suggestion as to how a small part of next year's crop of jasmines may be consumed at a good profit to retail florists.

Incidentally, it is worthy of mention that the custom of honoring our distinguished dead by placing wreaths of flowers on their tombs or statues seems to be left entirely to visiting foreigners. It has created comment that in all the years Lincoln has stood in the park named for him in Chicago, only twice is there public record of flowers being placed at his feet. The first time was when Prince Henry, of Germany, toured the United States.

SPANISH FORKS, UT.—Late in the evening of July 3 the store of "Jex, the Florist," was destroyed by fire. The stock, valued at $500, was also completely ruined.

CREDITS AND COLLECTIONS.

[A paper by T. P. Langhans, read before the Pittsburg Florists' Club, May 7, 1907.]

Before the notices of this meeting were mailed it was decided to add some other interesting subject to the program, and the question of credit alone would be very uninteresting to some of us. Perhaps it was well to do it for this meeting, but I believe it would be a good idea if this club would sometime set aside an evening for just such business as this question involves. I am sure a very profitable evening could be spent on this and other business questions pertaining to clerical work in the trade.

There is no part of our business that is being so much neglected as credit and collections. It is of great importance, and we must soon learn to understand the conditions and the fatal results of a loose system on this question.

In many cases this is brought about by that awful condition of jealousy which appears to exist among those in our trade. Instead of maintaining the mutual relations that exist between almost all business men in other trades, we are divided. Instead of helping one another to stop the deadbeat from receiving further credit, we allow him to carry on his practices until he has stuck every one of us. Individually, our losses are perhaps only small, but jointly they amount to considerable.

Credit Associations.

Business men in almost every line co-operate against this class of individuals by exchanging items of information that permit them to keep their losses down to a minimum.

A body of Pittsburg retail merchants, numbering about twenty, have an association of this kind which has been in existence for about three years. They are now so powerful and have such a smooth system that they have been enabled to reduce their bad debts sixty-five per cent.

The building trade, the trade which at one time was noted for its poor pay, has formed a credit association, which is also working successfully, and the expense of membership is but $40 per year. Do not forget that the firms connected with these associations are keen competitors and are after business. This proves that men can be competitors and still act mutually in a matter of this kind.

In making collections one must exercise tact and study the peculiarities of different customers. Some must be treated very delicately. It is said, "What can be said can often not be written"; so a personal interview is, of course, preferable.

There is no reason why you cannot demand the same promptness in payments from your customer as the latter demands from you in filling orders. This especially applies between the wholesaler and the retailer.

By collecting promptly you may lose an occasional customer, but in the end it will make a showing of results which will appear in your ledger on the proper side of the balance.

Prompt Collections.

A large percentage of florists are very poor business men; not only are both retail and wholesale buyers carried longer than they should be, but credit is given in many cases where it is wholly unwarranted. Again, there is a certain class in the craft whose intention it is to pay only as long as it appears to them to be worth while to do so. After they think they have satisfied you so that you will trust them they begin to be slow pay, and if you are not careful the account soon amounts to several hundred dollars. This all occurs in a short time. Naturally you have a limit on your customer; however, one has run over his limit. You press him for a settlement; no attention is paid to your demands; you bring suit, with the usual result—no assets, everything liabilities; you lose the account and are out your attorney's fee, costs, etc.

Therefore sharp collections reduce the percentage of losses and the expense of running a business, and increase sales.

A retail store should make its collections like a wholesale house, but the method of work is different in different stores. The whole matter of collections, even more than that of making credits, depends upon a store's class of patrons. A wealthy patronage needs an entirely different and much less strenuous collection system than do customers who belong to the less wealthy classes.

A Frequent Mistake.

A mistake the average florist frequently makes is this, that after taking an order he neglects to ask, "Shall I make this a cash purchase?" Let your customer advise you if it is to be charged. Many cash sales are lost in not making this inquiry instead of, "Shall I charge this?"

In conclusion I will say that the general idea of the public is that the florist has enormous profits. This is frequently expressed, and should it ever be brought up with you be ready with a good, strong negative answer. I do not know of any business man who devotes so many hours to his business as the florist and gets so little out of it. Other merchants devote eight to ten hours to business, can arrange a half holiday Saturday and are able to observe Sunday without being disturbed. The florist is never done, nor do I believe he would if he could.

BEGONIA WORTHIANA.

The great value and possibilities of Begonia Worthiana are apparently not yet fully recognized, says an English contemporary, for, although the plant is becoming more widely cultivated for bedding purposes, its good qualities entitle it to special notice for other decorative uses.

For filling hanging baskets in sunny situations this begonia is unsurpassed, its floriferousness being remarkable. The bright display of orange-scarlet blossoms, contrasted with the narrow green foliage, renders it conspicuous. For conservatory decoration B. Worthiana is splendid, but the plants should be given full advantage of a sunny position, and be well treated as regards soil, potting, etc., it being practically impossible to overpot. We have made a feature, too, of growing these plants in window-boxes, especially where the aspect is south or southwest, using white-flowered or white-foliaged plants as an edging, and the masses of fiery flowers are exquisitely set off by the fringe of white. Those who have not tried B. Worthiana for this purpose will be surprised at the superb picture produced, especially as the plants have a long season of flowering.

B. Worthiana is a sport from the B.

Kuroki's Wreath of Jasmine.

Boliviensis, the first of that group of tuberous species which has combined to make the present-day begonias the glorious race they are. The usual method of propagation is by cuttings, which can be rooted easily in an ordinary greenhouse at any time during spring and summer; the cuttings strike as readily as those of fibrous varieties, and as the plants are naturally bushy in habit, one can soon secure a good stock from a few strong plants. Another effective mode of increase is by cutting the tubers. These should be allowed to start into growth in spring, and when the shoots are an inch high the operation may be performed, using a sharp knife and cutting the tubers in sections with one shoot attached to each. They should then be potted, using 3-inch pots, and placed in a warm house, where they will speedily form new roots and make splendid plants by bedding time.

Then there is the question of raising plants from seed, and perhaps my experience on this point may be of interest. B. Worthiana has many times been described as producing no seed, but such statements have been erroneous. The chief point is that the blossoms are not pollinated, unless the work is done by the hand of the florist. When fertilized with pollen the blossoms quickly fall, and the seed-pots (which otherwise fall off) rapidly swell up, and in the space of three or four weeks they ripen a splendid crop of seed. The seed, as I have proved, germinates exceedingly well, but the later results are not so satisfactory, for the plants are not so vigorous as those from cuttings, neither do they form so large a tuber, but as a means of obtaining a large stock of plants seed raising has certain advantages.

WILLMAR, MINN.—George Irving has sold his interest in the business of George Irving & Co. to W. I. Phare.

LOGANSPOUT, IND.—C. F. Markert, who has been erecting a range of greenhouses for forcing vegetables at his home on College Hill, has almost completed the work.

Ferns

NEPHROLEPIS IN ENGLAND.

Among the gorgeously colored exhibits of flowers and flowering plants at the recent great temple show in London, there intervened here and there as a grateful rest for the eye, some groups of ferns, which, to the careful student, fully made up for their lack of glaring tints by the delicacy and variety of their make and cutting. There were several new varieties which everyone admired, and which in point of fact eclipsed all others in their particular style of beauty and extent of delicate division, even that marvelous product of our antipodean fern paradieses, Todea superba, being cast into the shade.

I allude especially to the Nephrolepis exaltata varieties, Whitmani and todeaoides, the latter, as will be noted, being christened after the todea in question. Few, probably, who passed through the tents amid the constant stream of non-professional visitors, dreamt of connecting these almost infinitely dissected gems of vegetation, built up of broad triangular masses of piled-up moss, as it seemed, though more symmetrical than any moss ever grown, with the long, narrow, once divided fronds of the straggly nephrolepis perched high in air above them, and in appearance about the most unpromising looking progenitors one could expect to see. Yet not only are these twain really the progeny of this simple type, but the vast difference has been arrived at in but two or three generations of selection. The two forms are similar, and opinions differ as to which is the better. I incline to rank todeaoides as the finest, as it certainly develops a step farther in dissection and extension, but the claims of Whitmani are based upon an erecter habit and consequently better display of its charms, due to its shorter pinnulets and less weight.

A curious feature in the history of these varieties and others mentioned later is that the parent form, N. exaltata, has been a common trade fern for a long period, owing partly to its easy propagation through the runners or stolons which it produces freely. Due, probably, to this ease of production, independently of spores, only one or two varieties, and these not striking ones, made their appearance until a few years ago, when N. exaltata Piersoni appeared in the United States and created a sensation as a decomposite variety of the species, and started in a very marked fashion the wonderful strain we treat of.

Clearly, when fern growers grasped the capacity of the species to vary thus through its spores, for as spore sports we must perforce regard the improvements, they ceased to multiply merely by layering the stolons, and by utilizing the spores were enabled in several quarters to exhibit distinct improvements, culminating in the two cited, which really seem to defy rivalry. Although we must grant our American cousins the honor of starting the ball rolling, yet fully ten years before they did so a bipinnate sport of N. exaltata appeared here, but disappeared before the opportunity was seized of perpetuating it.

In close proximity to these charming ferns there were in more than one group examples of N. exaltata superba, raised by H. B. May, which demonstrated the capacity of this protean species, as it has now proved itself to be, to assume an entirely different varietal form, differing as much from the two plumose or feathery forms described as can well be imagined. Here it is true we have some approximation to the erect, narrow frond of the common progenitor, but, instead of a thin blade cut into teeth, we have two densely overlying masses of curly cresting, an inch and more thick on each side of a sturdy midrib, each of the normal side divisions or pinnae being dilated into a ball like a tassel. The effect is beautiful, and it contrasts in an extraordinary manner with the others, says C. T. Druery in his account of the exhibition.

SELECTING CUTTINGS.

Cuttings should always be taken from healthy plants and from those parts of plants which show no imperfections. If the shoots or branches of a plant are not in a thrifty condition, with a constant supply of food given them by the roots of the plant, they cannot reasonably be expected to have sufficient staying power

In hard-wooded plants that are, under any circumstances, hard to root, considerable care is necessary in selecting wood that is neither too hard nor too soft. In the former case, especially if the wood is old, roots are not easily emitted, while in the latter the cuttings are liable to damp. A knowledge of the proper degree of firmness cuttings should possess comes only from practice, and it differs materially in different plants. It will be well, when beginning, to put in cuttings of every degree of firmness and observe closely for future guidance the condition of the wood of those rooting successfully.

As a rule cuttings should be taken off either when the plant is in a dormant state or when it has made a new growth of a shoot or branch with foliage so far advanced as to be engaged in the formation of woody tissue. D. M.

A DENVER PLANT.

The accompanying illustration is from a postal-card photograph of the establishment of C. J. Davis and, as he says, "represents one of the small establishments in Denver; glass area, 15,000 square feet." He grows a general line of stock for retail trade, cut flowers, pot plants and bedding stock. He has been quite satisfactorily successful this season and has just opened a retail store at 735 Fifteenth street.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The ice strike and the garbage strike are over, but the summer dullness and large shipments of every kind of flower continue. As one prominent wholesaler puts it, "There are no prices; it is take what you can get and be thankful." It is the same old story every year. History repeats itself. But we forget, and each succeeding year seems worse than the one before. There's no real difference between them. These are the days when the men at the helm go to Europe, Cuba, Jamestown, the ball game and the to grow into thrifty plants when severed from the parent. At the same time over-vigorous shoots or branches, rendered so by a superabundant supply of nourishment, are not so likely to survive the cutting off of that supply as others of more moderate vigor.

rices, and the lady bookkeepers and the lieutenants to the Catskills and other high resorts where there is health and no humidity. Everybody has gone, or is going, and all are coming back ready for the September opening of real business, much more valuable in loyal service because of the universal generosity of the employers. Early closing is now assured. The signs say 4 o'clock, and this seems to be the hour that meets with universal favor.

Too many gardenias are coming to the market. Perhaps Newport can use them. Business is commencing in earnest there. Beauties remain firm at 15 cents and over. All other stock stays at the bottom, as it has since the last of June, and will probably until the dog-days come and go. Even the buyers, who have everything their own way, are scarce. There was not a customer in the wholesale market the afternoon of the club outing. The street merchants are nearly all at the summer resorts. There is no outlet for the accumulations.

The Club Outing.

There is little to add to the outing record of last week. The attendance was 235 adults and ninety children. There were nearly enough prizes to go around. Few of the youngsters were disappointed.

The babies grow in beauty and numbers yearly. Messrs. Bunyard and Scott and Miss O'Mara, Mrs. Wheeler, Mrs. Weber, Mrs. Totty and Mrs. Duckham endeavored to agree on the most beautiful. Fortunately there was a prize for every baby on the boat and all the proud mothers went home contented.

Only one retail florist attended the excursion. It has been demonstrated that with their coöperation a larger boat will be needed. We will give them another chance to be more brotherly in 1908. Prominent retailers should at least send their representative employees if they are too busy in July to come themselves. Getting acquainted with the men who grow their stock would repay them for the small expenditure of time and money.

In the announcement of premiums Oscar Boehler should have been credited with $5 instead of Louis Boelsen.

The oldest excursionist was Mrs. Gourley, of Germany, 75 years of age, now visiting her son, who is with Stumpp, on Fifth avenue.

Large families were much and creditably in evidence. Mr. and Mrs. Einsman and Mr. and Mrs. Jaenecke each brought six olive branches and Louis Schmutz drove to the dock in style and in a big automobile that held thirteen of the Schmutz family, including three generations. The pretty Japanese baby of A. Kukuda, of Whitestone, was much admired. Some one telegraphed the President to come over from Oyster Bay and have a look at the big families, but Loeb answered he would take Traendly's word for it.

The music furnished by Reluso was the best the club has ever enjoyed on its outing and the popular airs added greatly to the enjoyment of the banquet. There was abundance for all and no complaints of any kind.

Financially the outing was a splendid success. Next year all races will be run on the greensward, so that twenty can run abreast.

Bobby Schultz was in his element as manager of the ladies' bowling. The fair sex were so pleased with his courtesy and patience that they elected him to the same honorable position for 1908.

The single men managed to win their baseball game at last, after years of effort, by a score of 5 to 4. Next year "single" men will mean those who have never been married, and all widowers and grass widowers will be shelved.

The greatest interest of the day centered in the ladies' bowling match, $60 worth of prizes being provided. Twenty-five of the experts carried home trophies, from cut glass bowls, lamps and peek-a-boos waists to unmentionable articles of beauty and value.

There was wine for the ball players, $5 prizes for all winners, with $2.50 for seconds and a dollar for the thirds.

Various Notes.

The seedsmen's convention here was an influence for good that will exert its benefits in a practical way for all time. It created enthusiasm among the great seed houses of New York that will be lasting and that has accentuated the fact that horticulture is only beginning its mission in this country.

One Jamaica florist has been offered $50,000 for a property that cost him, a few years ago, less than one-fourth that amount. Another one at Freeport is having a like experience, and down at Queens and Floral Park the big florists will not sell their farms for less than $4,000 an acre.

Dailedouze Bros. remains the firm name of the new firm, which Eugene Dailedouze now controls, the brothers Paul and Henry having retired. The old combination was dissolved by mutual consent.

J. J. Foley had a big decoration July

10 at the banquet tendered President Krause, of the Eternal Order of Eagles, at the Lyons hotel. All the leading Tammany politicians are members of this order and Mr. Foley is one of them. The demand for his floral photographs comes from every state in the Union.

Harry Hoffmeyer's stork arrived June 30 with a little daughter.

A. M. Henshaw is in his new and roomy quarters over Traendly & Schenck's on Twenty-eighth street, and is delighted with the conveniences and location. He has plenty of room to grow and completes the quartet of second-floor wholesalers on this historic street.

Frank H. Hicks & Co. have already commenced business at 52 West Twenty-eighth street and have many growers and old customers as a foundation.

Mrs. Sigmund Geller is managing the business of the Geller Florist Supply Co. during the absence of her husband in Europe.

Bowling.

The S. A. F. convention, at Philadelphia, is only five weeks away and the New York Florists' Club has shown not the slightest interest as to a club in the bowling contest. As usual, we will have to construct a club from the material present on the day of the contest. Judging by what one hears on every side, there will be abundant material, for everybody is going from New York. Every man I have asked concerning it has announced his attendance and many will have their wives with them. There will be a special train.

Between the seedsmen and the Madison boys New York is apt to have a bowling team that will make any of the regulars hustle. Here is a sample of what they can do with the thermometer over 90 degrees and no trophies as an inspiration. It was Madison's turn to win:

WRITE the REVIEW a letter about your way of doing this thing or that, which you consider better than the way it is usually done.

THE last fortnight has made a big change in the condition of all agricultural crops and confidence in the outcome has been restored. With good crops on the farms, the whole country will prosper next fall and winter and the florists will get their share of the profit.

DON'T use coal tar about a greenhouse.

BUY coal now, and store it under cover; it will save you money and worry.

DON'T delay putting the heating apparatus in shape for an early fire in the autumn.

BEFORE you order stock for import, consult the European advertising pages in the REVIEW.

ORDER those printed letter-heads and lock up the nicotine extract, where careless persons cannot get at it.

RIBBON for fall stocks will cost the retailers from fifteen per cent to twenty per cent more than it did last year.

GIVE a trial to some of the special strains of pansy advertised in the REVIEW; possibly the strain you are using is the best there is—and perhaps not.

THE growers of bedding plants at Grand Rapids, Mich., advanced their retail prices this spring and had no difficulty in cleaning out their stock at the higher rates.

THANK YOU.

An old subscriber writes: "Here is the subscription of a friend of mine in the trade. He says he wants to keep up with the times, so I told him to get the REVIEW and it would be easy for him."

The REVIEW receives many similar courtesies at the hands of its readers and hopes to continue to merit their recommendation.

THE DEATH ROLL.

A. R. Congdon.

A. R. Congdon died at his home, 26 North Cedar avenue, Oberlin, O., on Saturday, June 29, after a painful illness which originated in an abscess of the kidneys. Although handicapped by poverty and poor health, he commenced the florist's life when only a boy. He borrowed $100 from his sister, and putting in a great deal of both brain and hand work, he built his first greenhouse, only forty-eight feet long. He added to it until five years ago, when he razed it and built three large, modern greenhouses, with all the late improvements. Last year he built another, 36x100 feet, setting every pane of glass himself, and with a helper he put into the two ranges of houses more than a mile and a half of hot water pipe. When this was done and he had a well-equipped, up-to-date establishment, he began to fail in health and grew steadily weaker until the end came.

He had an artist's skill in arranging flowers in a funeral design. Like many another florist, he gave his life to his business. Upright in all things, he left a name behind him of which his friends may well be proud. As there is no one to take Mr. Congdon's place in the management of the business, the greenhouses will be sold.

James Murray.

James Murray, gardener during the last nineteen years for Henry Clews, at Newport, died June 28, at his home in that city. Mr. Murray was born near Kilmarnock, Scotland, 63 years ago. About twenty-six years ago he came to this country and entered the employment of the late Isaac Buchanan, at Astoria, Long Island. From there he went as head gardener to J. H. Browning, at Tenafly, N. J., and after remaining there four years he removed to Newport.

Mr. Murray was a man of sterling character, quiet and unassuming to a remarkable degree. Although somewhat reserved in disposition, he was yet very companionable to his intimates. He was a good gardener of the old school and a man well worth knowing. He was held in high esteem by the community. A widow and two sons and a daughter survive him.

Isaac B. Easter.

Isaac B. Easter died July 2, at his home on Independence road, Newburg Heights, Cleveland, O. He had been a market gardener for over half a century. Death was due to old age. Mr. Easter was born in Sussex, England, in 1827, and came to America in 1852. In 1856 he was married to Miss Harriet Willis, who died in 1894. Two children survive—Miss Mary Easter and Isaac B. Easter, Jr.

HYDROCYANIC ACID GAS.

I have used hydrocyanic acid gas as a remedy for the common white fly in my greenhouse. I did not use it more than about half the strength recommended in the REVIEW, but found it nipped or scorched a few of the ends or tips of the tomato plants, and also a few of the roses, but did no great damage. It killed the flies. Now, what I want to ask is, whether the gas is poisonous to the tomatoes, as the vines had a quantity of large green tomatoes at the time this gas was liberated, and we want to be sure on this subject before we pick any of these tomatoes. W. L.

While the hydrocyanic acid gas is deadly if inhaled by human beings or by lower forms of life, it is not possible, however, for it to be absorbed by plant tissues and held by them to the extent of making them poisonous. The minute amount of actual poison that it would be possible to precipitate out of the gas, either upon or into the tissue of the plant, would not be sufficient to affect the most sensitive organism. L. C. C.

GERANIUM FOR NAME.

I send under separate cover a geranium bloom. Will you kindly tell me the name and when first brought out? A slip was given to my mother in Massachusetts in 1867 and she grew the plant, setting it out in spring and bringing it into the house in fall, for twenty-five years. At her death my brother took it and followed the same course. Last year I took two slips from it and am now planting out a large bed in memory of my mother. The plant grew to be six feet in height and four feet in diameter. I have counted seventy trusses of bloom at once. L. C. P.

The sample leaf and flower truss were so badly withered, having been packed dry, that I cannot state positively what the variety is. As near, however, as I can tell, it is either a semi-double form of the old Gen. Grant or something very similar to it. I am pleased to learn of the long and intelligent care given to the original plant, which must have made a magnificent show when in bloom. Would that we could see more such in our American homes, for truly no house plant can surpass a well grown and flowered geranium. C. W.

BEAUTIES

THE CUT IS INCREASING

Our Beauties are easily the best in this market and we believe it will be difficult to find their equal anywhere. They are in every way as good as our famous crop last summer—and most Beauty buyers know what that means.

PEONIES

Our stock was cut and stored by the oldest and most experienced grower. It is in fine shape and the supply is large—you can count on us for any quantity, white or pink, for July decorations. The showiest flower for the money.

Kaiserins

Good crop of fancy Kaiserin, best summer rose. Also heavy cuts of other roses; quality as good as the market affords.

GALAX

Large supply of bronze galax, $1.00 per 1000; $7.50 per case of 10,000.

VALLEY

Choice valley always on hand; you can wire us any day in the year and be sure of getting any reasonable quantity by next train.

FERNS

Fancy ferns of finest quality; we pride ourselves on always having the best ferns and plenty. $1.00 per 1000.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The dullness of the market last week was accentuated by receipts of stock considerably larger than usual at this season. The growers seem reluctant to acknowledge that the big, brisk, busy season is at length at an end. It lasted longer than usual, but now it is time to prepare for another year.

There is some little business doing, but the call is almost entirely for the best grade of stock, and good stock is so scarce that the quantity sold is only a fraction of each day's receipts. The poor stock accumulates and the waste is large.

There are considerable quantities of Beauties coming in, which average fair for July. They clean out quite well. Kaiserin roses sell well and Richmond also has a satisfactory market. Killarney does not go to waste. Bride and Bridesmaid are decidedly poor with nearly all growers. With some there is much mildew on the young stock.

Carnation growers evidently have more energy and less regard for the heat than usual. Otherwise they would throw out much of their stock, for a considerable proportion of each day's receipts must go to the dump because the quality is so poor the buyers will not take it at any price. When stock is offered at 2 cents a bunch it must be pretty poor. Even good carnations are not bringing as much as they did a year ago.

There continue to be plenty of peonies, and good ones, and they sell fully as well as anything else, because they are good. Sweet peas are a tremendous glut, the receipts being the heaviest in the history of this market. Quality is good in much of the stock, but the quantities received are so much ahead of the demand that the stock cannot all be sold, even to the fakers. Of the miscellaneous items of summer stock there are rather larger receipts than usual at this date and all are slow sale. There is no active market, save for specialties or special qualities, nor will there be, in all likelihood, until conditions operate to reduce supplies, not only in Chicago, but in the shipping radius. Asters are seen in small quantities but cut no figure as yet. Candidums are abundant and there is not much call for Easter lilies or valley now that the wedding season is over.

Peony Prospects.

"We believe that the peony market in the future will be so oversupplied," said Charles Klehm one day this week, "that its salvation depends upon educating the public and the retail florists, to a larger use of peonies in their season. In order to do this it is necessary to establish something of a standard price, so that retailers may be able to go after business with some assurance as to what the flowers will cost them. For that reason we shall not ask over 50 cents a dozen for our best stock, northern grown, in any year. Prices will range from 25 to 50 cents a dozen. With so large a quantity of stock as we are now able to produce, it is likely to establish those prices as standard prices for the entire market and retail florists can figure on orders with entire confidence. We look for the result to be a much larger use of peonies for decorating.

"We have recently planted about an acre of Old Red, and some few thousands of other early sorts, about ninety miles south in Indiana. We expect these to give us flowers for Decoration day at least eight years out of ten. We find our local retail demand at Arlington Heights increasing enormously at Decoration day and if our local peonies are not ready, as frequently is the case, we have to buy other stock, and cut flowers at wholesale are steadily advancing in price for Memorial day.

"We think that perhaps five varieties of peonies are enough for a cut flower crop. We have enough Festiva maxima to make a row a mile long, but the old Whitleyi is a better cut flower peony for storage and the wholesale market. We have an acre of a late pink which we call No. 4, a variety which has dropped out of sight in most peony plantations, but which we think is the best pink of the whole lot for cutting for market. It costs no more to grow the best cut flower sorts than the nurserymen's general list and we are concentrating on a few sorts, to have them in quantity. The proper attention to details in handling is more important than the varieties in growing for cut flowers. Character of soil is important, and peony blooms which are expected to keep should not be fed; there has been no fertilizer on our fields in ten years, for we grow only for cutting and do not sell roots to the trade. Any sorts we conclude to discard we work up in the landscape department of our nursery business."

Carnation Plants.

As a general thing the seasons average up fairly well, and it promises to be so this year. Although the carnation plants in the field made an alarmingly slow growth in May and June, they are now getting ahead at a rate which gives the growers much delight and promises to provide good stock for early benching. The frequent rains and warm weather have been just what the carnations needed to make them jump.

Nearly every grower has planted more or less of his stock indoors from pots this season, counting on an early cut. The indoor stock in general looks good.

July Prospects.

E. E. Pieser, of Kennicott Bros. Co., says he does not look for a good July or August business. He says it has invariably happened in his experience that a dry summer meant fair business for the wholesale cut flower people, and that a wet summer meant slow business. Charles Klehm endorses this opinion. In fact, he says that last year there was a good demand for outdoor flowers and this year growers have greatly increased their preparations for meeting the demand. With plenty of rain and a good growing season, outdoor flowers already are overabundant and selling at unprofitable prices.

Murphy a Suicide.

Thomas Murphy, 50 years old, living over his flower store at Ogden avenue and Oakley boulevard, was found dead in bed July 5, his room filled with illuminating gas and two bullet holes through his head. A revolver lay beside the bed. The gas was escaping from a half open jet. The body was taken to McCain's undertaking establishment, 604 Ogden avenue. Murphy was well known and liked in the market and no reason can be found for his act. He was married. His wife had been visiting for several days in Peoria. The funeral was held July 8, several in the trade attending.

On Robey Street.

Out at the end of Robey street, Peter Reinberg has just acquired three acres of land adjoining his range on the east side of the street and running north nearly to Rose Hill cemetery. There is no immediate prospect of its being covered with glass, but part of it will be used for a big coal-shed this season.

Mr. Reinberg has already planted seven short houses, at the north end of his range, with carnations from pots, planning an early crop. He is now cutting quite heavily from three houses of young stock of Mrs. Field rose.

Various Notes.

Aristocrat is doing finely this summer with the Chicago Carnation Co. The quality is maintained better than that of any other pink in the market, color remaining good and the flower of fair size. It is an excellent keeper. The blooms not needed in their own trade are consigned to C. W. McKellar and J. B. Deamud.

L. Gresenz, of Bassett & Washburn, has been away for a fortnight, taking his annual vacation.

Peter Endre is investing $7,000 in a range of six greenhouses at 59 Rogers avenue.

The E. F. Winterson Co., having finished the changes in the store, is this week repainting and calcimining, preparatory to installing a new system of seed cases and other special fixtures. Mr. Winterson proposes to have the place in first-class shape for next season, but by the terms of the lease is required to make all his changes and do the decorating at his own expense.

John May is building a greenhouse at 515 Florence avenue, Evanston.

Miss Martha Gunterberg has found business so heavy at her stand in the Flower Growers' Market that she has employed an assistant in the handling of the stock. She had a three days' rest in Michigan last week and plans a three weeks' vacation in August, when most of her growers will be replanting.

N. J. Wietor sent the boys in the store three boxes of fish in the last fortnight. To his brother, Henry, he sent a muskalonge weighing twenty-two and one-half pounds. He and John Sinner reached home Tuesday from their trip.

As J. B. Deamud and a friend were riding home on a Cottage Grove trailer on the afternoon of July 4, the car was struck by another street car. Mr. Dea-

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Stock of all kinds is plentiful. Roses, although not so large and a little off color, are as good as can be expected for this time of the year. Carnations are more than enough to supply the demand and are selling cheap. Sweet peas are coming in plentifully from the outdoor crops; they are fine and of long stems. Gladioli sell slowly, but help to make a good show in the windows of the downtown stores. American Beauties are rather scarce and what come in are taken at once. Common ferns have been more plentiful the last week. One commission house had them shipped in direct from the south and disposed of them at a reasonable price, so that all of the florists had a chance to stock up.

Various Notes.

R. S. Brown & Son have been busy planting mums. They report an excellent business this spring. There was a large call for geraniums and they were unable to supply the demand. S. A. Nutt takes the lead at present.

Miss M. Dalley has closed her store for the summer. The building in which she had her store is being remodeled; therefore all tenants had to move. We understand that she will reopen her store in the fall.

W. H. Humfeld is in Clay Center, Kan., where he was called on account of the serious illness of his aged mother.

Mrs. Geo. Bastian, of Geo. M. Kellogg's store, leaves this week for a few weeks' vacation.

Arthur Newell reports business as rather quiet at present, but he is very much pleased with his new location.

Mr. Freudenthal had the decoration for a large wedding last week. He has been having a good deal of decorating the last two weeks, which has been keeping him busy.

The W. H. Humfeld Floral Co. had a large wedding decoration June 22, having both the large residence and the church to decorate. There were about 5,000 pink sweet peas used in the centerpiece for a 24-foot table. They also used a profusion of pink and white

The Market.

The temperature has been in the neighborhood of 90 degrees every day, and it is easy to know what this is doing to stock in greenhouses. Many growers are throwing out the carnations, and the roses are so small that it hardly pays to cut them. There is a little good stuff coming in, but even that does not sell well, as there is no business. The retail men are virtually doing nothing, and, with the exception of a funeral order now and then, they could close up and not miss an order.

The wholesale houses are all closing at 5 o'clock for the months of July and August, and there is a little talk of closing at noon on Saturdays, as it is noted that some other cities have started this, but I do not believe that it will be put into effect in this city, this year at least. For the benefit of the clerks in the retail stores it would appear to be the proper thing for the store men to come to some agreement whereby their hours might be shortened during the dull season. The clerks in the stores have long hours at best, and when you consider that there is a decided movement on foot among retail stores in all lines of business to have shorter hours during the summer season, wouldn't it be proper for the florists' trade to be abreast of the times and do likewise?

Various Notes.

The annual meeting of the Florists' Society will be held Saturday evening, July 13, at 8 p. m. Besides the election of officers, several other matters of decided importance to the welfare of the society will be brought up. The annual outing of the society will be arranged for and, as the time for this is rapidly approaching, quick action will have to be taken. From present indications there will be a goodly number of the members present, the board of directors having made a special request that all come who possibly can.

The Fourth of July was celebrated at the home of Jasper Murphy by a general reunion of the Murphy family. This is an annual event and brings together upwards of 100 persons. The Market.

There is not much to say regarding the florists' trade the last week, only that everything is dull. If it had not been for a few large funeral orders, we could just as well have closed up shop.

The weather has been hot and the growers are beginning to empty their houses. When this is completed, stock will show a scarcity for a month or six weeks. The wholesalers have been kept busy handling the great bulk of stock that has been coming in, especially sweet peas. It is estimated that over 100,000 of these are handled daily at the four wholesale houses. The best of them do not bring over $1 per thousand, with short-stemmed ones much cheaper.

Few first-class roses are coming in, the best being President Carnot, Killarney, Richmond and Ivory. Bride and Maid are poor. Heller Bros.' new rose, No. 51, is taking well with the buyers, as it has a pleasing color and is a good keeper. Carnations are small. The effects of the hot weather are showing plainly. There are plenty of them, but fancy grades are out of the question. Whites are selling best. All the other stock that is coming in is from outdoors and the demand is poor. Plenty of good smilax is to be had; also other greens of all kinds.

They will reside in a new residence recently erected by Mr. Brix, at his Mead avenue greenhouses. Joe Wekack, of Carlsbad, Germany, has arrived and will take charge of Mr. Brix's St. Louis avenue store.

Charlie Juengel reports that business of late has been so good that he had to cut out enjoyments, such as club meetings and the club's smoker, but he and Mrs. Juengel will take their vacation next month and attend the S. A. F. convention.

The Market.

Summer dullness now reigns and business is light. The season up to the end of June, however, was one of the best on record and growers are philosophically accepting the inevitable turn of the tide. In roses, Carnot and Kaiserin are meeting with fair sale, the best making $8 per hundred. Bride and Maid are now poor, prices varying from 50 cents to $5 per hundred. Richmond is making from $1 per hundred upwards, but the flowers now have a jaded appearance. Beauties are still seen of good quality, but are not in heavy demand. Few hybrids from outdoors are seen, strange to say. These are everywhere of grand quality this season and it is strange that hardly any are to be seen in the markets, as they far outclass any indoor blooms at this season.

Carnations are becoming poor; in fact, no good flowers are arriving. Indoor sweet peas still arrive, but those from outdoors are of much better quality. Peonies are about over. It has been a poor selling season for them. There is an ample supply of gladioli, lilies, cornflowers, Coreopsis grandiflora and other seasonable flowers.

Weekly Exhibition.

Although there were no prizes offered July 6, at Horticultural hall, there were some interesting exhibits. J. T. Butterworth had a grandly flowered basket of Odontoglossum citrosum. The largest raceme carried no less than forty-two flowers and several others were almost as good. He was awarded a cultural certificate. For a magnificent plant of the old scarlet Crassula coccinea, James Crosbie, gardener to Mrs. J. W. Tufts, received a similar award. The specimen, which was in an 8-inch pot, carried 165 heads of bloom.

W. N. Craig showed a collection of Gladiolus nanus and another of sweet peas. In the latter the new scarlet, Queen Alexandra, and Phyllis Unwin, white, were included.

Welcome to the Elks

WE cordially invite the Florists who will visit Philadelphia to attend the Convention of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, to make our building their headquarters while they are in this city.

We are centrally located, a little over one block from the Lodge. We shall be decorated in your honor. Come to us. Bring your family to us, meet your friends here. Have your mail sent here. We want you to feel at home in the city of Brotherly Love.

william, which was awarded honorable mention.

George Hollis had a table of seedling double peonies, two of which received honorable mention.

The Boston Mycological Club had its first exhibit of mushrooms.

Exhibitors should bear in mind that they can bring plants, flowers or other exhibits every Saturday to Horticultural hall. Even when no prizes are offered, the committee will make suitable awards, and commercial growers especially will find these Saturday shows splendid advertisements, as the public attendance is large.

Various Notes.

Penn, at 43 Bromfield street, took first prize for decorated wagon in the parade at Somerville July 4. The horses took first prize May 30 in the Boston work-horse parade in which 917 horses were entered.

The sports committee of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club is hard at work on the program for the annual picnic in Dorchester park, July 25. They intend to far outdo anything carried out at similar preceding affairs.

Henry M. Robinson & Co. report that the season has been an exceedingly busy one until now and they are more than satisfied with their share of business.

W. B. Goodenough, of South Stoughton, will add another house, 26x125 feet, for violets this season. At present he is growing tomatoes in his houses, but may change to cucumbers another year.

William Sim is now marketing big quantities of Comet tomatoes of his usual high quality.

Thomas Roland, of Nahant, will sail for Europe this week. He will especially be on the lookout for new and desirable plants for pot culture.

James Farquhar has gone to Porto Rico for a visit. His firm has business interests there which may detain him for some time.

W. H. Elliott is making good progress on his big new rose house, at Madbury, N. H., and expects it to produce some grand Richmond and Killarney.

Carbone, the Boylston street florist, is on his annual European trip.

Not much convention talk is heard yet, but the probabilities are that Boston will send an extra good delegation to Philadelphia.

Glorious weather was vouchsafed us on the great and glorious Fourth. We have not heard of any casualties among the craft.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The week commencing with the glorious Fourth and ending on Wednesday has been extremely dull. Flowers are being sold now and then, that is all. Beauties, Kaisersins, Maids (when good) and valley are in demand. Carnations, sweet peas and outdoor flowers are not. There are a few good Cattleya Gaskelliana, plenty of Harrisii and candidum lilies. Coreopsis does not sell. The double blue cornflower continues to be taken in preference to the single. White carnations average better in quality than pink. Greens are in fair demand. The statistics for the week ending July 6 show that there were 300 less deaths in the city than during the corresponding week of last year.

The Acknowledgment of a Debt.

In the early days of the wholesale cut flower business in this city it was an understood thing that every grower who could possibly afford the time carried his own flowers to the retailers and sold them himself. Later, as the market became more critical, requiring his presence in the greenhouses a larger part of the day, a representative did the selling, but always direct to the retailer, not through a wholesale commission house.

THE WHOLESALE FLORISTS OF

1608-18 LUDLOW ST.,

Anyone who sent all his flowers to a wholesale house was regarded with suspicion. There was a screw loose somewhere, or else his flowers were so poor he was ashamed to offer them, the growers said, else why would he pay commission when the buyers were eager for stock? This feeling was shown in the banquets at that time, when "commission house truck, all kinds," was one of the dinner card jokes.

Later, as the market grew more and more critical, as grading became a necessity and overproduction of frequent occurrence, it began to be whispered that this or that grower was getting better prices from the wholesalers than his competitors could obtain from the city buyers. The mysterious word "shipping" was heard more and more frequently. It began to be understood that there were buyers outside the city limits who would on special occasions pay the market prices for flowers, provided the quality was forthcoming. Then the growers or their representatives fell into the habit of looking up the wholesalers before sacrificing their stock, and the first step in broadening the market was taken. The process of development went on gradually. It was not until a few years ago, when the flower market was being agitated, that John Burton startled his hearers by announcing that the wholesalers sent more flowers out of Philadelphia than they brought into it. In other words, they were not only shipping much of the stock consigned to them, but also much of that of the growers with whom they were competing for the city business.

Today it is claimed that one-third of the glass now operated to supply this market would be quite sufficient to furnish all the stock needed in the city. In other words, two-thirds of our product is shipped out of town. While it is difficult to verify this statement, I believe it to be fair.

Philadelphia growers, then, owe to the enterprise of the wholesalers and to their own industry two-thirds of their places today. Without the aid of the wholesalers the growth would have been checked and the ability of many of our growers might never have been displayed.

We owe to the wholesalers a debt of gratitude for the rapid development of our business. They have traveled north, east, south and west. They have met the buyers in their sections and they have learned what they required and when they required it. They have taught us these things and opened to us widely distant markets. When, for one reason or another, we have failed to meet the market requirements, they have gone afield to satisfy the demands made upon them.

growers, our retailers, our seedsmen, our suppliers and our nurserymen, but none have made greater strides than our wholesalers. To their brains, their enterprise, their industry, their integrity I pay this tribute of respect.

The Club and the Convention.

The monthly meeting of the Florists' Club, held on Tuesday evening, July 2, was preceded by two important committee meetings. The finance committee, whose duty it is to provide the sinews of war for the national convention, met in the secretary's office in Horticultural hall at 6:30 p. m. Most of the twelve sub-committees reported. The results were entered and tabulated, and by a little after 7 o'clock this committee gave way to the executive committee. The question to be decided was where the outing should be held on Friday of convention week.

Around the old Flower Market table were gathered many of the best known and most successful of our business men, while others not members of the committee were there to hear the debate. Some favored concentrating all our efforts on one day, to make it live in our guests' memory. Others favored a division, more or less equal, of our efforts. Some favored our great park. Others favored the seashore. Here, again, there was division of opinion. Should it be Atlantic City or Wildwood? The majority thought our guests would enjoy Wildwood more than its older rival. Finally it came down to a vote between Belmont Mansion, in Fairmount park, and Wildwood, on the New Jersey coast. The vote was nearly two to one in favor of Wildwood, the belief being general that the delegates from the middle and western states would prefer a day by the ocean.

So late was the debate protracted that it was after 8:30 before President Samuel S. Pennock called the club meeting to order in the rooms downstairs. The proposed amendment to the by-laws, whereby candidates for membership would be voted for by an elective committee of five instead of by the whole club, gave an opportunity for good speeches from Edward Reid and Fred Hahman, both in favor of the change. The amendment was adopted. Thomas J. Oberlin's able and humorous paper on "The Redemption of the Hogbacks" was listened to with deep interest and heartily applauded. Mr. Oberlin exhibited flowers of Mary Lovett lathyrus and Hydrangea arborescens grown on his own hogback.

Then the opponents of Wildwood precipitated a general discussion on the fitness of the committee's selection. Everybody who had any other plan to suggest joined in the opposition. The debate was lively. For a while the majority of the committee and their supporters had their hands full. Delay, Atlantic City, Belmont Mansion, all combined, were formidable. Finally, by a vote of twenty-four to twenty-three, the president casting the deciding vote, the committee was sustained and Wildwood emerged victor.

Three days later the entertainment committee went down to Wildwood and was much pleased with the place. Charles D. Ball says it is an ideal spot for the convention's outing.

On the Street.

It was asserted on the street early this week that the famous club vote of 24 to 23, by which confidence was shown and absolute power vested in the executive committee, would not mean Wildwood, as the facts indicate. It was said that Thursday's meeting of the executive committee would see the whole question reopened, with a dark horse in the field striving to capture the honor of entertaining the convention. In support of this statement it was added that three prominent members of the committee had skipped out of town last Saturday afternoon. Their destination, it was learned, was historic Valley Forge. It was further learned that they were much impressed and intended to push the dark horse. The supporters of Wildwood are, however, going to the meeting with confidence that the choice so carefully made will remain unchanged.

A Pleasing Novelty.

Paul Berkowitz, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., is showing a prepared adiantum which his firm is distributing. While not absolutely new, this adiantum is as yet but little known. It is said to be the natural frond preserved by an electric process, rendering it durable. The fronds are made up in bunches and look as though just picked.

Various Notes.

The invitation of the Henry A. Dreer Co. to visit Riverton has been accepted for the S. A. F. convention, by the entertainment committee. The plan is to take the delegates by steamer up the Delaware to Bristol and back to Riverton, where the famous Dreer nurseries will be visited. The ladies' committee proposes to take the ladies, who attend the convention next month, to Willow Grove park.

H. Bayersdorfer and Mrs. Bayersdorfer have returned from Europe.

The Philadelphia Cut Flower Co. is nicely established in its temporary quarters at 1502 Sansom street.

M. Rice says he is literally submerged by the tide of imports pouring in upon him.

George Burton has his new range planted with American Beauties.

J. Stern & Co. will enlarge and remodel their store before the S. A. F. convention. They are receiving importations on two steamers this week.

Pennock Bros. have an elk horn fern in their window in honor of the Elks, who will be here next week.

I must stop—it is 11 o'clock!

FORT SMITH, ARK.

At the Belle Point hospital the first part of last week, A. A. Pantet submitted to an operation which is likely to give him at least partial relief from suffering which he has endured for years.

Three years ago, while Mr. Pantet was working in one of his greenhouses, he fell over a pile of flower pots, and one of his knees received an injury, which at the time was not considered serious, but which later caused him much pain and inconvenience. In the operation at the hospital, three pieces of flower pot clay were removed from his knee-cap. Though he was on the operating table for two hours and a half, no chloroform or ether was administered. Mr. Pantet is already able to attend to business, though he cannot yet walk without the aid of a crutch.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., George S. Green, Chicago; First Vice-Pres., M. H. Duryea, New York; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland.

LOUISVILLE reports a full acreage of onion sets, with an average crop outlook.

MANY seedsmen visited the Jamestown exposition following the New York convention.

SOME of the California growers are reporting on the estimated delivery of onion seed and it is not nearly so bad as expected.

THE truck growers in the vicinity of Corpus Christi, Tex., have organized an association, with E. C. Green, of Brownsville, as secretary.

SEEDSMEN are this week extending and totaling the inventory sheets. In general, they are well cleaned up and expect the final result to show a satisfactory profit on the season's business.

BUCKBEE's seed store, at Rockford, Ill., is headquarters for the Second Ward Non-Partisan Political club, of that city, of which John T. Buckbee is one of the active members.

THE pea crop in Wisconsin is, for the most part, doing well, and the prospect is for a good yield. In Michigan reports indicate that rains are needed in many sections to bring satisfactory results.

REPORTS from the sections in the central west, where onions have been planted for a seed crop, are to the effect that the blossoms are beginning to open and everything is favorable for a good yield.

VISITED CHICAGO: Chas. P. Braslan, San Jose, Cal.; A. J. Pieters, Hollister, Cal.; L. M. Breit, representing Sampson & Fillon, Angers, France; L. S. Payn, representing Andre LeRoy & Co., Angers, France.

THE cantaloupe industry in the valley south of Phoenix, Arizona, promises to develop to considerable importance. The first car of fruit from this district this year was put on the rails at Mesa, Arizona, July 1.

THE sweet corn crop is one that is causing a few guesses. It is thought that the early varieties will come along all right, but the late sorts are far behind and a shortage is fully expected, of Evergreen and Country Gentleman.

BEANS for the coming crop went into the ground under favorable conditions and reports up to the present show that everything has been as it should be. This applies to Michigan. Planters in Wisconsin and New York also report favorably.

WHY is the American Seed Trade Association not more representative of the trade in general? Surely attendance would be more worth while to the seed growers and grass seed men who now attend if they could meet each year the great body of the trade.

THE Chicago onion set fields are getting more rain than is needed. No harm has resulted so far from this, however, and on the whole the crop looks as though a good harvest will be gathered. The acreage at Chicago is short of what it was last year and the late planting is not likely to make as large a crop. An

LILY CROPS.

The first of this season's crop of Bermudean Harrisii are expected to reach New York on this week's boat, although it may not be until July 25 that enough comes in to give the seed houses a supply which will enable them to begin filling the orders now on hand. Advices are to the effect that the lilies were later in blooming this year than usual, and ripening also may be delayed a few days, but this will hardly make much difference in the date of arrival of the two main lots which usually come in, for there is only a fortnightly boat between Bermuda and New York. Reports are that there will be a further improvement in quality, but that there will be no special increase in supply, particularly of bulbs of the larger sizes.

It is interesting to note that the bulb growing industry in the Azores islands is making steady progress. At least one New York bulb importing firm sent a man to the Azores this spring, at flowering time. He found the stock a remarkably even lot and was well pleased at the increase in acreage this season. Forcers find these bulbs free from disease and the growth is of a robust character, with flowers of a firm texture that is particularly pleasing to those who do a shipping business with cut flowers. The demand for these bulbs continues ahead of the supply, both in Europe and America, several large German and English firms competing with the New York houses for the crops.

The Japanese crops are said to be about as last year in number of bulbs planted, but little information of dependable character is to be had as to the

COBURN'S PANSIES

The Best Market Strain Grown

We grow annually 500,000 transplanted plants for spring sales. When in bloom, we personally select about ten thousand of the finest for our seed beds. As a result of such careful selection for a period of over 25 years, we have a strain which we believe can not be equaled.

The plants are of vigorous, compact growth, and the flowers of large size, fine shape and substance, while the colors include rich self-brilliant and novel shades and markings, in the widest range. We take especial pains to properly balance the colors.

Our Pansies are the recognized standard in the Boston market, always bringing the highest price. We grow seed for our own use only, usually planting our whole crop each year. This season we have a small surplus and have put up a few hundred trial packets of about 1000 seeds to introduce our Pansies.

PRICE, $1.00 PER PACKET. Only one to each person, as the number is limited and we desire to distribute as widely as possible this season.

IF YOU GROW PANSIES try a packet. We invite comparison with any seed on the market. Plants ready after the latter part of August.

Strong plants from seed bed, $5.00 per 1000.

result of the season's growth. The bulbs are grown over a considerable area, in lots of varying size, and under all sorts of conditions as to care in keeping the several types unmixed, but perhaps the greatest reason for uncertainty as to the quality and quantity of the stock is that the Jap is as keen as any man on earth in making the foreign buyer think that things are what they are not. Certain detection in deceit has no terrors for him, for he knows the bulbs are wanted and wanted badly.

SEED CROPS IN FRANCE.

From what we hear from over the water, the crops in California seem to be in bad state, and this is likely the reason why our American friends have sent us numerous demands lately.

In our district here in northwestern France, apart from some varieties which passed the winter poorly, crops do not look so bad as we might have expected earlier. If we remember the long drouth we had to sustain last summer, when carrots, beets, mangels, leeks, etc., could not be sown until unusually late, we could scarcely hope that the roots would ever come big enough to be planted for seeds. This was followed by a severe winter and it really is a wonder that growers could save and plant so many as they have done for seed.

Cabbages will be a short crop. They were sown too late last autumn on account of dry weather, and the plants were too weak to be able to go through the winter. The same remark applies to turnips and swedes. Leeks look pretty well up to now, but there is a small acreage and prices are already going up on account of bad prospects for next crop. Of onions there is also a small acreage planted. Because of the long dry weather we had last year, onion bulbs could not develop and could not be planted for seeds. Therefore a short crop should be expected.

NOVELTIES AND SPECIALTIES.

So indispensable to the modern seedsman's catalogue, are a goodly number of so-called novelties and specialties in seeds, bulbs and plants, says an American writer in the English Horticultural Advertiser, that hardly is one season ended before this all-important matter as regards the year to come is before us for its solution. Many of our best firms are finding that subjects of real merit, that for one cause or another have been neglected, or let us say, inadequately pushed, when properly catalogued and illustrated may prove great drawing cards. Novelties of unquestioned merit are not by any means always obtainable; on the other hand, a seedsman may catalogue and illustrate as elaborately as he wishes some standard sort, and be sure of a satisfied customer and a good profit.

It is an art to arrange the novelties and specialties of a seed catalogue. What brought this matter to my mind, was the attractive and prominent manner in which Henry A. Dreer, Philadelphia, catalogued this season the fancy dahlia Frank Smith. I will quote Messrs. Dreer very briefly as follows: "It will, no doubt, surprise many lovers of dahlias when we tell them that this beautiful variety is not new, or even of recent introduction, it having been offered in our own catalogue in 1868, and while we are uncertain as to the exact year of its introduction, it is safe to assume that it was over half a century ago. The fact, that since then thousands of dahlias of all types have been introduced, simply to disappear, should be convincing proof that a variety which has stood the test of over half a century must have exceptional merit." I would further tell you that Messrs. Dreer have devoted an entire page to a most attractive illustration of this dahlia in colors, by a noted artist.

The above happy way of reintroducing, so to speak, to a customer's special attention a variety of sterling merit cannot be too highly commended. Of course, varying circumstances and different subjects will suggest numberless ways of accomplishing the same ends—namely, the giving of deserved prominence to standard varieties of seeds, bulbs, or plants, with the object in view of being able to include in our catalogues a creditable list of novelties and specialties—in those years when there would seem to be an absence of real novelties. In this way a seedsman can be absolutely honest with his customers, and not sacrifice the appearance of his catalogue.

HENRY FIELD'S PLANS.

As previously announced, Henry Field has organized a corporation to take over his seed business at Shenandoah, Ia., where a warehouse is to be built at once. The following additional information as to his plans is reported from Des Moines:

"Henry Field, proprietor of a large seed company with headquarters at Shenandoah, is looking for a location for a branch house and may build in Des Moines. The Greater Des Moines committee is in communication with Mr. Field and he will probably be invited to attend one of the committee meetings in the near future and explain his proposition. branch in a city nearer the center of the state, his present house being in the extreme southwest corner of the state. He deals largely in seed corn, buying $30,000 worth of this class of seed last year. In order to secure the best quality of seed corn Mr. Field paid $5,000 in premiums to the farmers. His business at Shenandoah amounted to $100,000 last year."

Mr. Field sends the following: "The incorporation papers for the Henry Field Seed Co., which will begin business July 1, taking over Henry Field's seed business, were filed June 12. There will be no change in the management, as Mr. Field will hold half the stock and will be the manager of the company. The list of officers and directors is as follows on temporary organization: Directors: Henry Field, Chas. Simpson, H. E. Eaton, Ben G. Russell, A. L. P. Thompson, S. E. Field, D. S. Lake. Officers: Henry Field, president; Chas. Simpson, vice-president; H. E. Eaton, secretary and treasurer. The company is organized with $75,000 capital stock, which is already all or practically all subscribed. The building will be the finest seed building in the state."

SEEDLESS TOMATOES.

The production of any vegetable novelty always arouses interest among seed growers and gardeners. More or less of this work has been done by the experiment stations. For a number of years breeding experiments with vegetables have been carried on by Prof. Halsted and his associates at the New Jersey stations. Among the distinct and valuable productions secured in this work is a nearly seedless tomato. That is, the form which Prof. Halsted has developed seldom contains more than fifty seeds, and frequently there are not more than five or six, and often none.

This variety has become pretty well established and has been called the Giant because of the large size the plant attains. It originated five or six years ago as a result of a cross of Golden Sunrise upon Dwarf Champion. In describing it Prof. Halsted says:

"The seedlings frequently bear three cotyledons, and the plants are very slow, growing long-stemmed, with the foliage open, due to the long internodes, and leaves with the divisions widely separated, which are crinkled, and the terminal leaflet blunt pointed. The flower clusters are small, flowers cup-shaped, light lemon yellow, and the fruits few, medium small, light yellow, and nearly seedless. The flesh is particularly fine flavored. The plants, three feet apart each way, covered the ground devoted to the block, and flowered up to the killing frosts near November 1. The type appears to be well fixed."

E. P. Sandsten, working at the Wisconsin Experiment Station, produced seedless tomatoes by an entirely different method, i. e., the use of excessive amounts of fertilizers. He worked in the greenhouse with a good potting soil, using commercial fertilizers at the rate of 800 pounds of nitrate of soda, 600 pounds of sulphate of potash, and 1,000 pounds of desiccated bone per acre. Many abnormalities in the growth of the plants and fruit were observed. "In almost all cases there was a tendency of the plants to produce fruits containing a much smaller number of seeds than is generally found in the ordinary fruit." In one instance the plant was dwarfed and the fruit not larger than a walnut, but firm fleshed and entirely seedless. Another plant produced a large, solid fruit that was seedless. Cuttings taken from these plants and set outdoors remained true to type, but produced more and larger fruit than in the greenhouse.

We thus have at least two ways of securing seedlessness in tomatoes—by crossing and selection and by high feeding with fertilizers. The work with seedless tomatoes at both these stations is being continued and promises to result in the establishment of varieties having far less seeds than the sorts commonly grown. It brings out strikingly the variations that may occur in plants as a result of crossing and high feeding with fertilizers.

EREMURI.

Among the most conspicuous hardy flowers at the temple show, says a writer in the Horticultural Advertiser, were the various species and varieties of this noble family of hardy plants, and I have found that they keep so well in water when cut that it has occurred to me that we ought to see them in the market, but up to the present I have not seen them in Covent Garden, yet probably some may be supplied direct to the florists for special purposes. I believe, if they were taken up by market growers, there would be money in them. The ordinary Eremurus robustus is a pretty shade of color, and the immense spikes of bloom are very telling in large decorations. I have before me spikes of a white variety which have been cut fully a week, and are now in fine condition, and will probably last another week.

It may be rather expensive to work up a stock to have sufficient to do much good with in the market, but in the long run I am sure that they would pay, for there is now a much greater demand for large and imposing flowers. Anything takes which stands up well. At one time everything had to be dwarf and compact, but it is not so now, except for special purposes. At one time the tall rambler roses would not have found favor, but during the last few years they have made better prices than almost any other flowering plants grown. All other tall plants are also in demand. It is the same with cut bloom, and those who tried many subjects years ago and found them unprofitable, would find them worth taking up again now that fashions have changed so much.

BEST SINGLE TULIPS.

Segers Bros., Lisse, Holland, recommend a list of single tulips, as follows:

Albion (White Hawk), one of the finest pure white tulips in cultivation for forcing and bedding. A very large snow-white flower of great substance; keeps exceedingly well after it is forced; the longer it is kept the finer and larger it grows and the flowers stand any handling in transit.

Belle Alliance (Waterloo), scarlet, sweet scented, fine for forcing and bedding.

Chrysolora, pure golden yellow, extra fine. There is no yellow tulip which gives greater satisfaction for bedding than this variety. The flower, which is large and finely formed, keeps its golden yellow color till the petals drop. On account of these good qualities we specially recommend it for bedding.

Cottage Maid (La Precieuse), white, bordered with pink. When forced it opens beautifully pink, and in the field its color attracts the attention even at a distance.

Couleur de Cardinal, bronze scarlet, large fine shaped flower. Very fine for forcing and bedding. A flower of great substance, with long stems.

Cramoisie Brilliant, bright vermillion, large flower, very fine for forcing.

Crimson King (Roi Cramoisie), scarlet, easily forced, very fine for bedding.

Duc van Tholl, Scarlet, bright scarlet.

forcing. Is in great demand to get the first white tulip flowers.

Duchesse de Parma, very fine orange or terra cotta, with yellow edge, large flower. Is a good forcer and a very fine bedder.

Gold Finch, golden yellow, deliciously sweet scented. This variety forces easily and early, and lasts long when cut. The plant has large, broad foliage, which increases its value as a cut flower, and the flower keeps its pure yellow color to the end, either outdoors or when forced. It will become the leader of the yellow tulips.

Joost van Vondel, white, the largest pure white tulip. An exhibition variety. Has no equal for outdoors.

Keizerskroon, bright red, with broad yellow edge, extra large flower, very fine for forcing and bedding. This variety cannot be recommended sufficiently.

La Reine, pure white, extra fine for forcing. Sometimes it turns into a delicate pink. This variety is known all over the world as the best white tulip for forcing and bedding. Millions are used for forcing.

Mon Tresor, fine golden yellow, extra fine large flower, one of the best yellow tulips for forcing. Highly recommended for its earliness and easiness in forcing.

Ophir d'Or, golden yellow, large flower, fine for bedding.

Prince of Austria, bright orange vermillion, large flower, sweet scented, highly recommended for forcing and bedding.

Proserpine, fine glossy carmine pink, large tulip. This very striking variety is unique in color and forces easily; may be had in bloom about the middle of December. Also highly recommended for outdoors.

Rose Grisdelin, beautiful pink, is one of the finest pink tulips in cultivation. It is well known everywhere and highly recommended both for forcing and bedding. The very great demand for this variety, all over the world, is a proof of its unsurpassable qualities.

Rose Luisante, deep pink, a fine variety for forcing and bedding.

Standard Royal, Silver, white, feathered with cherry crimson, fine for beds. One of the finest of the feathered tulips.

Thomas Morus, apricot orange, finely shaped flower, distinct. The finest orange tulip for forcing. Very early.

Vermilion Brilliant, brilliant vermillion, a beautiful flower, forces very easily and early. This variety beats all scarlets for forcing. The flower when forced is very large and the color is the most brilliant of all scarlets.

Yellow Prince, fine yellow, sweet scented. It holds the premier position among yellow forcing tulips, because of its earliness and easiness in forcing and its agreeable odor. Millions of this variety are used for forcing all over the world. For outdoor planting, however, we should not recommend Yellow Prince; for this purpose Gold Finch and Chrysolora are much superior.

WASHINGTON.

Independence day found most of the stores busy with a rush of funeral work. Stock is poor, and not overplentiful at that. There is some demand for Beauties, but they are down and out at present.

C. E. Pedigo, of Ballston, Va., has a fine lot of Philippine Harrisii coming out. Some blooms measure twelve inches long.

At the club meeting Tuesday, July 2, Geo. Shaffer, F. H. Kramer and Chas. McCauley were appointed as the annual outing committee. They have chartered cars on the Old Dominion line and will take the florists and their families to Great Falls, Va., Thursday, July 25. They are making an effort to have florists close for a half-day, so all can go. A number of the craft will leave Sunday for Saratoga, N. Y., to attend the encampment of the Knights Templars.

W. T. Phillips, seedsman, also Mr. and Mrs. Chas. J. J. Phillips, stopped over here on their way to the Jamestown exposition. Mr. Gracey, from Philadelphia, Pa., was also a visitor. O. O.

NORTH MILWAUKEE, WIS.—Mr. Manke is erecting an additional greenhouse, 27 x 160 feet, and a two-story residence, 26 x 38 feet.

COLUMBUS, O.—The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. has increased its capital stock from $20,000 to $50,000. The capitalization is divided into $31,000 of common and $19,000 of 6 per cent preferred stock. The company has recently completed a new plant in West Fifth avenue, all the greenhouses being constructed with iron frames.

MASON CITY, IA.

On the afternoon of July 3 occurred one of the severest hail storms that have visited this section for many years. The damage to growing crops is comparatively light, but glass in dwelling houses on the side of the approaching storm, as it came from the west and northwest, was badly shattered. In some localities near here scarcely a house escaped.

The glass of the Wheeler Floral Co. was badly broken and the houses make a most dilapidated appearance.

Some of the hail stones were large, about the size of hens' eggs, but came far apart, the bulk of the stones being about the size of robins' eggs.

The damage was here and west of us. Towns only ten miles away, toward the east and northeast, had no storm at all.

We hope we may escape any further visitations of this kind, for it is not pleasant to hear the jingle of your broken glass roofs, mingled with the crash of the thunder and the rush of the storm.

LET EVERYBODY HELP.

I was glad to see your announcement that you were going to give more space and attention in your valuable paper to the vegetable growers. The vegetable growing industry is growing fast and we have lots to contend with and learn and a paper like yours can help a great deal. I am quite willing to tell of my own experiences, if other growers will do the same.

I send you an account of one experiment that was very valuable to me, and I have others, such as subirrigation on ground beds, sterilizing soil with both steam and formalin for the lettuce rosette, and possibly some others, as something new is turning up every little while.

My crops are lettuce in the winter, followed by tomatoes in late spring and early summer. B. H. THORNE.

BOTTOM HEAT FOR VEGETABLES.

In the REVIEW of June 27 there was an article on "Lettuce and Cucumbers," in which was mentioned bottom heating by the use of steam pipe and drain tile. Would you kindly go into detail and tell me how far apart the lines of tile should be from one another when the tile is placed a foot underground? Also state what size tile gives best results. Instead of steam, I will use hot water, which will be forced through the pipe by means of a turbine pump. C. A. W.

The rows of drain tile should be beneath each row of cucumber or tomato plants grown on solid beds. When steam is used a ¾-inch pipe inside a 3-inch line of tile will give excellent drainage and a good bottom heat. The steam, however, should not be left turned on all the time, but only a short time each morning and evening. By having a few soil thermometers always in place along some rows, it will be easy to tell how long it is safe to leave the steam on at a time. If C. A. W. uses hot water, it will be necessary to use larger pipe and drain tile. I believe that a 1-inch or 1¼-inch pipe in a 4-inch tile would be steadier and more satisfactory than the steam, but I have never seen hot water used in this way. It will be found necessary to examine the soil frequently and well down into it, to see that the roots have the proper amount of moisture. A long, narrow, half-round trowel should be used for this purpose, so as not to tear too many roots.

For lettuce and some other vegetables the bottom heat is not necessary, but for cucumbers, tomatoes, beans and peppers it is very important, especially in winter, when the plants are small. Later in the spring, when the days are long and

LET ADVERTISERS ANSWER.

I take a great interest in reading the REVIEW and have found it a great help to me in many ways. I would like to ask you what variety of White Spine cucumbers is the best to grow under glass, for forcing. I want something that is dark green and a good yielder. What seedsman or grower can supply the seeds? I do not care for the price if they are good and true to name. It is hard to get seeds that you can depend on. W. P. COOPER.

DRY ROT ON TOMATOES.

We are sending by this mail a small box containing four young tomatoes affected with what, we suppose, is black spot. This threatens to ruin our crop. Will your expert kindly advise as to cause and cure? We have had sulphur and quicklime laid around under the foliage, but the disease seems to be gaining ground. S. N. C.

The small green tomatoes received as samples were badly affected with dry rot, one of the worst of tomato growers' troubles. This is not a contagious disease, but is caused by unfavorable conditions. Improper watering and ventilation are almost sure to bring it on, but many experienced growers have their troubles with it. I have found it worse with Comet than with any other variety, but it usually affects only the first fruits and then disappears, probably as a result of most careful attention to it. In spite of this fault, I still consider Comet in the lead as a forcing tomato.

As a remedy I would suggest that all affected fruits be removed and most careful attention be given to ventilation, temperature and watering. Test the soil and see if it is not a little too dry; if so, soak it up early in the morning, without wetting the foliage, and keep plenty of air in the houses. This is the worst time of year to ventilate. The nights being cool, the ventilators are usually closed to keep the houses warmer, and, there being no artificial heat in the houses, the foliage becomes wet before the houses are open in the morning. This damp, close condition is very liable to start or spread any kind of disease. It is better to leave a little ventilation on, even if the temperature be a trifle cooler. The circulation thus obtained will keep the air dryer, but too much of a difference in day and night temperature will result in other troubles.

We have had this same dry rot of fruit on outdoor tomatoes in both extremely wet and extremely dry seasons, but it usually disappears also as soon as the weather becomes settled.

PACIFIC COAST.

BULB-GROWING.

The Pacific coast, from general indications, will in time be able to grow sufficient bulbs of a majority of the most popular kinds to supply the home trade and at the same time have a surplus for export. Already we grow all the Paper White narcissus used here, and such advancement has been made in the proper growing, drying and handling of the yellow sorts that not over fifty per cent of the bulbs planted are imported either from the east or Europe.

The narcissus family, with a few exceptions, does remarkably well here, and as most of the varieties are grown outside, there is little waste from forcing under glass and the bulbs continue to increase at such a pace that they soon overflow the boundaries allotted to them. This fact has been taken advantage of commercially by half a dozen large bulb growers on the coast and wherever the right kind of soil is planted with any of the narcissi the climate does most of the balance of the work needed.

Considerable experimenting has been done in the line of hyacinths, both of the Dutch and Roman varieties. I have seen patches on the northern coast that could not be surpassed for size and shape, but in the vicinity of central California but little along this line has been done. It is claimed by some that our dry summers are not conducive to successful hyacinth growing and that the soil of Oregon and Washington is more suitable on account of the abundance of rain during the spring and summer season. Considerable experimenting will be done in the near future, however, by bulb growers along this line.

The growing of tulips commercially is also in its infancy. This bulb also appears to like considerable moisture during its growing season, and whether this can be overcome or not by artificial means, so that a profitable bulb can be raised, remains to be seen. Several firms, however, are at present offering California grown bulbs that certainly make as good an appearance as the imported stock.

With calla lilies we have long demonstrated that California bulbs can be grown cheaper and better than in almost any other location. Many acres are devoted here to their growth and the product is shipped all over the world. The only requisite seems to be to have fairly heavy soil and an abundance of moisture.

Gladioli of all kinds increase wonderfully and have been a much neglected flower. They have always been looked on as a cheap garden flower, but with the improvements made in the quality of them in the past few years and the steadily growing demand for them as a decorative florist flower the growers have not kept pace with the demand and we still import a majority of the bulbs. should be made note of by some of our growers, as the demand for gladioli of all kinds has been very heavy for the past two seasons, and the supply is limited on the Coast. The bulbs of most of the kinds are of the easiest culture and they multiply very rapidly. The demand for the blooms has never been quite satisfied in this locality and they are deservedly becoming more popular each year.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

There is little of interest to note during the last week. The weather has turned warm, after having been the coolest on record for the entire month of June. The effect of the weather, differing so greatly from that usually experienced at this time, has been to improve the quality of stock of all kinds, so that at the present time flowers grown both under glass and outside are of better form, color and substance than those we usually handle during this month. This has been especially noticeable in the line of fancy carnations, many of which are usually almost worthless from the thrips in the middle of summer, and little of this pest has been seen so far this year.

With roses, although the supply has been short, the quality of the short-stemmed stock has been very good. Sweet peas are still the most popular flower and they cost the retailers about 50 cents per dozen bunches. This is as cheap as they usually get and it is very hard to see where there can be any money made from them at such a price.

Business is extremely quiet here. There is absolutely nothing doing, now that the schools have closed, except a small amount of funeral work.

Over in Oakland and Alameda the same conditions prevail, and quietness reigns supreme. One enterprising florist remarked to me a few days ago that "the weather was so good that the people absolutely refused to die."

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; Vice-pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. O. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 33d annual convention will be held at Milwaukee, June, 1908.

O. H. KOEHLER has bought an interest in the Fostoria Nursery, Milford, Ia.

WILLIAM A. PETERSON, Chicago, is with his family at Lake Geneva, Wis., for a stay of three weeks.

Good growing weather affords much encouragement to the nurserymen, after their delayed season of replanting.

GLEN BROS., Rochester, N. Y., have incorporated with $50,000 authorized capital stock. The officers and directors for the first year are Emerson S. Mayo, Ray A. Mayo and George M. Pappert.

THE convention of the American Association of Park Superintendents will be held at Toronto August 15 to 17 instead of on the dates previously announced by the secretary, F. L. Mulford, Harrisburg, Pa.

THE Nurserymen's Association of Oklahoma and Indian Territory has been in session at Oklahoma City, but the attendance was small, because of pressure of other matters, and little was accomplished. Officers were re-elected.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS.

Now is the time to push ahead the work of propagating all kinds of evergreens that can be rooted now from cuttings outdoors or in. Frames covered with anything that will shade the cuttings until they are nearly rooted will answer the purpose admirably, but most things can be rooted in the open ground in a shady location. Shade of some kind, however, is absolutely necessary. A little sand and leaf-mold worked into the soil will be very helpful in the rooting process. A thorough watering after each batch of cuttings is put in is essential to their well-doing; so, also, is a frequent sprinkling overhead. The soil should never be allowed to become dry.

Last winter was extremely severe on plum and peach trees in some sections of the country. There is very little fruit set on pears. Both these conditions will tend to advance the price of fruit, while the former condition will create a demand for young stock.

Privet grown into specimen plants of pyramid or standard form is in considerable demand now for the same purposes as bays were formerly used, chiefly because the privet can be used in large numbers at a much smaller cost than bay trees and produces an effect very little inferior to the latter, with a decided advantage in favor of the privet in the assurance of its standing outdoors all winter with but little danger of being killed by frost. that had been moved was, by reason of the check thereby given it, later in swelling the buds than plants that had not been disturbed. I have been strengthened in this opinion by having noticed that the buds and the young wood of privet that has since perished were fully alive in February.

It will be well now, in the case of privet hedges, the sides of which are bare, or with blanks here and there, but with a fairly thrifty top growth, to clip this top growth in order that the weakened growth at the sides may reap the benefit of the sap thus diverted in their direction. Many things have been from time to time used as substitutes for privet, but so far nothing has been found to answer all the requirements expected of privet. The late season, when the damage came to be vividly noticeable, has prevented much replanting being done this year, but it looks as if a great deal of that kind of work would be undertaken in the fall, and more, perhaps, next spring. That ought to be sufficient reason for the rooting of cuttings from green wood, which should be under way early next month so that they may get well rooted for transplanting in nursery rows before fall. D. M.

THE LABOR QUESTION.

One of the questions propounded at the recent Detroit meeting of the A. A. N. was, "How can we decrease cost, doing more with horses and improved tools and using less labor?" In answer to this, some suggested the using of such implements as the Ilgenfritz plow. Some, again, said that each man must work this question out for himself. Still another thought the question should read, "How can we employ more labor?" In his idea the laboring man had the noblest of all the professions and he thought it entirely wrong to try to dispense with labor, even though it would save a few dollars.

BALTIMORE.The Market.

The retail trade last week was not rushing and orders could be taken care of without difficulty. However, some fine design work was disposed of. For the balance of the summer the florists will depend on funeral work and odds and ends.

The growers have been up against it for the past few weeks and some are seeking the city markets, trying to dispose of their cut flowers. The reason for the glut is possibly the cold weather in June, for when the change of weather took place the general run of outdoor stock was all in bloom at one time.

Roses are selling well, but at low prices. Carnations are still abundant and fine considering the weather. Sweet peas are a glut on the market and can be had at almost any price. Greens of all kinds are enough to meet the demand.

Club Meeting.

The last meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club was held Monday evening, July 8, with President F. C. Bauer in the chair. Only sixteen members were present and little business was transacted. John Severon, who is employed at the Fernery greenhouses, was elected a member. The secretary read a letter from R. Vincent, Jr., stating that he will give the club another talk on the labor question, for which the club will later set a date.

There will be only one meeting in August, the second Monday.

Bowling follows most of the club meetings.

Various Notes.

Albert Fiedler & Co. are building a new greenhouse 30x200 near the Belair road for carnations and asparagus. At present there are ten men employed.

N. D. Hamilton, of Mount Washington, is erecting another house 35x100 and will take down two of his old houses and rebuild them. He has ten houses and sixty varieties of mums and will grow roses, carnations and callas on a large scale.

G. Cook, of Arlington, is still sending some extra fine callas to the exchange.

Mrs. James Glass is on her way to Ireland.

N. Terry, of Owings Mills, has leased the stall in Lexington market from N. O. Strand & Co. for one year. Mr. Strand formerly occupied the stall of P. B. Welsh.

Thomas Patterson has secured the position of market master in Lexington market. Mr. Patterson is the only florist who ever held such a position.

C. G. Rhodes, of Arlington, is cutting some extra fine outdoor sweet peas.

Edward Van Ruth, of Lauraville, had a number of pink rambler roses on the market last week and they sold well.

G. Fauth, of Woodlawn, has discontinued for a while standing in market and will stay at home and grow blooms for his son's store. J. L. T.

STEVENS POINT, WIS.—W. G. Macklin announces that on Sunday afternoons during the summer his greenhouse will be closed to sightseers and casual customers, but, in the case of emergency orders, special arrangements may be made by telephone or at his residence.

LEBANON, PA.

At the First Reformed Church, June 30, the annual Red Rose festival was held. According to the stipulation of an ancestor of the present owners of the site of the church, the yearly rental for the tract of ground is one red rose. At the evening service this rental was formally paid to Mrs. Kate Mish, widow of P. P. Mish, a sixth-generation descendant of George Steitz, founder of this city.

Mrs. Mish was accompanied in the rose rental ceremony by her granddaughter, Miss Florence Mish, who is a daughter of the well-known florist. Both grandmother and granddaughter received handsome bouquets of roses. June roses and other flowers were the decorations of the church.

ORANGE, N. J.

The regular monthly meeting of the New Jersey Floricultural Society was held July 5. Lager & Hurrell, of Summit, displayed a number of their choice orchids, a white Cattleya Mossiae, C. Mossiae Wagnerii and Dendrobium nobile Amesii attracting special notice because of their rarity, and were awarded first-class certificates. Joseph A. Manda, of West Orange, displayed an orchid, Odontoglossum citrosimum, with its beautiful pendent white blossoms of twenty-three flowers, of last season's importation, and was correspondingly rewarded. A miscellaneous collection of the season's flowers, from neighboring estates, made up the monthly floral display.

In the business portion of the meeting, Henry Hornecker, of East Orange, made an appeal for a representation of commercial men in the forthcoming fall show, to be rewarded by an offer of suitable prizes, and this was approved by the sentiment of the meeting, a prize being added to the schedule of $6 and $9 for the best twenty-five cut blooms, open to the trade. SAGINAW, MICH.

Notwithstanding the fact that more plants were grown here this year than ever before, the unusual demand for potted plants has run florists short and rendered them unable to supply the wants of their customers. The stock of geraniums was early exhausted, and dealers have been at their wits' end to get half enough to go around. There has also been a marked shortage in cannas, petunias and salvias, and in all sorts of plants suitable for hanging baskets. John B. Goetz Sons declared, "We could not put up a $2 basket for $5 if anybody should want one."

"We can hardly tell what the shortage will be," said G. A. Granse, of the Roethke Floral Co. "We have had more calls for potted plants this year than ever before."

Grohmann Bros. had the same story to tell of an inability to supply the demand for potted plants. "Although we increased our output by from 1,000 to 3,000 plants, that was not enough to supply the demand," said Mr. Grohmann.

"We never had such a shortage of potted plants before, at least never such a demand," said Charles Frueh, of Charles Frueh & Sons.

Various reasons are assigned for this unusual shortage. Saginaw's beautifying for the semi-centennial year was one of the causes of the increased demand, and it is generally agreed that Decoration day this year used up more plants than ever before. Another probable reason is that people set out their plants too early for this late season, and consequently many of the flowers were frost-killed. According to the opinion of several florists, there is also an increasing demand for plants for decoration around residences. People are becoming educated, apparently, in the use of flowers, and there is a growing desire to improve the appearance of yards and porches.

I HAVE only praise for the REVIEW and sincerely hope it may continue as successful.—RAYMOND MILLER, Abilene, Kan.

Horticultural Books

We can supply any of the following books at the prices noted, postpaid, and any other book at publishers' price:

Pronouncing Dictionary.

A list of plant names and the botanical terms most frequently met with in articles on trade topics, with the correct pronunciation for each. 25 cents

The Dahlia.

By LAWRENCE K. PEACOCK. A practical treatise on the habits, characteristics, cultivation and history of the dahlia with a descriptive list of all the best varieties. Copiously and elegantly illustrated. 30 cents

The Florists' Manual.

By WILLIAM SCOTT. Covers the whole field of commercial floriculture. Articles are arranged alphabetically so that reference is quick and easy. It tells you just what you want to know in just the way you want to be told. $5.00

Handbook of Practical Landscape Gardening.

By P. R. ELLIOTT. Designed for city and suburban residences and country schoolhouses, containing designs for lots and grounds, from a lot 30x100 feet to a 40-acre plant. Cloth. $1.50

The Chrysanthemum.

By ARTHUR HERRINGTON, formerly president of Chrysanthemum Society of America. The most complete and comprehensive work on the cultivation of the chrysanthemum that has yet been published in America. The book will be welcomed for the lucid, comprehensive, as well as the practical character of its contents. Handsomely illustrated. 168 pages, 5x7 inches. 50 cents

Greenhouse Construction.

By PROF. L. R. TAFT. A complete manual on the building, heating, ventilating and arrangement of greenhouses, and the construction of hotbeds, frames and plant pits. Lucid descriptions and 118 diagrams and illustrations make every detail clear to the amateur and professional gardener and florist. Cloth. 218 pages. $1.50

Gardening for Profit.

By PETER HENDERSON. The standard work on market and family gardening. The successful experience of the author for more than thirty years, and his willingness to tell, as he does in this work, the secret of his success for the benefit of others, enables him to give most valuable information. The book is profusely illustrated. 376 pages. Cloth. $1.50

Cabbage, Cauliflower and Allied Vegetables.

By C. L. ALLEN. An explanation of the requirements, conditions, cultivation and general management pertaining to the entire cabbage group. The chapter on seed raising is probably the most authoritative treatise on this subject ever published. Insects and fungi are given due attention. Illustrated. 128 pages. Cloth. 50 cents

Mushrooms—How to Grow Them.

By WM. FALCONER. This is the most practical work on the subject ever written, and the only book on growing mushrooms published in America. The author describes how he grows mushrooms and how they are grown for profit by the leading market gardeners, and for home use by the most successful private growers. Engravings drawn from nature expressly for this work. Cloth. $1.00

Greenhouse Management.

By PROF. L. R. TAFT, of Michigan Agricultural College. A manual for florists and flower lovers on the forcing of flowers, vegetables and fruits in greenhouses, and the propagation and care of house plants. It treats of all the plants commonly cultivated by florists and amateurs, and explains in a thorough manner the methods that have been found most successful in growing them. Particular attention is paid to the growing of cut flowers, the growing of fruits under glass, etc. Of special value will be the directions for treating plants when attacked by insects and fungi. The preparation of the soil, the use of various manures, composts and fertilizers, watering, ventilating and heating receive careful and minute attention. Cloth. 400 pages. $1.50

DENVER.

The Market.

Business has been fair for July, and receipts have been large. This was not unexpected, as the season is at hand when such conditions prevail. The Fourth of July, coming in the middle of the week, curtailed business, as all the stores were closed, and the next day an unusually large cut of flowers came into the market, there being an especially heavy cut of roses and carnations, and the quality nearly right.

Carnations are plentiful and good for this time of year. Outdoor roses are a scarce article, the late frosts apparently fixing them as to quality and stem. There is a big supply of sweet peas and good stock sells fairly well, lavender, pink and white having first call. In price they go at wholesale at from 20 cents to 40 cents per hundred. Peonies have seen their best days and are about over with, not being as good this year as last. The warm weather affects the American Beauty, and while there is some select stock, most of them are poor.

Various Notes.

The season for vacations is at hand and several of the boys are away. Frank Frazer, of the Alpha Floral Co., is in Michigan. Geo. H. Cooper, of the Park Floral Co., also is away for a couple of weeks.

Early closing commenced July 1 and will continue to September 1, the principal stores closing at 6:30 p. m. and at noon on Sundays.

C. J. Davis is about to open a flower store on Fifteenth street. E. S. K.

For Bedding Glass in Sash or for Filling Cracks or Seams in Roof Joints or Frames of Greenhouses or Hotbeds.

It is used in Machine or Bulb. If too thick for bulb, thin with a little Pure Linseed Oil, boiled. So thinned, it can be brushed into any crack or leak, making a solid filling. It makes a solid bed, impervious to moisture, and holds glass in its place, and will stop any crevice or fault. When once set on dry wood it does not heave. As regards the goods, the article is no new invention, but simply an article of the very best class, to do thoroughly good work, like old-time gentlemen expected when sashes were made with lead, and small panes of glass used that caught the water and leaked unless set with an elastic putty which once set by a mechanic was expected to remain, and did remain in good shape. This Twemlow's Old English Glazing Putty does; nothing more, nothing less. SOLD BY THE FLORISTS' SUPPLY HOUSES.

CEMENT FOR CAST-IRON PIPE.

What is the best material to use for cementing 4-inch cast-iron water pipe for greenhouse heating? J. C.

In answer to your query regarding a cement for cast pipe, I have selected the following from several recommended by Bailey: "Sal ammoniac, two ounces; sulphur, one ounce; clean iron borings or filings, reduced to powder, twelve pounds; water enough to form a thin paste." L. C. C.

STEAM HEAT FOR TWO HOUSES

We have two greenhouses, each 25x65 feet, with no partition between them. The side walls are three feet high and the height to the ridge is ten feet. The side walls and one end of the houses are entirely of cement construction; the other end is cement to a distance of three feet from the ground, and above that it is glass. The houses are sheltered from the wind. How many runs of 1 1/4-inch steam pipe will be required to heat to 56 degrees when the outside temperature is 10 degrees below zero? What would be the size of the flow pipe in each house? We should like to have all 1 1/4-inch pipe under the gutter plate and on the side walls, as we will have solid beds. H. K. S.

Each house should have a 2-inch riser and sixteen 1 1/4-inch pipes. These can be arranged in coils and hung on the side walls. The main flow should be under the ridge and distribute to the returns at the far end of the house. L. C. C.

TO MAKE BOILER COMPOUND.

A Colorado correspondent of the Iron Trade Review reports a new discovery of a scientific nature, which may result in the establishment of a factory at Pueblo for the manufacture of boiler compound. A prominent chemist has discovered a process by which a valuable compound can be made, the principal ingredient of which is extracted from the cactus plant.

There is only one variety of cactus which will serve the purpose, the botanical name being epiphyllum. The process includes the reduction of the cactus to a pulp and in this manner the juice is extracted and mixed with other vegetable juices. The main claim for this compound is that it contains no chemicals which are detrimental in that they attack the metal sheets of the boilers and cause them to corrode.

The purpose of this compound is to eliminate scale forming constituents from the feed water, and in this manner prevent the formation of scales in the tubes. They claim it can be put on the market at a much lower cost than the average compound, for the reason that the cactus plant will grow in almost any ground and without cultivation.

VACUUM HEATING.

Frank A. Simonds, of Grand Rapids, Mich., has removed to Detroit and organized the Simonds Heating and Specialty Co., one of the first steps of the new concern being to mail to florists copies of the paper Mr. Simonds read before the Detroit Florists' Club and which was published in the REVIEW at the time, a couple of years ago. In it Mr. Simonds told about the vacuum system of heating by steam, then a quite new subject to florists, but since adopted, in one form or another, in quite a number of greenhouse plants.

A vacuum system of steam heating differs from the ordinary system of gravity return in the maintaining of a partial vacuum in the main and return pipes. The vacuum is created and maintained in the systems used in greenhouses, including the one devised by Mr. Simonds, by means of a vacuum pump. The result is that the steam circulates with much less pressure than would be required without the aid of the vacuum devices. When a heating engineer undertakes to show how a vacuum system works, he ordinarily obscures his meaning from the florist by employing a lot of incomprehensible technical terms, but wherever a good vacuum system has been installed in a greenhouse it has proved the correctness of the idea and has resulted in the adoption of the system by others. For instance, Chamberlin & Bunker, Fremont, Mich., say that a saving was made in the amount of pipe required as between the vacuum and gravity of steam. They are using the exhaust steam from a mill 310 feet from the greenhouses and have no difficulty in doing so with steam at atmospheric pressure. They have another plant in which they will replace the gravity system with the vacuum system this summer. Lee, Chamberlain & Co., Howell, Mich., say that they, with the use of the vacuum system, ordinarily carry only one pound pressure in their houses and never over two pounds in severe weather. They plan another range of houses next season and will use the vacuum system. Dunbar & Hopkins, Ashtabula, O., have about three acres under glass and think the vacuum system is strongly to be recommended for heating large areas.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL.

The Growers' Specialty Co., a Springfield corporation, recently organized under the laws of the state of Illinois, has begun active work, at the corner of Walnut street and the Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern railway tracks, upon what promises to be one of the largest greenhouse plants in the state. Edward C. Holzworth, president of the new corporation, has just returned from Cincinnati, where he closed a contract with the Greenhouse Structural Co. for the construction of the iron framework for the first five houses. The company contemplates the erection, eventually, of fifty houses, at an estimated average cost of $2,000 each.

About one-half of the plant will consist of specially constructed forcing houses, for leaf lettuce, head lettuce, radishes, tomatoes, peppers and other vegetables. Another large section of the houses will be used for the cultivation of roses, carnations and various other flowers.

In addition to this, the company will be one of the largest growers of mushrooms in the west, as the entire space under the benches in the vegetable houses, as well as 10,000 square feet of other space, will be devoted to the production of this fungus.

The company now owns, clear of all incumbrances, sufficient real estate to accommodate the first twenty houses, and has secured options on adjacent property sufficient for thirty more. Two large boilers are bought and paid for, and a carload of glass is now stored on the premises.

Very little wood will be used in the construction of the houses, the framework being iron and the foundation and side walls concrete, thus making the buildings practically fireproof and reducing the cost for repairs.

The concrete work for the houses now under construction is being done by the Springfield Sand & Cement Co., while the iron framework is being supplied by the Greenhouse Structural Co., of Cincinnati.

The present officers and directors of the corporation are: Edward C. Holzworth, president and treasurer; F. W. Lamey, vice-president, and S. A. Wight, secretary, while among the stockholders are such well-known men as Charles C. Stout, of Beardstown, and in Springfield, O. B. Caldwell, of the Johnston-Hatcher Co.; C. H. Freitag, president of the Springfield Sand & Cement Co.; R. M. Perkins, of the Perkins Ice & Coal Co.; B. T. Abbott, W. J. Hoyt, and others of equal prominence.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—The Hiawatha Gardens Co. will erect another greenhouse, 25x100 feet, and put in a new heating plant. The firm will also build a storage cellar, warehouse and new office, to care for the increased business.

DUTCH BULBS

TULIP THOMAS MOORE.

There are several reasons why the yellow tulip, Thomas Moore, is an excellent one for planting in a long border like the one shown in the accompanying illustration, and not the least of these is that it is held in Holland in such large quantities that the price is low. It may be had at the bulb fields for as little as $7.50 or even $6.50 per thousand, according to the quantity taken. Of course the price on this side is quite a little higher, for it includes the contribution to the national revenues, as well as freight and handling charges, but even at that it may be had here for from $11 to $12.50, according to how far they are from the seaport when purchased.

Thomas Moore is a tall tulip, carrying its flower about sixteen inches from the ground. The form of the flower is excellent and the color is sometimes described as apricot yellow. It is quite early and distinct. Most of the fall bulb lists say a word in its favor and some recommend it for forcing.

THE LATEST TULIPS.

Tulipa Sprengeri is probably the latest blooming of all tulips, as Kaufmanniana is the first, says F. W. Van Fleet. Its habitat does not appear to be known, but the first bulbs were collected about 1893, near the Himalayan mountains. The foliage is peculiar, long, narrow, bright green in color, looking more like that of a camassia than of a tulip. The flowers are borne on stems nearly two feet high, and come in late May or June, after the last of the cottage tulips. The color is uniform scarlet inside, with gray markings outside at the base. The size is large and the form a graceful cup-shape. Two or more blooms often appear to be produced from the same bulb. This cool season has so delayed the blooms of this fine novelty that they were in good condition June 18, though well exposed to sun. There appears value in Sprengeri as a cut flower, as it comes at a season when bright, bulbous blooms are scarce and has much individual beauty.

FLORISTS' TULIPS.

Florists', or, as they are sometimes called, English tulips, are divided into three classes, which are technically known as roses, byblœmens and bizarres. Roses are white ground tulips, which are marked with some shade of red or rose. Byblœmens, or bybs as they are familiarly called, are also white ground tulips, but the marking is some shade of deep maroon or purple. Bizarres have yellow grounds, and the flowers are marked with brown, orange, scarlet or black.

These classes are still further divided into (1) breeder's or mother tulips, which is the stage of the flower when it is of one uniform color; (2) feathered flowers, which are flowers in which the marking is confined to the edges of the petals; (3) flamed flowers, where the flower has a central marking or beam in addition to the feather.

It may not be generally known that when a seedling tulip flowers for the first time it is always of one uniform color and that, after a certain longer or shorter time, the flower breaks; that is, it becomes variegated. In florists' nomenclature, it is then said to be rectified. No one knows why this happens, or when it will happen, and, what is more curious still, is that a flower may exist in all three states. For example, there is Sir Joseph Paxton, which we have as a breeder, a flamed bizarre, and a feathered bizarre. Anyone ignorant of tulip peculiarities would never imagine for a minute that they were the same variety.

It is a remarkable fact, to which a writer in an English contemporary calls attention, that although many breeders have been raised within the last twenty years, there is not one that has given a good, lasting flower when it has broken. The consequence is that the old sorts its cunning and that successful "breaking" is a lost art?

It is said that the interest in this old-fashioned type is slowly gaining ground.

NARCISSI FOR OUTDOORS.

Best of Spring Flowers.

That narcissi are the most graceful and beautiful of all hardy spring bulbous flowers admits of no doubt. The striking advance in their culture in America of late years attests the esteem in which they are now held, but I venture to assert, without fear of contradiction, that a decade hence the sales of these bulbs will have at least quadrupled. Their extreme hardiness, ease of culture, lovely shades of coloring, the fact that they in nearly all cases improve under cultivation, and their moderate cost, will all tend to popularize them. I do not propose to discuss forcing varieties, in which little change is to be noted from year to year. A few old stand-bys, such as N. princeps, single and double Von Sion, poeticus ornatus, Golden Spur, Empress, Henry Irving, and one or two others, complete the list. Nearly all are of the trumpet section, and outside of poeticus, which is one of the best sellers,

Early Tulip Thomas Moore.

have still to be relied upon. Is it that the great flowers, such as Sir Joseph Paxton, Robert Guest, Dr. Hardy, Annie McGregor, Mabel, Masterpiece, Modesty, S. Barlow and the rest are merely the survival of the fittest among many thousands, and that where one is raised from seed now a hundred were then? Or, is it that the hand of the florist has lost there is a strange lack of variety, the incomparabilis and Leedsii types being little seen, although more beautiful than most of the trumpet forms. I think, however, a reaction in favor of the choice cupped daffodils is bound to come.

Golden Trumpet Daffodils.

The largest purchases for forcing are of the golden trumpet daffodils. Of these, Henry Irving and Golden Spur are splendid for massing outdoors. Golden Spur, which is a native of the Netherlands, is probably the best of all the moderate-priced yellow trumpets. Emperor, with its deep primrose perianth and golden yellow trumpet, makes a noble flower and is of robust habit. Abscisbuy a few bulbs, even though it is somewhat dearer than the everyday sorts. In a few years it will become one of the most popular of forcing varieties and its flowers should prove of great value commercially. Peter Barr, now reduced to $1.25 per bulb, will some day be the leader in this class. It will remain as a fitting memorial to a man whose good for massing and spreading rapidly; Stella superba, over double the size of the older type, and Queen Bess, with a pure white perianth and much expanded light yellow cup. One or two of the double incomparabilis are worthy of culture, although double daffodils look coarse compared with single ones. The Orange Phoenix, "eggs and bacon," and Sulphur Phoenix, "codlins and cream," are both good for bouquets or vases.

Leedsii and Barri.

The Leedsii, or eucharis-flowered narcissi, are extremely chaste and beautiful. They are charming in flower beds and borders and are splendid for cutting. They naturalize finely in grass land, in which they may be likened to multitudes of silvery stars. These are not half enough grown. Their exquisite beauty far exceeds that of the trumpet section, while they increase rapidly under cultivation. Some of the best varieties are: Duchess de Brabant, Minnie Hume, Duchess of Westminster and Mrs. Langtry. The last named, with its broad white perianth and its large cup, which opens primrose and passes off white, is in my estimation one of the most beautiful of the whole daffodil family.

Narcissus Barri, while not a large class, contains one or two of the most popular daffodils grown. Conspicuous has a flower of great beauty and refinement. Its large, broad yellow perianth and broad, short cup, edged with bright orange-scarlet, added to its robust habit and extreme floriferousness, make it popular with everybody and a leader in the chalice cupped daffodils. Barri Flora Wilson also has a striking and beautiful flower.

Poet's Narcissi.

Narcissus Burbidgei, commonly known as the hybrid poet's narcissus, or dolly cup daffodil, differs from N. poeticus in the cup of the flower being generally a trifle longer and not so flat, and flowers us, a native of the French Pyrenees, does specially well naturalized in grass land with a little shade. Glory of Leiden is rather high in price as yet, but I consider it the finest of this section. It is not so tall a grower as Emperor, but has larger flowers, in which the trumpets stand more erect. Some bulbs this season carried five flowers each, which were four and a half to five inches in diameter.

In the white winged bicolor varieties, Empress is excellent. Its white perianth and rich yellow trumpet are of great substance. Horsfieldii, which is commonly substituted for Empress, is a cheaper and inferior variety, a very unsatisfactory one to buy. Mrs. Walter Ware is inexpensive and good, as is also J. B. M. Camm. Grandis, or Grandee, has a finely imbricated, pure white, massive perianth and is well worth growing. Victoria, introduced by Barr's, of London, in 1897, is now quite cheap. The creamy white perianth is of remarkable breadth and the rich golden trumpet is of splendid substance. It forces more readily than any other bicolor variety. Some complaints are made of its only throwing a single bloom per bulb, but many of ours produced three this season. Princeps I consider of little value, except, it may be, for naturalizing. The flower is altogether lacking in substance.

The White Trumpet Section.

The beautiful white trumpet section contains some gems. Moschatus, the "snowy white daffodil of Spain," is of rather dwarf habit, but does extremely well either in the border or in grass land. William Goldring, the "swan's neck daffodil," is a cheap and graceful variety. Mme. de Graaff has been given the title of "queen of white trumpets," and royally deserves it. Its chaste beauty and the graceful outline of the flowers, added to the fact that it increases rapidly outdoors, should tempt many to life has been spent in developing and popularizing the daffodil, but, of course, its price is prohibitive at present.

The Incomparabilis Sorts.

The incomparabilis, or star narcissi, are all of much beauty, even better than the trumpet section for bedding and massing, and in nearly every case increase rapidly under cultivation. A few good sorts are: Beauty, a bold and handsome flower; Princess Mary, with large and much expanded cup, suffused with orange; Guyther, with a large, broad yellow perianth and orange cup; Sir Watkin, "the giant Welsh daffodil," still one of the finest daffodils for all purposes, splendid for cutting; Stella, as a rule before N. poeticus ornatus. John Bain is one of the best of this class, effective for massing in borders. Falstaff and Agnes Barr are other good and inexpensive forms of this narcissus. Narcissus biflorus, the primrose peerless daffodil, is the latest of the whole family to flower. It carries two and occasionally more flowers to a stem, the flowers rather closely resembling those produced on the new N. poeticus hybrids, which are the results of intercrossing N. poeticus and the polyanthus narcissi. The latter have proved hardy in New England. They carry several flowers to a stem, which are white with golden yellow cups, usually edged with orange. The odor is delicious.

The true poet's daffodils are the most widely grown and popular of the narcissi, the old pheasant's eye still selling by the millions annually. Whether it be for the garden borders in masses or for naturalizing in woods or grass land, this is still the most popular variety. On the edge of streams or lakes it does especially well and spreads with surprising rapidity. Once planted in such a location, it will take care of itself and provide a floral feast which must be seen to be appreciated. Even in quite dry land it thrives well, of course preferring deeply dug and well manured ground, as do all the narcissi. The variety ornatus is a favorite for forcing and should be grown in quantity outdoors for cutting, flowering as it does two or three weeks ahead of poeticus. The variety grandiflorus has extra large blooms.

Some of the newer, and at present high priced, hybrids show immense advances over the old type, Cassandra, Marvel and The Bride being especially fine. The old double gardenia-scented narcissus, with snow-white flowers, needs planting deeply in a cool, rather moist soil, or the flower stalks will be mostly blind.

Culture and Future.

With the possible exception of the golden trumpet section, which usually run out in a year or two, nearly all narcissi improve under cultivation. For best results they should be lifted and replanted every third or fourth year and each fall given a coating of well decayed manure. While all will succeed in full sunshine, a little shade will help to prolong the flowering season.

Fine as are many of the varieties now being grown, a few years will see many of the beautiful hybrids raised by British and other hybridists at popular prices. When we can secure such magnificent golden trumpets as King Alfred and Van Waveren's Giant, bicolor trumpets like Weardale Perfection and Cygnets, white trumpets such as Peter Barr or Henri Vilmorin, and giant white Leedsii of the caliber of Maggie May and White Queen, we will note the marvelous advances being made in this beautiful hardy bulb, which for forcing, bedding, shrubbery massing and naturalizing has a boundless future before it.

W. N. CRAIG.

GLADIOLUS PRINCEPS.

In the REVIEW of July 4, page 11, a correspondent, after justly praising Gladiolus America, which is a good grower and has a fine spike of lavender-pink flowers of an acceptable shade for florists' miscellaneous work, says: "Gladiolus Princeps I cannot recommend as a florists' flower. While the blooms are big and showy, they are poor keepers and rarely over three are fresh on a spike at a time."

Your correspondent is evidently not familiar with the qualities of Princeps when properly grown. It is distinctly not a poor keeper when cut, unless the difficulty lies in the florist's keeping the spikes in his possession when displayed to customers. It will open to the last bud and always makes a brilliant and effective show. The only fair criticism that has ever been made of this variety as a cut flower is that owing to the great size of the buds and blooms it is not so easy to pack for shipment as are the little ones.

As the originator of Princeps I have witnessed its sale for the last ten years among the coast resorts of New Jersey, and find that it invariably outsells all other kinds, often realizing double the best prices of the choicest varieties. When others cannot be moved at all Princeps has always been, and now is, in demand. The bold, triumphant scarlet color and great size of the blooms never fail to please buyers. There have never been enough to meet the demand, and it is likely to be a long time before there will be as many as wanted. As to the small number of blooms open at the same time, the universal impression is that one or two Princeps flowers about equal a spikeful of other kinds, and as they come out in regular succession the effect is long maintained.

GERMAN AND JAPANESE IRISES.

We wish some one would tell us, through the REVIEW, the best, or a good time to divide and reset German and Japanese irises. E. Y. T.

These irises may each be successfully divided and replanted any time after they have done blooming. The work is usually done as late as October with fairly good results, but to give your plants the best possible chance I would prefer to plant some time during the month of August, choosing, if possible, a moist and cool spell for the operation. In setting out the German irises use care and do not bury the rhizomes too much or many shoots will rot off. Give the Japanese irises the moister and shadier location. The German varieties succeed well in quite dry places if the soil is deeply dug and well manured. Good drainage is, of course, essential to the successful culture of both classes.

ARISTOCRAT IN SUMMER.

The accompanying illustration will be of interest to the large number of carnation growers who have bought stock of Aristocrat, because it shows how good a producer this variety is right up to the date when replanting of the benches becomes necessary. The illustration is reproduced from a photograph made July 1 at the establishment of the Chicago Carnation Co., at Joliet, Ill. The plants in this house had been blooming continuously since early in the autumn of 1906 and at the time the photograph was taken carried a splendid crop of flowers on long, strong stems. Not only were the flowers of excellent size for hot weather, but what was especially noticeable is that the color is less affected by the hot weather than is the color of any other pink variety.

CARNATION NOTES.—WEST.

Effects of Rain.

During the last ten days we have had an excessive amount of rain, which has thoroughly saturated the soil in the field and the carnations are showing the effects of it in a rapid growth. It is fortunate that it came at this time and not a month later, when we will be lifting the plants for benching. If you have beds ready and intended planting now, you would better put it off a few days to let the plants check up a little and get into proper condition. If lifted while in this soft condition, wilting will be severe and nothing will be gained in time, and quite a loss of plants is liable to occur. As I have said before, the date of planting does not count for so much as having the proper conditions.

Be Ready for Planting.

Your preparations for planting need not cease, however; in fact, they should proceed as rapidly as possible, so that when the proper conditions do come you can hurry all your plants in while they last. It will do no harm for the soil to remain on the benches unplanted a few weeks, but if you use raised tables do not leave the boards exposed to the hot sun any length of time. Get the soil back on them as soon as you can.

New Benches.

If you are having to put in new benches this season, get it done at once. Such jobs invariably require more time than one counts on and they usually throw one late with the planting. Let me urge you to put in at least a small bed, such as we are using exclusively now, and which I have described in my notes a number of times. I think the chances are that you will like them so well that the first one will be followed by more of them. If you do not like them, not much will be lost, either in work or returns from the stock. There ought to be no loss from the latter source. If you construct one of these beds, do not stick it up in a corner or in a place where you were never able to grow good stock, but give it a good location, so the trial will be a fair one.

This year we are making some experiments with tile in connection with the cinders, and will watch the results with interest. We do not expect a great deal, if any, improvement, but if improvement is possible we want it. A small improvement in quality or increase in quantity will justify putting them in.

CARNATIONS IN SOLID BEDS.

Would carnations do well planted in beds with the sides raised six or eight inches; that is, with 6-inch or 8-inch plank for sides, placed on the ground floor of the greenhouse and filled with good soil? My floor ground is sandy land. The heating pipes are overhead and on the sides of the house. Does anyone plant that way?

D. H. J.

There is no reason why your carnations should not do quite well if planted as you suggest. The main thing to provide for will be perfect drainage, and if your floor soil is a sandy loam, no fear need be entertained along that line. We have planted carnations in the level ground in beds, with the regulation walks between, and built houses over them in the fall, and with splendid success. This year we put in our raised semi-solid beds first and have planted on them, and will erect our house over them this fall. This seems a better plan to us than the other in some ways, but watering must be done artificially with the hose, as the beds will dry out more quickly. A bed raised twelve to fifteen inches is so much easier to work that I think it pays well for the cost of construction. The plants along the edge are less liable to be broken and rubbed against, too, and in fact there are many little advantages over the level ground method.

We use a 12-inch pecky cypress board for the sides and fill all but the upper four inches with cinders. This gives us splendid drainage, as our soil is sandy and allows the water to sink away readily. We prefer to use the cinders and ashes from our own boilers, as they are less liable to contain an excessive amount of sulphur than are the railroad cinders. A season's accumulation of these will go a long way toward fitting up your place with these beds.

TEMPERATURES.

What temperature suits White Perfection, Rose-pink Enchantress and Victory carnation plants best?

E. G.

We have had but one season's experience with White Perfection and Victory and can not say positively, to a degree, the best temperature for them. Our observations of last winter lead us to the belief that White Perfection likes 52 degrees about as well as any. If grown warmer the stem is apt to come a trifle weak for the large flower, and if it is grown too cool it will burst slightly. So a happy medium, run as evenly as possible, would seem the proper thing for it. Victory is best during warm weather, and as it has a splendid, strong stem, I would not hesitate to give it 52 degrees, with a tendency upward rather than downward. During the short, cold days of midwinter the color comes less brilliant than it does in the fall and spring. Rose-pink Enchantress wants the same temperature as the original, 50 degrees. These two varieties will give a few more blooms in a higher temperature, but the blooms will come soft and the stems will lack in strength. When grown properly they will grade as fancies and it pays to grow them just as fancy as possible.

Cinerarias.

The present is a good time to make a sowing of cinerarias. There are now some fine strains in existence and well grown plants are always salable. The large-flowered type is the more popular with commercial growers, being of dwarfer habit than C. stellata, which, however, is much more graceful and decorative. The flowers are much smaller, but are well adapted for cutting, for which purpose the large-flowered varieties are hardly desirable. Seed should be sown in a coldframe, or in a north house, in a compost of leaf-mold and fine sand. The seed needs light covering and, after watering, should be covered with a sheet of glass and paper to prevent evaporation, removing these coverings when the seedlings appear. Use great care in watering, as the little seedlings will damp off quickly if overwatered in the hot summer months. Cinerarias delight in cool culture and will not make rapid growth until we get cool nights in September. Seed may be sown as late as the first part of September and nice plants had for late spring blooming.

Lorraine Begonias.

The little plants of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine do not grow fast during the hot weather, but they make up for this when the cool nights set in. Do not allow them to become potbound. If your plants are small, you can put two or three together in 6-inch pans. These will make nice stock for Christmas. The compost should be light but moderately rich and fairly sandy and porous. Do not press the soil too firmly about the roots. We have seen men who rammed the soil about them as they would for hard-wooded plants. This is all wrong and these begonias will quickly resent it. If you have no suitable greenhouse bench, you can grow the plants well until the middle of September in a cold-frame. The glass will need a coating of whitewash, but it should be rather thin, just enough to break the sun's rays.

You can still root cuttings, if procurable. These will make neat little plants in 4-inch pots, or, if kept over, will make splendid specimens another year. Keep all flowers picked off and pinch the tops from the flowering shoots.

Show Pelargoniums.

Probably your show pelargoniums have finished blooming for this season and can be stood outdoors and gradually kept drier at the root. Do not withhold water too suddenly, however, or the plants may suffer. If you need any young stock, take off a quantity of young tops and root them now. Time was when these beautiful pelargoniums were exceedingly popular. There are now much finer varieties than a decade ago, and we predict increased calls for them in coming years. Their ease of culture, gorgeous flowers and persistent blooming qualities should commend them to all purchasers of pot plants. While they are not suitable for bedding purposes, they will flower for many weeks in a cool greenhouse, dwelling house or on a shaded piazza.

A few good sorts to grow are: Crimson King, Mme. Thibaut, Mrs. Sandiford, Captain Raikes, Nellie Hayes, J. W. Hayes and J. Douglas.

As they lose their foliage and the wood becomes harder, lay the plants on their sides and withhold water altogether for two or three weeks, then prune back quite hard, shake out and repot in smaller sized pots.

Primulas.

Primulas should now be making excellent growth and will need attention before they become potbound. P. obconica is more vigorous in habit than P. Sinensis and should be shifted successively from 2½-inch to 4-inch and later to 6-inch pots, the latter being a convenient flowering size, but if larger plants are in demand and a fair price can be had for them, give them 8-inch pots. A cool frame or the side bench in a north house will suit primulas during the summer. The advantage in growing them in frames is that a better circulation of air is possible and, by removing the sashes on cloudy days and at night, the plants become much stockier. Use care in watering. The Chinese primulas quickly resent soggy soil at the root, while lack of water will speedily finish either class. Late sowings should now be ready for potting off. Keep them shaded, carefully watered, lightly sprayed over on warm evenings, and they will make serviceable plants before winter.

Myosotis.

Forget-me-nots or myosotis are among the most popular spring flowering plants for florists to handle. Seed of any of the hardy forms may be sown now, either in a cool house or frame, and transplanted to the open ground when large enough to handle. M. palustris semperflorens is a first-class hardy variety, growing eight inches high. The flowers are blue, with a yellow eye. As there is a possibility of the plants winter-killing in some sections, the young stock should either be given some winter protection or, better still, placed in cold-frames, in which they will flower and make excellent selling stock in early spring.

Pansies.

Pansies are an important crop with many growers. A number of splendid strains are now offered, including some of those of American growers. The seed would be better not sown until the end of the month or during the first half of August. If placed in the ground now the plants become too big before autumn. The same applies to the sowings of the tufted pansies (Viola cornuta and its forms), in some respects far superior to pansies, flowering much more profusely and over a longer period, well worthy increased attention from commercial growers.

Sow antirrhinums now if you want nice plants to bench to follow chrysanthemums. Mignonette can be sown in a cold house in deep benches or solid beds about the end of the month. Seeds of any biennials or perennials can still be sown. Those from earlier sowings must be pricked out on cool, showery days.

Propagating.

Summer is not usually chosen as a time for doing much propagating, but there is no need of the cutting benches being entirely untenanted even now. Good batches of antirrhinums put in now will prove useful if benched to follow mums. We have spoken of show pelargoniums, which can also go in now. Crassula hybrida, pink, and C. coccinea, scarlet, root quickly now. If you have any nice marguerite cuttings, put them in, also a good lot of hydrangeas. These latter will make nice little stock for next Memorial day. Any of the colored-leaved, warm-house plants, like crotons and dracenas, root with ease now, as will pandanus and ficus. If you are short of genistas put in some cuttings now. Allamandas from soft cuttings, bougainvilleas, gardenias and clerodendrons can all be rooted without trouble. At this warm season cuttings need more frequent waterings and spraying overhead. Given attention in these matters, and shade, no trouble will be experienced in rooting all of the plants named.

Brief Reminders.

Pot Lilium Harrisii as soon as you receive them, single bulbs in 5-inch pots and small ones three in a 6-inch pot. Do not fill the pots too full; leave room for a top dressing. Place on a cellar floor after potting and give a good soaking of water, then keep drier until the shoots appear.

Keep the sweet peas picked clean and do not allow seed pods to form or they will speedily spoil your chances of flowers. Pull weeds away from the plants.

You will be busy preparing to plant carnations. Have you the compost all ready for the benches? If not, mix it without delay, adding a little fine bone to it.

You will soon be finished planting mums, but disbudding, tying and weeding will furnish constant work for some weeks. Use a force pump with a fine spray nozzle and shower plants with nicotine extract once a week to keep aphids in check. Fumigate lightly on warm nights.

It is rather too early to sow cyclamens yet. Order seeds and watch these columns for cultural directions later.

Keep the hoe constantly at work and where rank weeds have secured a foothold among young seedlings, hand weeding will be necessary. Do not leave the weeds in piles through the field, as is often done. Have an eye to neatness and either bury them in some low ground or cart to the nearest dump.

Do not forget any repairs to heaters, piping and benches and now is the time to have glazing and painting attended to.

What about your coal supply? If you have not bought your stock for the coming season do so at once, while prices are down, and get all you can in your cellars.

Cut down digitalis, delphiniums and other perennials as flowers fade. Many will give a good second crop of spikes in September.

In the pressure of other duties do not allow the strings of smilax and Asparagus plumosus to become entangled.

Have you ordered your coal supply for next winter? Have a good supply hauled now, while the weather is genial.

Cuttings of California and other privets will now root readily in an ordinary propagating bench. Keep moist at the root and shade from all direct sunlight.

Reduce the number of shoots on dahlias, which may be producing a number.

Cut away seeds from iris, peonies, poppies, columbines and other perennials as they appear.

THE RETAIL

FLORIST.....

KEEPING CUT FLOWERS.

M. Mercier, a florist at Dijon, France, has been making a series of experiments to determine the conditions under which cut flowers keep best and is reported to have had the most satisfactory results when "the flowers were placed in an ice-box, but at some distance from the ice, and kept at a temperature of 36 degrees, with the air showing 90 degrees of moisture. In a cold cellar, with a temperature of 41 degrees, and 60 degrees of moisture, the results were bad."

In a general way M. Mercier's experiments are said to prove that keeping flowers fresh necessitates high humidity, but not enough to cause actual wetness—a temperature just above freezing, and darkness. The flowers keep better if the leaves be removed. This refrigeration deprives the flowers of their perfume, which, however, returns in full strength after a few hours in normal temperature, and the flowers last well after being removed from the refrigerator.

RETAIL WINDOWS.

It is often possible to turn local conditions to good account in a window display and most florists are quick to take advantage of an "old home week," a horse or automobile show to vary their displays. Washington is always a seething caldron politically, as doubtless the whole country will be next year at this date, so anything of political suggestiveness is always seasonable in Washington, where Gude & Bro. Co. has a window with an old mill and lily pond, possibly a little more elaborate than similar scenes contrived by many florists for summer windows. The water-wheel moves and gold-fish and turtles swim in the pool, but the ingenious feature is taking advantage of the political excitement by labeling the turtles.

One is marked "Teddy," another "Taft." These are quite large turtles, of the skilpot, or red-belly, family of terrapin, with pretty colorings. By watching for a while the observer will see emerge from some dark nook a little skilpot, whose back is about the diameter of a silver dollar. He is labeled "Fairbanks." By closer scrutiny a still smaller skilpot, a wee baby of a thing, whose hard shell is not larger than a silver half-dollar, will be discovered disconsolately surveying the great ones moving about him. He is generally peeping from behind a rock. He is labeled "Bryan." Still another skilpot, about the size of "Bryan," is labeled "Hearst."

"The movements of these turtles arouse the imagination of the observer," says a Washington daily paper that gives the window a column write-up. "There is one big turtle, a vicious old snapper, that bears no name. Some say he should represent Col. Henry Watter-son's dark horse, while others insist he should be labeled 'Uncle Joe,' while Pennsylvanians just now think he should be named 'Knox.' The skilpots don't disturb the snapping turtle much. In the course of half an hour none was seen to approach him except 'Teddy.' In that he showed the fearlessness of his human namesake.

"The antics of 'Fairbanks' are amusing. He was seen to swim toward a large rock on the top of which was another little skilpot just about his size. In fact, they looked to be twins, but the other was not branded. 'Fairbanks' crawled up on top alongside his twin brother. In an instant he stuck out one arm and laid it on what would correspond to the shoulder of the other. Simultaneously their necks bent sinuously toward a lily pad, from beneath which the head of one of the larger terrapin protruded. Presently the hidden reptile moved just enough to expose the letter Y, and it was seen they were looking almost wistfully at 'Teddy.' 'Fairbanks' presently released his little friend from the loving embrace and tumbled into the water, swimming out of sight.

"Back to the water wagon for Charlie," remarked a red-faced man who had joined the group of curious persons in front of the window."

ENGLISH RETAILERS' TROUBLES.

In Boston and a few New England towns, and occasionally in some city farther west, the enforcement of the old-time "blue laws" causes some inconvenience to retail florists, but as a general thing our laws, national, state or municipal, do not interfere with any man's liberty to do as he pleases in the matter of keeping his store open just as long as he may see fit. In fact, the long hours required in retail flower stores are recognized as one of the reasons for wages averaging higher than they do for clerks in other kinds of retail stores.

But in England the retailers not only have the troubles which come to all florists, but they find the hours of service prescribed by the newly enacted Factory Act, which expressly stipulates that "no female assistant to a florist may work between 4 o'clock on Saturday and Monday morning."

As though it were not bad enough to class retail flower stores as factories (we have been taught to call florist designers, "artists," and the shops would, therefore, be "studios"), the law promises to lead to something like a revolution in the trade, unless special arrangements can be made with the Home Office for meeting the demands which such a business entails. By far the greater number of florists' employees are ladies. While foreigners are brought up with a practical knowledge of flower arrangements, few English boys have the inclination—it may be that they have not the natural gifts—to become expert in the business.

"It is essential," a West End, London, florist pointed out, "that our young ladies should be available at the time when the greatest pressure of trade comes, and undoubtedly the call for floral decorations on Saturdays and Sundays has grown enormously of recent years. How are we to deal with the demand for table decorations, theater bouquets, sudden funeral orders, and the various other matters that crop up during the week-end if we are not to be permitted to employ our young ladies at late hours on Saturday?"

Many of the young women employed in the flower stores appear to appreciate the position of the florists, and petitions for a reconsideration of the case by the Home Secretary are being signed rapidly.

THE WORK OF LARVAE.

The soil in my rose benches, planted three weeks ago, is full of small grub-worms that came from the cow manure. They are small, but plentiful. Is there any way of destroying them? Will soot or lime water be of any help, or would these be injurious to the roses? T. N.

Grub or maggot is the name by which an insect is described when in the state between the egg and the chrysalis form. This term is usually applied to the larvæ of flies and beetles; the larvæ of butterflies and moths are usually designated as caterpillars.

Grubs are not all plant destroyers. In the economy of nature the great majority of larvæ are actually essential to the complete decomposition of manures, and without proper identification it would be folly to destroy them. Their action on manures encourages decomposition, releasing the elements necessary to plant life and converting them into a form easily assimilable.

Some grubs, however, are noxious and should be destroyed as soon as their presence is detected. These, fortunately, are few as compared with the larvæ which are doing the good work designed for them by nature.

It should not be overlooked that the special province of the larvæ of insects is to act as scavengers, and very frequently they are not the initial cause of damage, which is rather to be sought in a previously unhealthy condition of the plant. They simply step in to complete the work of destruction commenced by disease or by a low state of the vital functions.

RIBES.

TREATMENT IN HOT WEATHER

Watering and Syringing.

During such hot weather as we have been having lately, stock will require copious supplies of water to keep it moving, and also frequent syringing to keep spider in check. Newly planted stock should be carefully looked after in this respect, as the wood and foliage, being so soft, suffers severely if allowed to become dry or become infested with spider.

Because of the large quantity of water necessary, the soil in the benches will require frequent stirring to keep the surface open and in good condition, so that evaporation may be perfect and avoid sourness.

Care of Grafted Stock.

Where grafted stock has been planted it should be closely examined at least once a week, to see that the tying material is not getting embedded in the bark and that all suckers may be removed.

When this class of stock is planted it ought to be staked and tied up at once, so that no injury may happen to the scion by syringing or when other operations are being carried on, such as cultivating, etc.

Staking and Training.

Staking and training will occupy a lot of time, but if success is wished for, it must be attended to before the plants have time to make much wood, so that no injury may happen to it from wires that are dragged over it while being stretched.

In order to have good, hardy foliage, that will have substance to withstand mildew and be less easily chewed up by insect enemies, the young plants should have all the air possible, both by night and day.

In the earlier planted houses disbudding should be looked to and the bushes given shape by carefully tying and training previous to a first cut.

In most houses there are some defective panes of glass, causing burning spots; these should be located and the specks in the glass touched with boiled oil, which will obliterate the burning without causing an unsightly blotch on the glass.

The busy season being practically over, there may be time for a little cleaning up, which will certainly give the houses a tidier appearance, besides being conducive to health of the stock.

RIBES.

SEASONABLE DETAILS.

Supports.

The plants should be staked before they have a chance to get crooked in the stem from lying around over the bench. There are several ways to accomplish this, my own way being to use wire stakes from three to five feet in height. These, if not long enough in any case, can easily be lengthened by slipping a piece of bamboo over the top of the stake—capping it, in other words.

The wire stakes are supported by being tied to wires stretched along, one for each row, and if the wires are made tight and the supports properly braced it makes a neat job.

Some florists use string tied to two wires, one overhead and one low down, for each row. This works well enough for late dwarf stock or where one is running several shoots to a plant, but for exhibition stock, where the stem must be perfectly straight, give me the wire stakes. They cost a little, but with care are practically everlasting and repay their original cost many times over.

Exhibition Plants.

Exhibition plants, if not yet potted into their last pots, should be attended to at once. Remember that a plant finished in a 10-inch pot shows a higher degree of cultural skill than does the same size plant in a 12-inch pot. The question of drainage has not figured so much in earlier potting, but it should this time, because the plants will have to remain nearly five months in this pot. Use broken pots for drainage, with some charcoal; then, with a layer of sod on top before the soil is put in, there is little chance for the plant to get waterlogged unless worms are very numerous in the soil. The ingredients for the last potting need not differ much from earlier soil. If one has lots of rotted cow manure it may be used more freely this time in the soil, say a proportion of two of soil to one of manure. Make the soil firm by ramming and leave room on top for a mulching later on.

EXHIBITION AT NEWPORT, R. I.

A Splendid Success.

The rose show of the Newport Horticultural Society July 9 and 10 was from every point of view one of the most successful ever held by the society. The lateness of the season caused the committee to postpone the show from the last week in June to the above date, and it was feared by many, after the warm weather began to show its effect, that this postponement would impair the success of the exhibition; but the display proved that the committee hit it just right.

Although the exhibition held at this Gloxinias and tuberous begonias were well shown, better, in fact, both as regards numbers and quality, than I have ever seen them shown here. The begonias in one or two exhibits were grown to such perfection that many society visitors were fairly carried away with them. Paul Volquardson was first and John F. Allan second. Mr. Volquardson also was first in the class for gloxinias and James Robertson second. First prizes for specimen palms were awarded to Colin Robertson for fine specimens of large size. Phoenix Roebelenii was exhibited in many classes but not of a size large enough to compare with the huge specimens of other kinds. F. L. Zeigler was third in one class with a fairly good shown better than I have ever before seen them. The keenest competition was in the class for prizes offered by S. G. Harris, of Tarrytown, for the best collection of cut roses. James Robertson, gardener for Mrs. Richardson, was first with a grand display of perfect blooms of about sixty-five varieties. Conspicuous in this display was a large vase of Frau Karl Druschki. Hugh Williamson, gardener for William Waldorf Astor, was second and Alexander Adam, gardener for Alfred G. Vanderbilt, third.

In the class for the best display of roses arranged effectively, Colin Robertson was first, John Marshall second. In nearly all the other classes for roses honors were about even between Colin and James Robertson. There was nothing in white to equal Frau Karl Druschki. Mrs. John Laing ran hard upon Mme. Gabriel Luizet for pink.

F. L. Zeigler was first in the class for fancy baskets of roses, with a gorgeous creation of red ribbon and Jacqueminot roses. John Marshall was second. In the class for assistants' baskets, Miss Agnes Allan, of Gibson Bros., was first and Harry G. Christian, from the same store, second. Wm. Tricker was third.

Fruit was only fair in quality and small in quantity.

Henry A. Dreer, of Philadelphia, had John S. Hay on hand with an exhibit which was composed of Lobelia Kathleen Mallard, Nephrolepis Todeaoides and N. Amerpohlii. Both these varieties of nephrolepis are distinct in character from the other improved varieties of this fern and both seem to have points of superiority also. Lobelia Kathleen Mallard is a distinct novelty, quite double in flower, of a good blue color, in plants of sturdy, compact form. A certificate of merit was awarded Dreer for each. The lobelia referred to was also shown in the exhibit of Julius Roehrs Co. in plants of larger size. Lager & Hurrell showed a fine collection of orchids.

Julius Roehrs Co., of Rutherford, N. J., exhibited a fine collection of stove and foliage plants. This firm makes a specialty of crotons and there seem to be a few new ones in every exhibit it makes. This time there were several strikingly beautiful new ones, among them being Louis Drops, Souvenir de Laekens and Brilliance. In this exhibit there were two plants of Cattleya Gaskelliana in 8-inch pans with fifteen to eighteen flowers each. This firm was awarded a liberal gratuity for the exhibit as a whole and a certificate of merit for Lobelia Kathleen Mallard.

time of the year always is termed a rose show, it is far from being that exclusively, and this year full advantage was taken by exhibitors of the comprehensiveness of the schedule and the liberal premiums offered. The class for groups of palms, ferns and foliage plants was keenly contested by Colin Robertson and James Boyd, but the gorgeous crotons and dracaenas gave the former a decided advantage. This exhibitor's group showed more graceful arrangement, made easy by the numerous specimen plants of Areca lutescens, whereas Mr. Boyd used kentias exclusively, with results which again demonstrated their unfitness for effective grouping when light, graceful effects are taken into consideration.

In the class for groups of palms, ferns and flowering plants Colin Robertson was again a winner, with a beautiful group composed mainly of arecas, anthuriums and gloxinias, with a few adiantums and Nephrolepis Whitmani.

In the plant classes by far the greatest interest and competition was in that for table of decorative foliage plants. There were four entries, with good plants in all of them. David McIntosh took first with an exhibit in which dracaenas predominated, with D. Lord Wolsey of good color showing up effectively. John Marshall took second in this class and James Boyd third.

In the class for dracaenas David McIntosh was again first, with Charles D. Stark a close second and James Boyd third.

The first for crotons went easily to Colin Robertson for as fine a lot of plants as was ever seen here. David McIntosh was second.

In orchids Charles D. Stark had a walk-over with a nice lot of plants, Cattleya gigas mostly.

specimen of this palm. One and perhaps the only trouble connected with this palm is that it is usually seen in a pot apparently too large.

In the class for which premiums were offered by Henry A. Dreer for three decorative foliage plants in 6-inch pots David McIntosh was first with a plant each of Croton Faciatus, Pandanus Sanderi and Dracaena Lord Wolsey. Charles D. Stark was second. Mr. Stark took first for a basket of foliage plants, which consisted mainly of caladiums and fittonias.

As evidence of what Nephrolepis Whitmani is capable of, it will be of interest to know that one plant in a shallow pan was awarded first prize in the class for made up fern dishes, where Adiantum Farleyense was admissible.

This was a rose show and roses were

WHALE OIL SOAP.

What is the best way to prepare whale oil soap, for spraying? A READER.

To prepare whale oil soap for spraying purposes, take one pound of the soap and slice it into shavings; add one gallon of water and boil until it is dissolved, stirring briskly. From ten to twenty gallons of water can then be added, or according to the strength desired.

BACTERIOSIS OF GERANIUMS.

In the annual report of the Massachusetts Agricultural College, George E. Stone writes as follows:

"In a previous publication of this station (tenth annual report, Hatch Experiment Station) a short note was made of a bacterial disease of geraniums occurring in this state. Since that time we have made yearly observations on the prevalence of this disease in various sections. It has appeared every year since it was first noted here in 1898, and has also been reported from various other sections of the United States within recent years.

"Our observations have shown that it has frequently been abundant and generally distributed, so much so at times that gardeners have been more or less concerned about it. We have also noticed this disease in greenhouses each year, it having apparently been brought in with outdoor stock, although it does not appear to be serious under glass. Our observations have shown that the trouble is more frequently found on plants exposed to bright sunshine than on those growing in shade, and is evidently more severe farther south, where the light is more intense than in Massachusetts. Geraniums require comparatively little light for their best development, and a strong light may favor the development of this disease.

"The disease affects the leaves, causing spots to appear on them. The spots are often numerous and sometimes coalesce, which causes the diseased portions to dry up and turn brown. The spots are about one-eighth of an inch in diameter, and resemble blisters. No other portion of the plant is affected. Examination of a large number of diseased sections shows only a few bacteria present in the tissues except in those cells bordering on the outer portions of the spots.

"The geranium is a very hardy plant, and one of the freest from disease. No attempt has been made to treat this disease, to our knowledge, and should it become more troublesome some remedy for it will have to be discovered."

THE READERS' CORNER.

Thrips in the South.

We hear of more thrips in the south every year, and this year the pest is causing us a great deal of trouble. We use compost from the cow lot, and in the soil heap we find an abundance of thrips, which we are unable to get rid of except by sterilizing the soil. If anyone knows of any other remedy, we should like to be informed about it. We can keep it in check in the houses by a constant use of tobacco extracts. We think the thrips that we find in the soil is the same refined gentleman that saps the delicate petals of the flowers. Are we correct? Roses in the field have been almost a failure in this section on account of this pest. J. L. O'QUINN.

Making Flat Bunches.

In the REVIEW of June 27 I saw the picture illustrating how to hold and make flat bunches. Well, I wish to state that I find it much handier and a saving of time to use florists' wire. Start your bunch as you always do, and don't keep on winding, but lay a dozen or more carnations flat and fasten them with wire tied underneath. You will find that you have made your bunch in less time and also that you have made it more firmly and much more conveniently than if holding a spool of thread in your hand while doing the work. MRS. FRANK FLOTO.

VERBENAS.

With clean, healthy stocks to start with, there is little difficulty in growing verbenas, but like many other easily grown plants, they may be spoiled by a little neglect or injudicious treatment. Some seen in the market are grown singly, being stopped until they have formed bushy plants, but they may be got into flower earlier by growing five or six plants in each pot, and most of those that have been coming into the market this season have been treated in this manner.

I find some growers fail to keep verbenas well through the winter, says a writer in the Horticultural Advertiser. When I had to keep up a collection of named sorts, I grew late struck cuttings, potting them into large pots, and keeping all flowers cut off; and I have also propagated from cuttings in August, but the older plants are the most reliable. They may be left in the open as long as it is safe, and when they are taken in, a shelf up close to the glass in a cool house is the best position to keep them through the winter. I have seen many failures through giving too much warmth during the autumn. Put into warmth in January, they will soon give good cuttings, and once get a start plenty of stronger cuttings may be had from the top. With such vigorous growing sorts as Miss Willmott, propagating may be begun in December, but there is not much gained by being in too great a hurry. During the early stages young plants may be grown on in warmth, but for flowering they must have plenty of light and air; under shade the flowers fail to open. Soil is not of such great importance; good loam with a liberal addition of stable manure is what I have used, and as soon as the roots are round the pots it is almost impossible to be too liberal with liquid manure. The usual remedies for the prevention of mildew, greenfly, etc., must be applied. If the stock plants are kept well dusted with sulphur and lime, it will not be necessary to disfigure the plants that are growing on for flowering.

MYOSOTIS.

Will myosotis sown now in a greenhouse do to sell from pots or a frame in the spring? C. U.

Myosotis sown now, preferably in a coldframe, will give excellent plants by next spring's sales. If you have any old plants on hand, they can also be readily propagated from cuttings. Cover the seed lightly, water well and keep well shaded until the little plants are above ground, then gradually move them to full sun. M. palustris is an excellent hardy variety. C. W.

A NASTURTIIUM BORDER.

The accompanying illustration is reproduced from a photograph taken at the place of Weeks & Co., Sawtelle, near Los Angeles, Cal., and shows a novel use of the nasturtium. The chamærops is commonly used in that section for avenue planting. But the special feature is the border of nasturtiums, which has been this summer one of the finest displays imaginable and has attracted wide attention. Practically every person seeing it has been enthusiastic in praise of the effect and few have known that there were so many varieties of nasturtiums. The beds contain altogether, of both tall and dwarf sorts, some eighty different kinds, the flowers including almost every color found in nature, and the foliage also varies greatly in shades of green. So successful has this border been that there is demand for others like it in the neighborhood.

FORCING VALLEY.

Fresh Stock.

Growers with only a small amount of glass will be well advised to take up the culture of lily of the valley, and to use both the retarded crowns, a batch of which should be started into growth regularly each week of the year, and the fresh crowns, which can be forced from Christmas until the end of March.

As to cultivation, this is a matter needing very careful attention, coupled with a general knowledge of the usual methods employed. The crowns are received from abroad during November and can be forced into growth in order to bloom from Christmas to the end of March. These crowns can either be packed in damp moss and stored in a cold place, or they can be trenched in, without parting the bundles, in the open ground. Frost will not in any way injure the growth; in fact, some growers say it is necessary they should be subjected to frost before they can be forced to the best advantage.

They can be potted or boxed in quantities as required. The boxes should be made about five inches deep, and the crowns given about two inches space each way in planting. Any good, clean and sweet garden soil is suitable as a potting medium, if made freely porous by the addition of sand; and, if necessary, this soil can be used many times over, provided it is allowed to stand in a heap and turned over occasionally to sweeten before it is used again. Each time a little fresh soil may be added as occasion may require. Place the boxed crowns under glass in a dark place; under a bench is the usual situation, with a screen to keep out the light. The atmospheric temperature for the first two or three days should be of about 70 degrees, after which it may be kept at 90 degrees continuously.

As soon as the flower spikes and some foliage show themselves the plants can be placed on the bench, and the bench or space below be filled up with another batch of crowns, but at no time should they be exposed to much light. While they are growing on the bench they should still be grown in from 80 degrees to 90 degrees of heat, but when the flower spike is well expanded a lower temperature of about 60 degrees, or even less, will be suitable. If they are not hardened off in this manner they will not stand cutting so well and the spikes will not last so long, nor will they stand up so stiff and straight.

Retarded Pips.

The cultivation of retarded crowns is on many points different from that adopted for the fresh ones. The soil, type of boxes and the system of culture in the dark are the same, but in the matter of temperatures a great difference exists. Retarded crowns should not be grown in more than 60 degrees of atmospheric heat, and they should never be subjected to bottom heat. For retarded plants, heating by means of pipes running down the paths and not directly under the benches is the most suitable. The fault with this system is that it subjects the crowns to too much heat. Growers are apt to lose sight of the fact that retarded crowns do not require forcing, but rather checking in growth after they are taken from the ice. The buds are ready and impatient to grow in a normal temperature without artificial heat. If, when the crowns are received from the refrigerator, they are not thawed, this should be done gradually, and in summer an outside shed is the most suitable place.

After the crowns, fresh or retarded, are boxed and growing, they require during the whole period of forcing an abundance of water at the roots; the atmosphere of the house must be kept constantly damp, and the floors and pathways wet.—Gardeners' Chronicle.

CREDITS AND COLLECTIONS.

The paper of T. P. Langhans, published in the REVIEW of July 11, has again called attention to one of the greatest evils which besets the florists' business—that of lax credits and lack of system in collections. The house which draws the credit line the sharpest, and which insists on prompt payments wherever credit is extended, is not always the one with the largest business, but it is almost invariably the one which shows the best percentage of profits at the end of the year.

There are two factors which make for loose credits. One of these is increase in competition. A florist, either wholesale or retail, is reluctant to refuse a customer credit when he is almost certain that his competitor will extend such accommodation. Again, florists have been prosperous, and when prosperous they are willing to carry more money on the books than they otherwise would. Neither of these conditions should have any influence. In other lines of business the merchandise is considered as so much cash and much care is exercised in making credits and collections. For instance, the packing house of Swift & Co. employs forty-two people regularly in its Chicago general office in the mere making of credits and collections.

One by one the Chicago wholesale florists are learning that it is unwise to extend promiscuous and unlimited credit.

A couple of years ago they organized an association for the purpose of exchanging information as to the credit standing of buyers in the Chicago market, but as the management of the association was in the hands of those engaged in the trade it was not as successful as had been hoped. Upon the dissolution of the association the business was turned over to a commercial agency which makes a specialty of florists' credits. Now any wholesaler paying a small annual fee to the agency can call upon it at any time for information with regard to a customer who asks credit or whose account is running dangerously high. The result is a considerable saving to those who avail themselves of the facilities offered, and as time goes on the usefulness of the agency will increase.

In practically every city there is some commercial agency which may be employed in a similar manner.

MIGNONETTE FOR MARKET.

Please tell us how to grow mignonette for market. I intend to grow it on a side bench, eighteen inches from the glass. The bench is five inches deep.

C. U.

Mignonette for early flowering can be sown from July 25 to August 10. We would suggest August 1 as a good date. This will give you fine spikes by Christmas. This plant succeeds better in solid beds than benches, but can be successfully grown in five inches of soil. It prefers a rich and moderately heavy soil. Sow two or three together, a foot apart each way. Look out for green caterpillars, which are partial to mignonette foliage. Kill all the white butterflies you see in the house and if you see any leaves attacked, search for the worms at once. A night temperature of 40 degrees to 45 degrees, with a rise of a few degrees in the daytime, is suitable. Your bench is a trifle near the glass, but you should be able to get fair spikes from it. I hope no heating pipes are under the benches, mignonette preferring to be cool at the root. There are several fine forcing varieties offered by the various seedsmen.

C. W.

OXALIS BRASILIENSIS.

Whoever has, in a temperate or cold-house, or even in a box, a very sunny place, should not fail, says M. Herb, of Naples, Italy, to prepare in winter several pots with bulbs of Oxalis Brasiliensis. His reward will be a rich flowering during the months of April, May and June. The trefoil-leaves are of a nice, dark green, and the peduncles bear an umbel of six to eight magnificent purple-crimson flowers, growing up to seven inches in height. If the bulbs, which should be kept dry during the summer, are kept in the same pot for several years, they will form beautiful regular, compact-growing plants.

ing of the skilled tiller of the soil should be recognized as a profession, just as emphatically as the calling of lawyer, of doctor, of banker, merchant, or clerk."

It will interest retail florists, who use considerable quantities of tinfoil, to note that the government "trust busters" allege that the tobacco trust controls eighty per cent of the foil products of the United States. Foil has been steadily rising in price for some years and of late florists' foil has been supplied to jobbers with more or less reluctance. Possibly the government's action against the American Tobacco Co. may relieve this situation.

HE is the wise plantsman who gives prompt and courteous attention to the complaints which will occasionally arise in doing a shipping business. To neglect a complaint is to reduce the number of your customers by one. On the other hand, it is the duty of a dissatisfied buyer to make a gentlemanly request for the adjustment of differences. Because stock is not what you think it should be is no justification for writing a man things you would not be likely to care to say to him face to face.

A RETAIL florist who has lately given considerable attention to advertising in his neighborhood reports excellent results: "Why, where I used to close store at noon on Sunday, now I keep open till 9 o'clock at night!" If this is the result of advertising—and there is little doubt it is—we should certainly try some other kind.

GENERAL BUSINESS.

Speaking of general business conditions in Chicago and the middle west, R. G. Dun & Co. say in their weekly bulletin:

"Midsummer conditions are now entered into, but trade in the aggregate discloses less decline in activity than usual. The volume of distributive trade remains exceptionally wide, and the leading industries show no disposition to curtail production, the full employment of machinery and available workers being imperative to sustain prompt deliveries. Retail trade is of seasonable proportions."

Speaking for New York and the east, Dun & Co. say:

"There is not the customary complaint of midsummer dullness in general trade channels. Brisk retail trade is accompanied by more prompt collections, and many cities that were slow to respond to the better feeling now send satisfactory reports."

THE DEATH ROLL.

Ralph H. Glass.

Ralph H. Glass died in Savannah, Ga., July 8, after an illness of nearly two years. The funeral services were held the following day, at the home of his mother, Mrs. John H. Gould, 109 Thirty-eighth street, east. The interment was in Laurel Grove cemetery. Mr. Glass was a native of Savannah and was 31 years of age. He was formerly a member of the firm of Lenox & Glass. He is survived by his wife, one child, his mother and three sisters.

Sam Fine.

Sam Fine, 41 years old, of 6201 Olive street road, St. Louis, died at the City Hospital, in that city, July 8, as the result of a razor cut in the throat.

William M. Marugg.

William M. Marugg died at the home of his parents, at North Pomona, Cal., June 25. He was the youngest child of Simon and Julia Marugg, and was born at Menomonie, Wis., June 28, 1876. The family removed to Pomona in 1889. Besides his parents, the deceased is survived by one brother, Albert C. Marugg, of Watertown, S. D.; one sister, Mrs. Florence M. Welch, of Pomona, and one half-brother, Nathan C. Pedley, also of Pomona.

In spite of the fact that Mr. Marugg had suffered much from rheumatism and had been almost disabled by the disease during the last two or three years of his life, he had attended closely to business, making a specialty of the chrysanthemum and doing much to raise the standard of that plant on the Pacific coast. Last fall, while he was so ill and in such pain that he could scarcely move, he made an exhibit of chrysanthemums at the Los Angeles flower show that was one of the chief features of that exhibition. The business will be continued by his mother.

American Beauties

HEAVY CROP NOW ON

Our crop of Summer Beauties has been a regular and notable feature of the Chicago Market for the past three years. We are receiving the orders of a great many of the buyers of select stock—but we can take care of others. Especially strong on long-stemmed Beauties.

PEONIES

Our stock was cut and stored by the oldest and most experienced grower. It is in fine shape and the supply is large—you can count on us for any quantity, white or pink, for July decorations. The showiest flower for the money.

Kaiserins

Good crop of fancy Kaiserin, best summer rose. Also heavy cuts of other roses; quality as good as the market affords.

LILIES

Nice lots of both Longiflorum and Auratum Lilies—make a large showing for the money, as prices are low.

VALLEY

Choice valley always on hand; you can wire us any day in the year and be sure of getting any reasonable quantity by next train.

FERNS

Fancy ferns of finest quality; we pride ourselves on always having the best ferns and plenty. $1.00 per 1000.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Last week the market was decidedly quiet and this week there is only a slight improvement, the small increase in demand being credited to the fact that supplies are greatly reduced, not only in Chicago, but doubtless in every town in the shipping radius. Out of town buyers do not send large orders and in nearly every instance the call is for special quality, which would tend to indicate that at home the buyers have enough of the lower grades, but are short on quality. That is the condition in this market. There is an abundance of poor stock and hardly enough good stuff to go around, even though the demand is small.

It is the quite general report that business thus far in July has not been up to what it was last year. The exceptions are those houses which have special crops of summer flowers, especially roses. There is a varying report as to how peonies are going. Some wholesalers say they are selling well and are, in fact, practically the only readily salable item. Others say the demand hardly deserves that name and that prices are what the buyer chooses to pay. It probably is the fact that the good peonies sell and those which are coming out of cold storage in poor shape are not wanted at any price.

There is a fair demand for Beauties, largely from out of town, but in general the quality of the Beauties is not up to what it was last season, although this year there are more houses which have considerable supplies of what would be called good stock. Kaiserin sells well. So does Mrs. Field, Carnot and La Detroit. It is noteworthy that Killarney outsells Richmond. Several growers are now beginning to cut from their new stock of Killarney and it soon will be abundant in this market. It remains to be seen whether it will retain its special value. The wholesalers are inclined to the belief that it will be the best selling pink rose in the approaching season. It certainly holds its color well and ships well in hot weather. Chatenay is not wanted.

Lilies of all kinds are abundant and slow sale. Valley is hard to move. The glut of sweet peas continues. Nothing can be done with them. There is some increase in the quantity of asters received. Gladioli are abundant and slow sale. All green stock is plentiful.

Candidum Lilies.

One of the season's disappointments was the results with candidum lilies. The supplies have been somewhat larger than usual and the returns to the growers decidedly less than they ordinarily are. For some reason the lilies have not kept as they usually do. Many were in poor shape by the time they had made the boat trip from Michigan and few were salable after they had remained in the wholesalers' hands twenty-four hours. The result was that many were lost.

Cheap Fares to Chicago.

The out of town merchants visiting the Chicago markets this fall for the purpose of purchasing stock will be given a railroad rate based on a fare and a fifth for the round trip, which will make the rate a little over 3 cents a mile for the round trip. It will be a boon to the commercial interests of Chicago, as it will have the effect of greatly increasing the number of visitors to the local market and stop the tide toward the east, which is growing in volume because of the low rates to the Jamestown Exposition, all tickets reading via New York, going or coming.

Gladioli.

In one of his recent public addresses H. H. Groff, the gladiolus specialist, called attention to the fact that a few years ago florists had use for only light shades in gladioli, while now the demand has changed to the bright colors. This fact is well shown by the experience with the season's crop of bright red gladioli which Matt Mann has marketed through Zech & Mann. While the light colors were practically unsalable, the red stock, which, of course, was good, sold at $1.25 per dozen and it was necessary to place orders days ahead to get them. The crop is now practically at an end and the demand has slackened, but John Zech says that for two months prior to July 15 he did not have one spike left by noon.

Lake Forest Flower Show.

John Degnan, of the E. F. Winterson Co., was at Lake Forest July 13 to attend the first annual flower show of the Lake Forest Horticultural Society. He says the show was fine, both decorative effect and individual exhibits, which were all by gardeners on the private estates there, commercial exhibitors being barred. It was a society function, well attended. The judges were W. C. Egan, Edwin A. Kanst and W. N. Rudd.

Club Picnic.

There was a meeting of the picnic committee of the Florists' Club at the store of Poehlmann Bros. Co. Wednesday afternoon to complete details for the big picnic to be held at Morton Grove Sunday, July 21. Tickets are on sale in all the wholesale houses and a record crowd is expected. The official train leaves the Union depot on the St. Paul road at 9:30. There are other trains at 12:40, 2 p. m. and 3:15. Returning the train leaves Morton Grove at 7:05.

Various Notes.

Since John F. Kidwell announced that he would consider offers for the Kidwell Wentworth avenue establishment, a number of enterprising young men in the business have been figuring on how they could raise the money, for the stand is recognized as one of the best in the city and its occupant fairly sure of a prosperous business.

W. L. Kroeschell is spending a fortnight with his family at a Wisconsin lake. Fred Lautenschlager has come home from the road to attend to the greenhouse heating end of the business during his absence.

At Kennicott's Max Ringier is putting in spare moments wielding the paintbrush. He has started in to give the entire place two coats of light green.

W. J. Smyth has installed one of the latest cash registers, one of the kind that issues a check for each purchase, but as yet he offers no premiums for the redemption of the trading stamps.

P. J. Hauswirth is at Philadelphia this week with the Elks and assisting in preparations for the S. A. F. convention.

The A. L. Randall Co. reports a good demand for fertilizers, especially bone meal.

W. E. Lynch, at E. H. Hunt's, says that the use of the long distance telephone is becoming quite general for ordering cut flowers for shipment to nearby cities. Since the advance in telegraph charges, it often is cheaper to phone than to wire, especially if an answer is wanted, and all that is needed to largely increase the use of long distance phones is good service and a little advertising of the telephone's advantages.

The three Winandy brothers and some of their men are at East Liverpool, O., putting up four greenhouses for the Lake Newell Floral Co.

E. C. Amling reports having received one order this week for half a million bronze galax.

J. A. Budlong's principal cut at present is from his young Beauty plants, but P. C. Schupp says the crop will be much heavier in the course of a few days.

C. M. Dickinson and family left June 13 to spend three weeks at Pelican lake, in Wisconsin.

Klehm's Nurseries sent out a postal card notice to a large number of retail people, dated July 13, stating that the quantity of peonies in storage at that date was about 2,000 dozen and that they expected the supply to last no longer than ten days.

The Benthay-Coatsworth Co. reports July business as rather better than last year because they now are getting a cut from the young Beauties planted early in the spring.

Gus Alves, right hand man to N. J. Wietor, is on his annual vacation.

Miss Kate Rehm and her nieces, Florella and Nola Virgin, are guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. McKellar. They visited Milwaukee July 15. Miss Rehm is a sister of Mrs. Virgin. She states that Mr. and Mrs. Virgin will attend the convention at Philadelphia and probably pay their annual visit to Chicago on the way home.

the Flower Growers' Market for a month or so, consigning what little stock they cut to one of the other salesmen on the floor. This will enable John Sinner to put in his full time at the greenhouses during the busy season of rebuilding benches and replanting.

Louis Gresenz has bought the retail store of Mrs. A. Hertel, at 150 Clybourn avenue, and took possession Monday morning, July 15. Mr. Gresenz was with Bassett & Washburn for fourteen years, having continued with that firm when it succeeded J. B. Deamud & Co., who originally put him on the job. He is equipped to do well in the retail line.

Vaughan & Sperry say that they are holding back on their peonies in cold storage, believing that as the stock is in excellent shape, apparently in condition to keep indefinitely, peonies will be worth considerably more money during the latter part of the month, when practically all other peonies will be cleaned up.

John Poehlmann calls attention to the fact that the Killarney rose is outselling Richmond, although Richmond is cut with considerably longer stems. He has become one of the most enthusiastic of Killarney's friends. He says that Morton Grove, the pinker sport of Chatenay, is doing splendidly from a money standpoint. While it brings no higher prices than Bridesmaid, he says it produces at least six to one. They are just beginning to cut on their second crop of Kaiserin.

Bassett & Washburn are cutting some splendid auratum lilies from bulbs planted outdoors last November. There were 4,000 of these eleven to thirteen centimeter bulbs and they now are cutting stalks with from six to nine fine flowers each. Mr. Washburn says 2,000 more bulbs will be planted this fall.

Peter Reinberg has finished all replanting operations at the Summerdale place. The houses which are being rebuilt are nearly finished. They were not replanted, the roses in them being dried off for a second season. The carnations at the Summerdale place are considerably reduced in quantity to make room for another house of asparagus, one of Kate Moulton rose and increased plantings of Mrs. Field and Killarney. The rebuilding will be finished this week and then the new carnation range on the farm will be put up in short order.

GENTLEMEN:—We have now used the new show case which you installed for us about six months ago. We can say it is everything that you promised for it, and that is "perfection."

We don't know what else we could say except the first case which you built for us about seven years ago helped materially to our success. Your system is certainly ideal for keeping flowers.

The workmanship on this new case could not be better. We have had people say, "Why, that is more finely finished than our piano." Yours truly,

BUFFALO.

The Market.

Slow business seems to be the order of the day with all note writers, so we do not feel ashamed of our business at home. Naturally, with people away from home and everybody with garden flowers, we can expect only small trade. However, though trade is slow now, we all feel gratified with the large spring business, and a look around the city finds everybody cleaned out. A most welcome rain fell over Buffalo and vicinity last week, which made outdoor stock jump. Asters came with a rush and in a day or two we will have them on the market. Asters are always welcomed, to relieve us from small carnations and poor roses.

Various Notes.

Chas. Sandiford, private gardener for J. J. Albright, has grown indoor fruits and vegetables this year with great success. Grapes and cucumbers are the chief products. The grapes are too precious, but he does pass out a cucumber or two.

The latest recruit to the florists' ranks in Buffalo is Harvey Eckert. A few years ago he started selling vegetable plants and doing small planting jobs. By hard work, etc., he managed to build a greenhouse. He has steadily increased his trade and now he is doing a nice business. His latest move is a subscription to the REVIEW, so we all believe him to be on the right track.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The weather last week was uncomfortably warm and did not help business. There is little doing, except funeral work, and that is not plentiful.

There is still a scarcity of first-class stock in almost all lines. This has been the complaint for the last six weeks, especially regarding roses. Bride is small and Maid is away off color. Both are badly mildewed. Kaiserin, Ivory, Carnot and Killarney are among the best. Beauties are poor, although plenty of them are offered. Sweet peas have been a great glut, but are now letting up.

Carnations are small and poor in color. There seems to be plenty of them to go around, as the demand is not heavy for colored stock. Enchantress and any white sell fairly well. Gladioli sell, especially the lighter shades. A fair quantity of asters is coming in now and will soon take the place of sweet peas as a drug on the market. Other outdoor flowers are not selling any too well.

Club Meeting.

The St. Louis Florists' Club held an interesting meeting July 11. Twenty of the faithful braved the hot afternoon and were glad they came to listen to the interesting discussions that took place. President Irish opened the meeting promptly at 2:30 p. m., with all the officers present except Trustees Beyer and Weber, who were reported ill. Chairman Smith reported that everything was in readiness for the annual outing of the club for its members and friends, at Romona park, July 25, and that all members will be notified.

W. C. Young, state vice-president of the S. A. F., advised the members of his work regarding transportation for the annual S. A. F. convention next month. The club then voted to travel over the Pennsylvania railroad, leaving here Sunday, August 18, at noon and arriving in Philadelphia Monday at 3 p. m. in a special sleeper. This trip includes a trip to visit the Jamestown exposition. The fare for the round trip will be $25.

Adolph Brix was elected to membership by a full vote. The nomination of officers then took place. Those for president were William C. Young, John Connon and John Steidle; for vice-president, George Angermueller and Edwin Denker; for secretary, A. J. Bentzen was the only nominee. There was also only one nominee for treasurer, that being H. C. Irish. For a three-year trustee the nominees were Chas. Schoenle and G. H. Pring. The election will take place at the August meeting, when other nominations can be made. President Irish then invited the members to hold the meeting of August 8 at the Missouri Botanic Garden, at the request of the director, Wm. Trelease, and to bring the ladies with them. The invitation was accepted. The treasurer's report showed a healthy balance.

The question box contained a number of questions. The two which brought out the best discussions were on dahlia culture and on the Morehead trap and its workings. In these all the members took part, to the great satisfaction of those who asked the questions.

William Winter, at Kirkwood, is contemplating building two houses this summer. He has had great success this year with violets and carnations.

Charlie Schoenle and George Angermueller, in company with their wives, spent a few days last week at Chautauqua.

It's up to W. C. Smith to do the hard work for the florists' picnic, as Carl Beyer and Frank Weber are both laid up, each having a sprained foot.

G. H. Pring, who has charge of the Henry P. Richards and L. White, of the Chicago park commission, were in the city last week on an inspecting tour, in company with Park Commissioner Scanlon.

John J. Burke is taking things quite easy for the summer, having rented his place for two months, after which he will open again.

making the rounds of the trade. He is booming the S. A. F. convention and telling us what we will miss if we fail to attend.

Joseph Hauser, of Webster Grove, reports that he has been cutting a great crop of fine sweet peas this spring, but the price they bring hardly pays for picking them.

J. J. Nussbaumer, of San Angelo, Tex., who was here on a visit a few weeks ago, writes that he was badly hurt in a railroad wreck on returning home, but is on the road to recovery.

Mrs. Wm. Ellison, of the Ellison Floral Co., left last week to join her daughter, Mrs. Wordy, at Grand Rapids, Mich., where they will spend the summer months.

A. S. Halstead, of Belleville, Ill., was in town last Thursday, buying stock. He reports a big sale this spring of his new geranium, Sycamore.

were taken to Hackensack, N. J., where the funeral took place Tuesday, July 16. Mr. Berdau, who was at one time prominent in the affairs of the Florists' Club, has the sympathy of all who know him.

R. Brunz, of Pacific, Mo., a consignor of greens to this market, paid us a visit July 11 and attended the club meeting.

Fred C. Weber, Jr., spent the last two weeks of his vacation with friends at Denver, Col.

Charles Kuehn has been visiting some of the local baseball parks, viewing the games from the grand stand to get pointers on how to play short stop, as that is his position on the wholesale team.

Next Thursday, July 25, the florists' picnic will take place, at Romona park. This should not be overlooked by any florist in the city. All are invited, and if the day is fine the largest crowd that ever attended an outing is expected. There will be plenty to eat, drink and smoke on the grounds. A fine orchestra has been engaged for dancing, and games of all kinds, with prizes, have been arranged. It is to be hoped that all the members will lend a helping hand to make the day enjoyable to non-members and friends. J. J. B.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

The executive committee of the American Rose Society will hold a meeting at the Hotel Martinique, New York, July 24, to prepare a preliminary schedule for the coming exhibition in Chicago, 1908.

There are prizes already offered by W. A. Manda, Orange, N. J., and special prizes of $200 and $100 for plants in pots.

At this meeting a certificate for new varieties will be decided upon, also a certificate for life membership.

In some of the Hudson river towns the Crimson Ramblers have been used the last few years as piazza plants and the spread of this beautiful flower has, in some places, made a marked impression upon the people, showing the value of the rose as an outdoor decorative plant, which has scarcely been realized.

President Robert Simpson is planning for a European trip of some extent, to leave this country on the last of the month.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

It is a very young child indeed who does not know what the initials "B. P. O." surmounting an antlered head may mean. And if he should not know, he or she has only to gaze at the top of the North American building, where a real live elk may be seen majestically stalking. The colors of his kind are purple and white, and the demand, which has quickened a trifle, bears evidence of the popularity of these colors. Asters have made their appearance. Spanish iris and Lilium Harrisii further help to carry out effects in this color combination. It is July, however, and the quantity of bunting used is to the quantity of flowers as 999 is to 1.

A few choice Beauties and Maids from cooler climes may be seen in the wholesale market; also some fine Kaisers. There are a few carnations of excellent quality; Lady Bountiful and Queen appear to be the best whites. Mrs. Lawson and some scarlets are in good shape, while Mrs. Joost is the best pink. Enchantress is rather poor. Sweet peas are fine and plentiful. Cosmos has made its appearance. Candytuft is excellent. Indications point to increased shipments of asters.

Greens are not in demand. Dagger ferns and galax leaves have been good stock.

I may supplement this report by adding that Killarney and Chatenay, especially the former, are proving good warm weather roses.

The Riverton Nurseries.

The entrance to the Dreer place at Riverton is flanked on either side by handsome bay trees in tubs, standing behind immense specimen hydrangeas covered with pale blue flowers of good size. These hydrangeas have a rather curious history. They were placed in the frames last fall and when cold weather set in were covered with a miscellaneous lot of trash, some with clear glass, some shaded. The plants under the shaded glass were badly frozen, losing their points containing the flower buds. They were then removed, about the end of the year, to a cool house, and kept there throughout the winter. The plants grew, throwing up strong canes from the base, and, contrary to expectations, these canes all flowered this spring, the plants coming in full bloom rather late, just when needed for the seashore orders. Curiously enough, the entire batch of some 1,500 or 1,600 came blue, with the exception of perhaps a dozen plants. This was attributed to the swamp soil, containing possibly some alum or iron.

The kentia ranges were full of thrifty-looking plants. Evidently the buyers are of this opinion, for four or five whole houses of various sizes were set aside for their benefit, to be delivered in a few weeks, more or less. The benches of Cocos Weddelliana, described in this column some time since as being grown to specimens in 5-inch pots, have already been offered on the market. The fact that they are selling at this season shows the appreciation of the retailers. They still have that beautiful gloss, which I so much admired before, and are, of course, much larger.

Overhead blue has been mixed with the shading as an experiment, and has, so far, proved most successful. The temperature under this shading is found to be several degrees cooler than under the ordinary shade of, I think, benzine and white lead, so generally used. The houses devoted to Adiantum Farleyense and Cibotium Schiedeii have in their turn been treated to blue in their shade mixture, the object being to prevent the wilting and eventual blackening of the tender shoots, caused by a bright sunny day succeeding two or three cloudy ones. The plan has worked admirably; both adiantums and cibotiums have been free from burning since.

The house of Latania Borbonica, in nice growing condition, was a pretty sight, though this variety is pretty scarce at present. Phoenix Roebelenii has evidently strong claims on popularity, its grace being its first, its durability its second recommendation.

Nephrolepis Todeaoides is sufficiently well thought of to warrant its being grown in quantity, something like 3,000 plants being here or on the way. It is a pretty thing, considered less compact and more graceful than Whitmani. Piersoni, Elegantissima and Barrowsii have been discarded, Bostoniensis, Scottii, Whitmani, Todeaoides and Amerpohlii being the standard-bearers for the present season at least. Among the smaller ferns, a block of Pteris Wilsonii is being grown for offering in 6-inch azalea pans.

Plans are being made to erect an immense slat house, capable of holding all the araucarias on the place, before the convention. This will mean that something like 20,000 araucarias, mostly excelsa, will be in view at once, instead of being scattered about in four or five detached blocks.

The planting outside, both in the beds and in the frames, bears evidence of forethought for the visit of the members of the S. A. F. next August. A long frame filled entirely with cannas, a single row of four plants of each variety, correctly labeled, will be of especial interest next month. The plants are in fine condition, though only one, Beaute de Poitevine, strongly resembling President McKinley, is yet in bloom. Dahlias are planted in the same way, so the probability of their being in full flower by the end of August this late season is remote. The immense field of hardy phloxes, which was in full flower in the middle of July a year ago, is only showing bud now.

It would be impossible to give detailed description of these fields and frames, full of interest to every florist, both from lack of space and from lack of knowledge. A few notes of special interest will be attempted. One frame contains a beautiful lot of the new Lobelia Kathleen Mallard, sent out by Carter & Sons, of London, last year. It is dwarf, compact, and bears large double flowers of a beautiful shade of blue, in great profusion. Another novelty is Stokesia cyanea alba, a white sport of the well known blue variety so much prized for summer cutting. One firm of dealers in perennials had sufficient confidence in this white stokesia to order 1,000 plants.

The scarlet Lobelia cardinalis is grown for seed, the store requiring a surprisingly large quantity each season. At times, it is found impossible to secure enough seed in time from the European growers. The Dropmore variety of Anchusa Italica is worthy of special mention.

The entire place shows that, despite the late season and heavy business, both serious obstacles, the annual cleaning up, set for the Fourth of July, was accomplished this year as usual. There is no question that our convention visitors who come to Riverton next month will enjoy a treat well worth coming miles to see.

The Convention Program.

The meeting of the finance and executive committees, held July 11, proved extremely lively. That of the first named committee over, the executive took the floor, and reopened the question of Friday's entertainment. It was immediately apparent that the opponents of Wildwood had mustered their full strength, while the Wildwood majority of the week before were unprepared. Some changed their votes, many were away. A vote to reconsider was promptly passed, and after a lively debate, a vote to substitute Belmont Mansion in Fairmount park for Wildwood was passed 2 to 1. Unfortunately several of the most prominent members of the committee who had supported Wildwood, felt that they could not consistently work for Belmont Mansion, and therefore resigned their places. The program of entertainment as now made up is as follows: Tuesday, August 20, president's reception, 8 p. m.; Wednesday, August 21, excursion to Henry A. Dreer Co., Riverton, N. J., and shooting tournament at Wissanoming, both in the afternoon; Thursday, August 22, ladies' outing, Willow Grove, in the afternoon, and bowling tournament;

Friday, August 23, excursion to Belmont Mansion in Fairmount park. No effort will be spared to make these entertainments pleasant to our guests.

Various Notes.

The first of the visiting Elks to register at H. Bayersdorfer & Co.'s were Mr. Roll, of Durbin, N. C.; Mr. and Mrs. Galloway, of Toledo, Ohio; J. B. Schindler, New Orleans, La.; R. M. Giffer, New Orleans, La.; Mrs. A. Briel, Baltimore, Md.; John Bader, Allegheny, Pa.; J. Z. Heal, Beverly, N. J.; Fred Kramer, Washington, D. C.; Mr. Blind, of Blind Bros., Pittsburg, Pa. P. J. Hauswirth, of Chicago, came in with a large delegation on Monday evening. Lloyd G. Blick, of Norfolk, Va., when seen at Edward Reid's expressed his pleasure at the royal welcome given to his order by Philadelphia.

George S. Strohlein and family sailed July 11 on the Barbarossa for Europe. Mr. Strohlein will look over the azalea fields of Belgium, while Mrs. Strohlein is visiting her mother.

B. Eschner has purchased a handsome residence at Elkins Park, on the Philadelphia & Reading. This is one of the prettiest of our suburbs. Mr. Eschner, who has just moved his family to their new home, is much delighted with his surroundings.

The judges for the Craig competition of three plants of Nephrolepis Amerpohlil to be shown at the August meeting of the Florists' Club are Robert Kift, Edwin Lonsdale, George Redles, James T. Clark and W. H. Taplin.

M. Rice & Co. received fifty-nine cases of goods by the steamer Armenia a few days ago.

The 75-foot brick stack of the Henry A. Dreer Co., Riverton, N. J., was struck by lightning July 8. The stack was so badly wrecked that fifty feet of it will have to be taken down. A side of one of the adjoining greenhouse was shattered. Fortunately, no one was injured. This wrecking of a stack by lightning is almost unprecedented in the east.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. have their new chiffon case attractively filled. Chiffon mats are used on top when displaying the goods.

The Florex Gardens will practically complete the work of planting 4,500 American Beauties this week. The stock is in fine condition.

Charles W. Jennings is ill with typhoid fever in the Jewish hospital.

A. Farenwald, of Roslyn, has planted his rebuilt range with American Beauties and Killarney. His older range is devoted to 10,000 Richmond, some thousands of Liberty and a few experiments.

Herbert G. Tull, of the Henry A. Dreer Co., has chartered the steamer Columbia for the excursion of the S. A. F., August 21. The Columbia holds 3,000 people, which will make it absolutely safe. Should the delegation reach 1,500, or even 2,000, even the most timid need not feel that the boat is overcrowded.

Bowling.

The games to decide the places on the team to represent this city at the convention next month have been begun. The first series of three were rolled on the club alleys in Horticultural hall, the second in the Terminal alleys, Thirteenth and Filbert streets. Following are the scores:

The Florists' Manual

We note your advertisement in a recent number of the REVIEW of the second edition of Scott's Florists' Manual, and request that you enter our order for a copy of this valuable book. The writer is thoroughly acquainted with the first edition of this work, having often had occasion to use it for reference while a student at the Michigan Agricultural College. Please rush this order, for we feel, with Mark Twain, that we "would rather not use violence."

BEANS are reported doing well.

CORN is coming ahead rapidly under the influence of good growing weather.

THE Younkerman Seed Co., Omaha, is installing seed cleaning machines at a cost of about $2,000.

JOHN A. BOPP, florist at 46 North Center street, Cumberland, Md., is planning to go into the seed business with the season of 1908.

THE boat from Bermuda last week brought 107 cases of lily bulbs consigned to A. E. Outerbridge & Co., custom-house brokers and forwarders.

VISITED CHICAGO: A. E. McKenzie, of the A. E. McKenzie Co., Brandon, Man.; A. A. Berry, Clarinda, Ia.; J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.; C. F. Wood, of Wood, Stubbs & Co., Louisville, Ky.

THE Market Growers' Journal Co. expects to send out the first number of its paper August 7, 1907. This journal is for market gardeners and truckers and is to be published at Louisville, Ky.

THERE are no definite reports from the vine seed crops. It is, perhaps, rather early for this; still, usually by this time something has been said by growers, which indicates that things are somewhat behind.

SOME recent rains in the northern Michigan pea-growing sections have helped the crops considerably, but on the whole reports indicate that the crops are not up to the averages usual at this time of the year.

THE Michigan radish crop is very weedy. It is now beyond the cultivating stage, for the most part, so that the weeds now showing will have to continue to grow with the crop. This is a bad thing, as much of the seed will be lost on account of it.

EDWARD BERG, of Berg & Smalley, McPherson, Kan., has sold his interest to Carl J. Smalley and the firm will hereafter be known as Smalley & Co. Carl Smalley has traveled for the house for several years. Their business shows a steady annual growth.

ONION SET conditions at Chicago are about the same as reported last week. The weather of the week has been favorable and much hand weeding, which was badly needed, has been done. Nothing has occurred to change things materially and our crop estimate of last week is likely to hold good. There can nothing happen now to spoil the crop except rains at harvest time, which will be about two weeks later than usual.

REPORTS this week from the Wisconsin pea section state that crops look well but are exceedingly weedy, which, combined with the wet weather, is liable to cause a considerable rotting away. It is hoped that dry weather from now on will prevail, in which event the present outlook for a good crop may be realized. If, on the contrary, the wet weather continues, it is bound to work havoc with the peas and cut the crop a great deal.

REPORTS from California continue to show better prospects than were at first expected for the 1907 crop.

FRENCH bulbs are in the packers' hands and soon will be on the water. The report is of good crops and good quality. Prices are a trifle easier.

BEN G. RUSSELL, a farmer at Ord, Neb., who has become a director in the Henry Field Seed Co., plans shortly to remove to Shenandoah, Ia., and devote his time to the seed business.

A. CURRIE, JR., of Currie Bros. Co., Milwaukee, was in Chicago last week. He reports his house to be devoting much more attention than heretofore to the business to be done with florists, and well pleased with the results.

ALTHOUGH the pea canners are getting a good pack, possibly slightly larger than in 1906, it does not indicate a lessened demand for seed peas for 1908, as the market now is practically bare of canned peas, whereas a year ago considerable old stock was on hand.

13. In each case the firm of C. Keur & Son, Hillegom, Holland, sued for the collection of sums claimed to be due for bulbs. The defendants were Frank E. Bauers, of South Brooklyn; Emil Heidenblut, of Cleveland, and Henry Eickhoff, of Cleveland, and the sum involved in the three cases was $366.15. The florists offered evidence to the effect that the bulbs were received in bad shape, and the Holland firm offered in evidence their business terms as printed in their catalogue, from which they alleged defendants ordered. These terms provide:

"QUALITY. All the bulbs and plants, sent out by us, represent full value. We are in no way or in the least responsible for a more or less satisfactory flowering of the bulbs or plants supplied by us and accepted by the purchaser; the flowering generally being effected several months after receipt of them by the purchaser and depending on too many circumstances out of our control.

"RISK AND RESPONSIBILITY. All orders intrusted to us travel at the expense and risk of the purchaser, in other words, all bulbs and plants are sold and

BODDINGTON'S CHRISTMAS SWEET PEAS

BODDINGTON'S EXTRA EARLY CHRISTMAS WHITE SNOWBIRD.

An exceptionally early Sweet Pea for indoor flowering—will bloom six weeks after sowing. Color clear white, upon long stems; habit fairly dwarf, and of exceptionally free flowering qualities. Trade pkt., 50c; ¼ lb., $1.00; ½ lb., $1.50; lb., $2.50.

CANARY. Similar to the above, but flowers of an exceptionally good yellow. Trade pkt., 50c; ¼ lb., $1.00; ½ lb., $1.50; lb., $2.50.

FLAMINGO. Color scarlet; free flowering and early. As the crop of this variety was small, we can only send out packets this season for trial. Pkt., 25c; 5 pkts., $1.00.

BODDINGTON'S CHRISTMAS PINK. This is the earliest and most profitable and useful Sweet Pea in cultivation, as by sowing the seed under glass in latter part of August flowers can be cut from Thanksgiving on during the winter months. ¼ lb., 30c; ½ lb., 50c; lb., 75c.

BODDINGTON'S CHRISTMAS WHITE. A companion to Christmas Pink. Just as free and profuse a bloomer, and is, without doubt, the finest early white for indoor planting. ¼ lb., 30c; ½ lb., 50c; lb., 75c.

The justice gave judgment for the defendants, and attorneys for the plaintiff took an appeal to the Court of Common Pleas.

BELLINGHAM, WASH.

The Reveille, published at this place, says: "According to George Gibbs, the Clearbrook florist and Holland bulb grower, it has been demonstrated beyond any shade of doubt that bulbs can be grown here that will equal, and even excel, the famous gardens of Holland. In his garden he now has 10,000 candidum lilies in full bloom, and he says it is a maze of perfect beauty. During the early part of summer he had over 40,000 narcissi in bloom at one time, and he avers that if the goddess of fairyland had appeared she would have pronounced the scene simply exquisite. Associated with Mr. Gibbs is Leo Van Der Linden, who is direct from the famous bulb gardens of Hillegom, Holland. He is an expert in the bulb business, and is profuse in his praise of this country as being properly adapted to the growing of Holland bulbs. As to beauty and size he avers that the Clearbrook bulbs are equal to any that he ever saw in his native country, which is the home of the Holland bulb. Over 3,000 bulbs have already been shipped

SEED TESTING.

In the report of the Massachusetts Agricultural Experiment Station, Amherst, Mass., for the year 1906 it is said:

"There is a constantly increasing demand for work pertaining to seed germination, seed separation and purity testing of seeds. The station is not at present sufficiently well equipped for purity testing, since the best work in this line can be done only by a specialist, or by one who is able to devote considerable study to the subject.

"Most of our seed separation is done for tobacco and onion growers of the Connecticut valley, and for this work the department has installed efficient appliances. It is hoped that market gardeners will eventually separate their seed, since in growing such crops as lettuce, celery, radishes, etc., this practice would prove valuable.

"Germination tests were made on 126 samples, purity tests on 18, separation tests on 87.

"The average percentage of germination of onion seed was 79.5; of sweet corn, 71.9; and the highest percentage of onion seed germination was 100, while the same percentage was obtained with samples of sweet corn. The lowest percentage of germination of onion was 28; that of sweet corn, 25. The onion seeds tested during 1906 were particularly good, being much better than those we have tested during previous years. Both onion and tobacco seed were separated by air. Only two per cent of seed was discarded by the process of air separation from the best tobacco seed sent in, while from the poorest samples thirty-seven per cent was discarded. In the case of the best onion seed, eight per cent was discarded by the use of a winnowing machine, while only twenty per cent was discarded from the poorest samples of onion seeds."

FRITILLARIA CONICA.

Fritillaria conica is a charming new fritillaria, which has been found in the mountains of southern Greece, says M. Herb, of Naples. It belongs to the miniature fritillarias, which do not, like the Crown Imperials, parade by the size of their flower tufts, but which charm the spectator by their delicacy. The inflorescence attains only a height of about three-quarters of an inch in the average and forms small rosettes with the dark green, bright leaves, which partly stick to the stems. The bell-shaped, conical flowers are brilliant golden yellow within and a little lighter without, passing into straw-color. They appear as early as the month of March; viz., as soon as the earliest bulbous plants, like crocus, galanthus, chionodoxa and similar small-sized bulbs, to the colors of which they form a good contrast and with which they may be advantageously used for planting on spring beds. Several bulbs of Fritillaria conica planted together in small pots can be well used for spring decoration of flower stands.

THE IOWA SEED LAW.

As a result of the new state law in Iowa requiring seeds to be of a certain standard of purity, the Sioux City Seed & Nursery Co., at Sioux City, will begin at once the erection of a new elevator and cleaner, at the cost of $20,000. The building will adjoin the present plant of the seed company. H. A. Johns, president of the company, says it will be impossible for his concern to comply with the new law with its present equipment. Expensive apparatus for clean-and at a scale that should ensure a large demand. These Bulbs are grown on specially adapted soil, being of a light, silky nature, and are possessed of a good, strong, robust constitution and in splendid condition, especially for forcing work. Every care is exercised in selecting, preparing and packing of Bulbs and J. W. C. has every confidence in giving all his customers every satisfaction, and to point out the special advantage of buying direct from the grower, 'at one profit.' A comparison in prices thus quoted with other 'Houses' will be sufficient to convince any buyer of the value they are obtaining by dealing direct. What enables J. W. C. to offer his stock at such low prices is the care and energy displayed in the extensive cultivation of many years' standing, thus increasing his stock to such magnitude that he is now able to give his friends a real good bargain in the shape of the best 'English Grown Bulbs,' and to send out only first-class goods at fair prices, and which is the only means whereby a sound business can be maintained. J. W. C. sincerely appreciates the patronage granted him in the past, and expresses the hope that his old friends will continue to favor him with their commands. He also particularly solicits the favor and patronage of those respectable firms with whom he has not yet the honor to be in connection.

NARCISSUS

For good, sound, constitutional bulbs, nothing can equal those grown and cultivated on English soil and more especially from the land where the undermentioned are grown. As only a limited stock is being raised and to ensure orders being booked, it is advisable to forward list of requirements at once to save disappointment. These are guaranteed not forced stuff, but good, sound, well harvested bulbs, specially cultivated for the trade. Compare prices with other houses and bear in mind that these prices are for first size bulbs.

ing seeds will have to be installed. Work on the improvement will commence at once, with the hope of having the new building ready by fall.

"Seedsmen are compelled to put a tag on every sack of seed sold, with the exception of garden seed," said Mr. Johns, in discussing the new law. "If the seed is not of a standard purity, it will be necessary to specify the percentage of the admixtures. For instance: If it contains three per cent chick-weed, or five per cent foxtail, the tag must give this information."

Mr. Johns believes the new law will meet the approval of the larger wholesale seed dealers, though it will cause some annoyance at first. Certain phases of the law will have to be modified, he says, but these modifications will suggest themselves within a year.

IMPORTS.

The imports of seeds through the port of New York for the week ending July 6 were as follows:

Kind.	Bags.	Val.	Kind.	Bags.	Val.
Canary	2,282	$4,283	Lycodium	5	$ 490
Castor	2,830	2,830	Mustard	325	3,925
Clover	350	9,920	Rape	5	19
Grass	254	5,965

In the same period the imports of trees and plants were valued at $1,309.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The streets of wholesaledom look almost deserted. Many of the principals and more of the lieutenants are on their vacations. Of retail trade there is but a semblance. No more marriages till August. Even funeral work is at a low ebb and, while prices are quoted as a formality, so much that is shipped remains unsold that the general average is below the bottom figures given in the wholesale cut flower list. There has been no change in the price of roses. The last week's quotations stand approved.

Carnations and most stock shortened somewhat in supply on Monday, a condition that was booked to come sooner or later, but even this fact had little effect on prices and any apparent strength lacked backbone or aggressiveness.

Valley has advanced slightly. Lilies are abundant and the summer values hold. Smilax has fallen to the lowest prices of the year and sweet peas were never so abundant, so cheap and so universally good in quality.

Gladioli are already arriving from the local growers, as well as from the south, and the price has retrograded to $1.50 per hundred for the best.

There is some demand for orchids and shipments are made in quantity to the summer resorts, but no undue demand is anticipated and to hold them to respectable figures and so maintain their dignity is no easy task.

Various Notes.

Beautiful weather in the east. The temperature on Monday was 70 degrees. If we can do as well four weeks hence, when the S. A. F. comes to Philadelphia, there will be general rejoicing, not only in the city of brotherly love, but in New York, where we hope to entertain many either going or coming, for no one thinks of making the journey to the convention without allotting a part of his holiday to the metropolis. There is so much to see here that you can "live a lifetime in a day." But Philadelphia promises great things and New York whereby the swimming pool of the summer becomes a greenhouse in the fall and winter. The banks of the swimming pool near Pittsburg are covered with flowers and a most charming effect produced by the combination. Every private place of note will add this novelty to its luxuries in due time.

George Sykes, the veteran salesman for Lord & Burnham Co., was seriously injured in a trolley collision on his way to his home in Passaic a week ago.

A good deal of adverse criticism appears in the leading New York daily newspapers concerning the management of our great Central park. Deterioration is lamented. The working force is called scant and inefficient and its roads and lawns and untrimmed trees are severely censured. Police discipline is called lax and retrogression during the last ten years is declared to be constant and methods of care and removal far behind the times. The commissioner declares the trouble to be lack of men and appropriations—skilled labor and an addition of 100 workers to the helpers and $100,000 to the yearly expenditure. The parks of Brooklyn, Boston and Chicago are used as comparisons to the disadvantage of New York.

The retail windows of the bon ton stores are never uninteresting in New York. It would be suicidal and inexcusable to have them so. Lilies of every kind are used most profusely. The yearly water lily display at Small's has been renewed. This is always attractive. Ferns of many varieties, especially the new nephrolepis species in half a dozen kinds, and cybotium, are most in evidence. Curtains of asparagus are always effective. The retailer with a poor window is not in it with his competitors.

A. L. Young and John Egenbrod were away this week on a fishing excursion and some startling fish stories came back with them. Lieutenant Reidel, of Guttman's, has returned from his vacation on Long Island and was rescued on Saturday from the surf after going under twice. The water was over four feet deep where he went down.

The good old summer time is with us and there has been no perceptible change in the last week. Funeral work is about all that is doing now. There is little demand for loose cut stuff, which is poor.

The busiest florists in town are the outing committee and the chrysanthemum show committees of the Florists' Club. The former has completed all arrangements for the outing July 25. The show committee is a good one and is getting in some good work. If the pace set is kept up the show is bound to be a hummer. George Cooke predicts that it will be the finest ever held in the capital city. The schedule will be announced at the next meeting. The club itself will not award any cash prizes, but certificates. Quite a number of prizes will be donated by the different business houses. All the money made at the show will be turned over to the associated charities. The show will be held about the second week in November and most likely in the National Rifles' Armory.

Such a house as you speak of will grow Paper Whites all right. I would not, however, advise you to plant them in the beds, as I think you could probably make more profitable use of them by running some summer or early fall crop ahead of the Paper Whites. I would prefer to plant the bulbs in boxes, which may be of any desired length. Those twenty-four to thirty inches long, twelve inches wide and four or five inches deep are easy to handle. There is no necessity for having them a greater depth than five inches. You can plant fifty bulbs in a box 12x24. After boxing, place them under a bench in a greenhouse or in a shed. Give them a light covering of hay or moss, which can be removed after growths appear. Use a compost of loam and well decayed manure, such as can be obtained from an old hotbed, with a good dash of sand. If your house is piped so that a night temperature of 50 to 55 degrees can be kept up, you will have no trouble in getting them in for Thanksgiving, providing you get the bulbs early and get them into the soil right away. Paper Whites will not need any staking. As they come into bloom they should be placed in a cool house. C. W.

New Baby Smilax

Myrsiphyllum Asparagoides Myrtifolia

The old, well known Smilax has a rival in this new variety.

It is of a delicate and handsome appearance; the individual leaves are only one-half as large as the regular Smilax, and as graceful as the Maidenhair Fern.

It is advisable to allow each plant several strands of twine on which to run. It is a very rapid grower, and produces many more shoots than the old variety of Smilax.

Vegetable Forcing.

THE public, in localities where leaf lettuce is generally grown, is becoming educated to the superior eating qualities of the heading varieties. The buyers who think leaf lettuce is only good for garnishing are becoming more numerous every day.

FIRMING LETTUCE SOILS.

Some lettuce soils should be thoroughly firmed before planting, especially a soil made of sods and enriched with manure for several years. That is, if you do not change the soil every few years. I like an old soil better than a new one if it is kept clean by sterilizing. It grows heavier lettuce.

Several years ago I planted my houses to lettuce, but it did not grow. The soil was so light that water went right through it and the soil was dry a day after watering and I was obliged to water every day. After the lettuce had been planted two weeks I went over it with my feet, both ways, and tramped it thoroughly, and then watered it and in a few days after you could see it was beginning to grow. The lettuce was planted eight inches apart each way and tramping did not hurt it. For me, firming the soil is one of the necessary operations of lettuce growing.

One bed showed this decidedly last winter. One side of it had been walked on for some time before planting, while the other side was under the glass and was not firmed thoroughly. The side that was walked on grew lettuce nearly twice as heavy in the same time as the other side.

It is not likely that all soils need to be firmed for lettuce, but if you have any difficulty in getting it to start off well, firm a small space and watch the result.

B. H. THORNE.

STRAWBERRY PLANTS.

Runners for propagation are allowed to root in the soil adjoining the plants. It should then be seen to that the soil is in condition for the roots of the runners to enter into freely, and if the soil is kept somewhat loose or moist this will be more readily effected. A small stone placed over the runner will induce it to seek the earth and to root more quickly than if it were left alone. As soon as the young plant which was lately a runner has developed a few leaves, the runner from it should be stopped in order to strengthen the plant.

When good plants are especially desirable, it will be well to allow only one plant to develop from a runner. It can easily be seen that if the runner is stopped when one plant is formed, that plant, by reason of receiving so much nourishment, will succeed better than if others were allowed to go ahead and draw from it as well as from the source of its own supply.

As a preliminary step to the obtaining of plants for forcing, 3-inch pots should be filled with good soil and then sunk nearly to the rim in the soil near to the plant from which the runners come, and when the bud at the first joint of the runner has developed a few leaves it should be pressed closely down onto the soil in the pot and kept there by means of a hooked peg or a clod. Just as in

GRAPES.

If there is one period, more than any other, at which great care is necessary in grape growing under glass, it is when the fruit has just begun to change color. Then the last opportunity is afforded to help the vines to produce fruit to perfection. If, at about this time, the inside border is in a state warranting the application of water, it will benefit the vines and ultimately the fruit, if they are given liquid manure, and after its application a liberal quantity of clean water. This watering, if done thoroughly at this stage, should be sufficient until the crop is cut. A constant circulation of air is essential for the well-doing of grapes at this stage, but always guarding against violent draughts and very low temperatures. To prevent the latter contingency, a little fire heat will be desirable, and will also aid the circulation of air when much ventilation cannot be given without it.

When water is withheld absolutely from vines, red spider, if anywhere present, will soon make its appearance easily noticeable, and in order to prevent its ravages as much as possible the paths should be frequently sprinkled, which operation will in no way injuriously affect the fruit if ventilation is properly attended to.

There is no condition more injurious to grapes than a closed up house during the night and allowing it to remain so until well on in the morning, as we occasionally see done. It may often be ROOF LADDER.

Is there a movable ladder or any other device that florists use to go onto the roofs of connected greenhouses where the bars used are twenty feet long or over?

W. E. B.

We know of no movable ladder to be used in repairing greenhouse roofs. All the growers, as far as we know, use an ordinary plank, with strips nailed across to rest on the bars, which seems to give entire satisfaction.

CLEMATIS MONTANA.

I may be too fond of recommending new subjects (or rather the revival of old ones), says a writer in a British contemporary, but I believe there is money in this good old plant if properly grown. Good flowering plants cannot be made in a year, but if potted and plunged in the open ground and allowed to remain until they have made sufficient growth, they will flower freely either in the open or come in early if put into moderate warmth, but they must have no shade and only moderate heat. I was reminded of this good old plant when going through Hayes and Keston a few days ago. I saw several splendid examples. One was a dead apple tree covered with wreaths of bloom; another was the porch of an old-fashioned cottage; a mass of starry white blossoms could be seen at a great distance. The new variety Clematis Montana rose should also prove useful, or, if we could get one with a little more color in it, we should have a plant which would be much appreciated.

THANK YOU.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; Vice-pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 33d annual convention will be held at Milwaukee, June, 1908.

SOME large plantings of Elberta peach trees are now being made in the orchards of Texas.

THE L. H. Smith Nursery Co., Council Bluffs, Ia., has been incorporated with $10,000 capital stock.

THE Topeka growers of apple seedlings report an even stand and good prospects for a fine crop.

D'ALCORN & SON, Portsmouth, Va., say they consider Golden Harvest and Jeanne d'Arc to be the same peony.

THE Oklahoma nurserymen want a special officer, to be known as the state entomologist, to be charged with the work of nursery inspection.

INQUIRY is made for the following peonies: Mme. de Guerle, Mme. Galhant, Solfaterre and Canarie. Who has them? List them with prices in the REVIEW and get orders.

D. S. LAKE, the well-known nurseryman at Shenandoah, Ia., has become a director in the corporation which recently took over the seed business of Henry Field and which is building a seed warehouse across the street from Mr. Lake's packing sheds.

AMONG the many improvements which will be made in Montgomery, Ala., this year will be a new park plan cemetery, which will be established within the near future. The enterprise is in the hands of prominent business men, and when finished the cemetery will have an elaborate chapel entrance, greenhouse and other accessories.

THE PEONY "SET."

At the height of the peony season the Cleveland Plaindealer published a half page of peony pictures, accompanied by the following signed by E. A. Reeves, which will interest the trade:

"The season has given the peony a rigid test as to the relative merits of the different varieties to withstand adverse climatic conditions. During the latter part of March we experienced two weeks of warm weather, which pushed many peony buds above the ground. Then came two months of the most unpleasant weather, with freezing and thawing, hail, rain and snow.

"Some sorts have been sensitive and the buds on these were shrunken and shriveled and gave no flowers. Then we find other varieties unable to stand the wet weather and their buds decay and fall off. However, the crop of blooms that are now in their glory, is proof that most sorts of peonies are more patient and better poised than many of us, who enjoy their charming fragrance, form and color.

"We are learning more and more about the peony and which varieties grow the best in this locality. Many complain that their peonies give no flowers and this may be due to two causes. First, it must be remembered that some varieties are naturally shy bloomers unless the soil and other conditions are especially favorable. Again, we have discovered that the most prolific bloomers sometimes get a disease or perhaps we should say into a condition which for lack of a better term we will call the 'set' We are not prepared to say what the cause of this condition is, but it is safe to say that it is next to impossible, if not quite impossible, to bring a peony which has once fallen into this 'set' condition back to a normal plant.

"If peonies throw up a great number of weak shoots about one foot high and which bring no flowers, they no doubt have taken on the 'set' condition and are worthless.

"Better in buying to get roots with a few strong buds than one with numerous small buds."

DIPPING TREES.

To kill San Jose scale, we dipped over 2,000 young trees in the spring of 1902 in lime, sulphur and salt solution made at the ordinary strength for spraying. It certainly killed the scale and did not hurt a tree that I know of. Of course much of the solution got on the roots, and last fall I saw an orchard of about 1,000 of those trees, and they had shown no evil effects, neither had the scale survived the treatment. I have bought every spring many thousands of apple seedlings, which were often shipped 2,000 miles, sometimes 7,000 miles (from France), to the Pacific coast, and if there onds. I never knew it to injure them. Last spring some root grafts had developed woolly aphis in a journey from the east, and we fumigated with sulphur before planting. We saw no more of the aphis, and the grafts all grew. I am not at all afraid to dip or fumigate dormant trees; would prefer dipping. There are many cases of trees which leave the nursery apparently in good order, but reach the customer badly infested with woolly aphis, which have increased in the gentle heat which developed in the case in transit. The customer is surprised to see what the nursery has sent out. Result: Lots of trouble for the innocent nurseryman. T. R. HOPKINS.

SEEDLING LILIES AND LILACS.

We sowed seed in the open ground in April, of some new lilies and lilacs. The seed did not start until September and then perished. What was the trouble? E. Y. T.

Lilium seeds are often slow in germinating, although in the case of some of the forcing varieties seedlings from nine to eighteen months old have been flowered. Some varieties, however, are much slower to appear above ground. We think if you had sown the lilies and lilacs either in a cool greenhouse or in a frame, where they could have secured more uniform moisture at the root and necessary shade in the earlier stages, you would have had better results. Our severe winters are often too much for these little seedlings. Try sowing in flats or pans under glass another time. They are then under your observation and will be likely to get more of the fussing over, which many of the seedlings need. C. W.

HYDRANGAEA OTAKSA.

What treatment should Hydrangea Otaksa receive from now on? I have them, about 200, in 5-inch pots, from one to six shoots to a plant. They have not flowered this season, but I want some in bloom for next Easter and the balance for Decoration day. They now occupy a side bench in a mum house. Will fumigating with tobacco stems hurt them? C. U.

Your hydrangeas should now be placed in the open air, where they will do much better than under glass. Fumigating will not hurt them and if they are troubled with aphis give them some smoke.

In placing outside, if kept well syringed no insects will trouble them. If the plants are getting potbound, it would be better to shift into 7-inch pots, using good loam, cow manure and some fine bone as compost. Stand in a sunny location on a bed of ashes. Keep well watered and you should have some splendid stock for next Easter and Memorial day. Leave outdoors until frost nips the leaves a little; then place in a cool pit or cellar. Reduce the water supply a little in September to assist in ripening up the wood, not, however, to the extent of allowing the plants to wilt down.

SEATTLE, WASH.—Matthieson & Johnson are erecting five houses, each 20x200.

THE demise of William M. Marugg, of Pomona, Cal., is recorded in the obituary column this week.

PORTLAND, ORE.

Current Comment.

That "no news is good news" was true in our case during our long silence, for trade has shown great activity and the season ended triumphantly for all. We are not working overtime right now, just keeping up with the procession. There is an ample supply of material with which to meet all demands, mostly grown outside. Sweet peas are inclined to dominate the market and we can grow them here on 15-inch stems.

Among the greenhouse men it is build, and build and then some—splendid recreation for the summer months.

Our June display of outdoor-grown roses was wonderful and pronounced the best ever. Through the efforts of several of our live citizens and the Amateur Rose Society, a most successful rose carnival and fiesta of three days' duration was held, which created so much enthusiasm that plans are proposed for making it an annual feature.

Late rains have stimulated vegetation so that it is still seen at its best, everything looking fresh, clean and vigorous.

It is seldom that a traveling salesman visits us in hot weather and yet occasionally one blows in. Arthur Zirkman, representing M. Rice & Co., talked ribbons and novelties to us while we were preparing to celebrate the glorious Fourth. He has all the necessary qualifications for the occupation and will always be welcome here. H. J. M.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Cooler weather prevails through this vicinity than we usually experience at this time of the year, and flowers, as a consequence, have better color and substance than those usually exhibited in July. Carnations are not quite so plentiful as they have been. There is apparently a shortage of fancy white sorts, and as there has been a fair amount of funeral work during the last week, they have been quickly used up.

Some good Kaiserin and Testout are in season, but roses of other varieties are poor. Beauties cannot be had at any price, except a few of inferior quality.

Sweet peas continue to be the best selling flower and they are in splendid shape from most of the growers. Golden coreopsis has not sold as well this season as formerly, but there is a much better demand for gladioli, especially of any of the newer sorts. They cost the stores from $3 to $4 per hundred and retail at about twice these prices.

Several new batches of valley are being cut, but the demand is light, as well as for Lilium longiflorum. Quite a number of growers will have quantities of auratum, roseum and album in a few days. Good smilax is scarce, but all other kinds of green stuff are plentiful.

Business, compared with last season at this time, is a shade better with the retailers, but that is not saying much in its favor, as there is little doing at the best and that is confined principally to funeral work.

Various Notes.

E. Gill, of Oakland and West Berkeley, has left on a month's pleasure trip through Oregon and Washington.

H. Plath, of Ocean View, has returned from an outing at Camp Taylor.

Geo. Pape, of Berkeley, has returned from Portland, Ore., where he was erecting a range of glass for the municipality. Mr. Pape has also finished a large greenhouse for the Hotel del Monte, at Monterey, Cal.

It has been decided that the fall show, which was to have been jointly given by the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society and the California State Floral Society, will be omitted this year. Everything has been in such a chaotic condition ever since the fire that, after considerable deliberation, it was thought best to abandon the project and give an elaborate exhibition next spring.

Geo. Fitzgerald is at present a resident of Livermore, Cal.

David Neely, one of San Francisco's pioneer nurserymen, will retire from business and place his West Berkeley land on the market. Mr. Neely has been a resident of that town for many years.

A. H. Hills, of East Oakland, has received a large consignment of orchids from Central America. Mr. Hills is one of the largest growers of orchids in California. G.

EUCALYPTUS AND CYPRESS.

The demand for blue gums and Monterey cypress promises to be heavy again this season and growers of ornamental trees and shrubbery can well afford to devote some space and time to this branch of the business. For several years the demand for both eucalyptus and cypress had been limited, but recently it has, owing to the large plantings made on barren hillside lands, become a profitable source of revenue for the nurseryman.

Blue and red gums are the most in demand, as they are the quickest growing and are perfectly hardy here, while the Monterey cypress, although not so generally planted on account of the fact that it is of somewhat slower growth, is a fairly close second. All these trees are of the easiest culture when grown from seed, and make salable plants in one season.

The seed is usually planted in the early summer under lattice, either in boxes or solid beds. Plenty of ventilation is called for and care should be taken not to sow the seed too thickly.

I find it a good plan to soak both blue and red gum and Monterey cypress seed in water several hours before planting. The water should be heated until it is too hot to put the hand in it, but it should not be brought to anywhere near the boiling point. The seed should not be covered more than one-eighth of an inch with sand, and in from one week to ten days the plants will be well up over the ground. If the weather is warm the young plants will grow very fast, and in about eight weeks they will be large enough to transplant in boxes.

It is well to put about 110 to 120 plants in each box, as a few are always liable to die, and as these small trees are always sold in boxes, it is very convenient to have them average about 100 plants per box.

They should not be removed from the shade house until they are about three weeks transplanted, when they can be brought out to the open. If any of the boxes are not full count, it is a good plan to refill with young plants and leave them under cover for a couple of weeks longer.

Gums and cypress, when growing in this way, require plenty of moisture and, if the weather is favorable, salable plants can be had the first season; that is, during the winter succeeding the seed planting. Monterey cypress do not grow as quickly as gums and may not be large enough the first season to suit customers who may want a large size seedling. It is not practicable, however, to keep either gums or cypress in boxes over two seasons, as they become so large and the roots so matted together that they are hard to transplant into the ground with success. PITTSBURG.

It is not generally known in Pittsburg that the Elliott Nursery Co. has the largest hardy plant nursery in America. Fifty thousand peonies in over 500 varieties have just completed their season of bloom. Now 40,000 Japanese irises make a show worth a long journey to see and a little later a field containing 100,000 phloxes will be a sea of color. This company grows over 5,000 varieties of hardy plants and during the summer and fall the nursery is a most interesting place to visit. The nursery is at Springdale. Automobiles can reach it by going through Highland park, crossing the bridge at Sharpsburg and then driving up the river road until the nursery is reached. It is thirteen miles from the corner of Penn and Highland avenues. The road is macadamized from Aspinwall and is the most pleasant drive about Pittsburg.

CARNATIONS

MY SPECIALTY

Write for Prices on Field-grown Plants
SOL. GARLAND, DES PLAINES, ILL.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Business remains good for this time of the year; of course it is all funeral work. We have had some hot weather, which had its effect on stock. Brides and Maids are poor; flowers are small and foliage covered with mildew in many cases. Some good Meteor are on the market at present. La Detroit and Kaiserin are the only other good roses available, with Killarney a good second. Carnations are also poor. Enchantress are pale and all the carnation stock is rather small. There is quite a glut of this flower at present. Sweet peas, marguerites, etc., still hold out. Greens are quite plentiful.

Various Notes.

Chas. W. Keller is giving his place a general overhauling. Four new houses, each 27x112 feet, are fast nearing completion. These houses will be devoted mostly to carnation growing.

Louis Charvat has been absent from his post at the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, owing to sickness.

B. Schroeter recently purchased an immense, practically new, barn at a bargain. His men are busy giving the whole plant a general overhauling.

Mrs. Patterson and her son, Murray, sailed for Scotland last Saturday. It is their intention to spend several months abroad, visiting the principal cities, although most of the time will be spent at Edinburgh, this being Mrs. Patterson's birthplace.

As is usual at this time of the year, many of the craft are away on vacations or busy planning for one.

Herbert Pierce, of the Detroit Cut Flower Exchange, spends most of his time at Pontiac, Mich., during the dull season. Mr. Pierce is interested in some gravel pits in Pontiac.

Mrs. F. Rush was the designer of a floral float that won first prize in connection with the recent Polish celebration held in Detroit. The float was in the shape of a picnic wagon, the whole tastefully decorated with red and white roses and carnations and smilax.

A flower stand has been opened up by a couple of Greeks in the Michigan avenue entrance to the Majestic building.

John Bittner, of Saginaw, but at present in the employ of the park board in Detroit, has bought the old material of Sam Wayson's greenhouses. It is Mr. Bittner's intention to have this material shipped to Saginaw, where he will erect three houses, each about 16x60 feet, to be devoted to the growing of potted plants. H. S.

BOSTON.The Market.

Intense dullness prevails in the flower market, with hardly a ripple to disturb it. A little funeral work, and some shipping to seaside and other points, are apparently about the only factors which keep trade alive at all. Prices are hard to quote. A few good summer roses are seen, of Carnot and Kaiserin. All others are of poor quality. Carnations are decidedly inferior. Many growers are pulling out and replanting and few decent flowers will be seen for a couple of months. There is an abundant supply of outdoor sweet peas, which sell as well as anything. Owing to the dry weather, stems are rather short. Asters appeared this week in small numbers, but it will be a fortnight before there is an adequate supply. Some Lilium candidum of fair quality were seen last week and there is the customary supply of coreopsis, cornflowers and other outdoor stock.

Various Notes.

The attendance at the annual picnic of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, in Dorchester park, July 25, promises to easily break all records. The location selected is convenient of access for all and will prove an ideal place for the games. Captains for the rival baseball nines, representing the commercial and private growers, have secured strong teams, while in the tug of war the gardeners are again determined to pull their opponents all over the park. Duncan Finlayson, Peter Miller and Wilfred Wheeler have selected a splendid lot of prizes and the numerous athletic events promise to be more keenly contested than ever.

The garden committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society visited the estate of J. R. Leeson, of Newton Centre, July 13. James Cartwright, who is in charge, had everything in fine shape.

A fine show of sweet peas and other seasonable flowers is expected at Horticultural hall July 20.

W. W. Rawson & Co. have a hundred varieties of sweet peas on trial at their Marblehead farm and hope for a large number of visitors during old home week, which comes July 27 to August 3. There will be no horticultural attraction in Boston for the visitors, the committee finally deciding not to change the date of coming exhibitions.

Patrick Welch is enjoying his annual vacation at Old Orchard, Me., but hopes to be on hand for the S. A. F. convention at Philadelphia.

William Swan is at Holderness, N. H., recovering from a bad attack of the grip.

W. N. CRAIG.

MANCHESTER, MASS.

The annual rose show of the North Shore Horticultural Society was held in a tent on the grounds of the Essex County Club July 10 and 11. Lager & Hurrell showed a fine exhibit of orchids. Julius Huerlin had a collection of lilies in variety and Alstrømeria aurantica. Henry A. Dreer exhibited the new double lobelia, Kathleen Mallard, and Nephrolepis Amerpohlii. The J. H. Troy cup offered for the best collection of roses, to be won three times before becoming the property of the exhibitor, was won for the third time by Fred Brasch, gardener to Mrs. James McMillan. The cup offered by Julius Huerlin for the best collection of herba-

Lucid descriptions and 118 diagrams and illustrations make every detail clear to the amateur and professional gardener and florist. Cloth. 218 pages. $1.50

Gardening for Profit.

By PETER HENDERSON. The standard work on market and family gardening. The successful experience of the author for more than thirty years, and his willingness to tell, as he does in this work, the secret of his success for the benefit of others, enables him to give most valuable information. The book is profusely illustrated. 376 pages. Cloth. $1.50

The Chrysanthemum.

By ARTHUR HERRINGTON, formerly president of Chrysanthemum Society of America. The most complete and comprehensive work on the cultivation of the chrysanthemum that has yet been published in America. The book will be welcomed for the lucid, comprehensive, as well as the practical character of its contents. Handsomely illustrated. 168 pages, 5x7 inches. 50 cents

Cabbage, Cauliflower and Allied Vegetables.

By C. L. ALLEN. An explanation of the requirements, conditions, cultivation and general management pertaining to the entire cabbage group. The chapter on seed raising is probably the most authoritative treatise on this subject ever published. Insects and fungi are given due attention. Illustrated. 128 pages. Cloth. 50 cents

Mushrooms—How to Grow Them.

By WM. FALCONER. This is the most practical work on the subject ever written, and the only book on growing mushrooms published in America. The author describes how he grows mushrooms and how they are grown for profit by the leading market gardeners, and for home use by the most successful private growers. Engravings drawn from nature expressly for this work. Cloth. $1.00

The Market.

It is rather a hard matter to give the exact condition of the market last week. Retailers disagreed in their reports, some claiming that business was good, while others declared that it was dull. There were a few funeral orders and some decoration work. However, the street boys are getting their share, while the regular market florists found business slow. The extremely hot weather has made many of the growers empty their benches, and naturally stock will be scarce for a while. Our growers have been sending in lately large quantities of carnations and an abundance of sweet peas that scarcely brought the price of handling, and a large quantity has been sent to the dump.

Dahlias are beginning to come in more regularly, while black-eyed susans can be had in large quantities.

Various Notes.

Edward Earnshaw, president of the Bon Arbor Chemical Co., was in town last week.

James Glass, of Brehm's Lane, is building another up-to-date rose house, 30x115 feet, with concrete walls, and has installed a new boiler. He now has ten houses. He makes a specialty of growing ferns.

The sons of Mrs. B. C. Fox have again taken up their greenhouse business at Lansdowne, Md.

G. Schroder, of Catonsville, is growing some extra fine hollyhocks. They are about seven feet in height and the flowers are perfect.

C. Barklade is now assistant gardener for the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, Baltimore division, Relay, Md.

The next meeting of the Gardeners' Club will be held August 12.

KROESCHELL Boilers

NOW IS THE TIME TO PLACE YOUR ORDER.

"Had different kinds of cast-iron boilers. I am assured that I can save about one-third fuel with your boiler. I started firing October 10 and the fire never went out up to this time, May 12, 1907. This boiler heats both my dwelling and greenhouses and gives the best of satisfaction. My dwelling is about 40 feet from the boiler. Can recommend your boiler to anybody. It is the only greenhouse boiler."

G. BASLER, Buffalo, N. Y.

"Had three cast-iron sectional boilers and find I can heat twice as much glass with yours and save about one-third fuel. We are using the Kroeschell-Honeywell Generator with the boiler and believe it helps the boiler to distribute the water with a more rapid flow, also saving fuel."

N. BOMMERSBACH, Decatur, Ill.

"I had a cast-iron sectional boiler before I got yours; would not give yours for a dozen of the others. Your boiler is the quickest heating boiler I ever saw. I hardly ever have the damper over half open and the draft shut most of the time. In the four years I had to buy a new section and four heads that had cracked, and I had to be right with the cast-iron boiler and I would have to fire every twenty or thirty minutes. The cast-iron boiler took much more attention and more coal and would be leaking half the winter. I want no more cast-iron sectional boilers."

CHAS. W. UNGLAUB, Springfield, Ohio.

150 New Establishments, with 2,158,000 square feet of glass, installed the Kroeschell Boiler in 1906.

Made in 15 sizes. Heats from smallest houses up to 50,000 feet of glass. Will maintain 60 degrees at 15 below zero outside.

Greenhouse Heating.

HOT WATER FOR ONE HOUSE.

I have a three-quarter-span house, long span to the south. It is 20x120 feet. It has a 5-foot board wall on the north side and on the ends. On the south side the boards are three feet high, with two feet of glass. It is eleven feet from ground to ridge. There will be two 2-inch flow pipes overhead. How many 2-inch pipes will be required underneath the benches, to maintain a temperature of 58 degrees at night in zero weather, with a high wind blowing, as I sometimes have it here? I will use hot water. How large will my expansion tank have to be?

S. H. S.

I would suggest that you use two 2½-inch flow pipes instead of the two 2-inch pipes, as suggested, and that you use twelve 2-inch returns, six to each flow.

L. C. C.

INSUFFICIENT BOILER CAPACITY.

Please let me know how many feet of pipe it will take to heat a greenhouse for roses in a North Dakota climate, maintaining a temperature of 60 degrees, with the outside temperature 40 to 45 degrees below zero. My new house is 22x25 feet, ten feet to ridge; walls, three feet on south side, five feet on north side, with two center benches six feet wide, and two side benches three feet wide. I have a Wilks hot water boiler, 30x48, two 3-inch outlets and two returns. Will this boiler be able to keep a house 22x66 feet warm, besides a five-room residence? I want to raise roses, carnations and all kinds of flowering plants.

P. J. K.

It is not quite clear from your letter just what amount of radiation you wish to place on your boiler. The new house, 22x25, will require 250 square feet of radiation. The house 22x66 requires 560 square feet, and the dwelling will probably require about 500 square feet, making a total of 1,310, which is far in excess of the rated capacity of your boiler, which is listed to carry 650 to 750 square feet of radiation. Your load should have a 42x48 boiler, and if you run only the 66-foot house and the dwelling you would still require a 42x42 boiler.

STEAM FOR FIVE HOUSES.

We are erecting at Seattle, Wash., five houses, each 20x200 feet, with three benches in each house, and under each bench we have two 1¼-inch return pipes. We have a fall of about seven feet in the houses, which run east and west. The houses have also a fall of eighteen inches north and south, the south house being the lowest. The boiler is a fifty horse-power return

KROESCHELL Boilers

"Had different kinds of cast-iron boilers. I am assured that I can save about one-third fuel with your boiler. I started firing October 10 and the fire never went out up to this time, May 12, 1907. This boiler heats both my dwelling and greenhouses and gives the best of satisfaction. My dwelling is about 40 feet from the boiler. Can recommend your boiler to anybody. It is the only greenhouse boiler."

G. BASLER, Buffalo, N. Y.

"Had three cast-iron sectional boilers and find I can heat twice as much glass with yours and save about one-third fuel. We are using the Kroeschell-Honeywell Generator with the boiler and believe it helps the boiler to distribute the water with a more rapid flow, also saving fuel."

N. BOMMERSBACH, Decatur, Ill.

"I had a cast-iron sectional boiler before I got yours: would not give yours for a dozen of the others. Your boiler is the quickest heating boiler I ever saw. I hardly ever have the damper over half open and the draft shut most of the time. In the four years I had to buy a new section and four heads that had cracked, and I had to be right with the cast-iron boiler and I would have to fire every twenty or thirty minutes. The cast-iron boiler took much more attention and more coal and would be leaking half the winter. I want no more cast-iron sectional boilers."

CHAS. W. UNGLAUB, Springfield, Ohio.

150 New Establishments, with 2,158,000 square feet of glass, installed the Kroeschell Boiler in 1906.

Made in 15 sizes. Heats from smallest houses up to 50,000 feet of glass. Will maintain 60 degrees at 15 below zero outside.

HOT WATER FOR ONE HOUSE.

I have a three-quarter-span house, long span to the south. It is 20x120 feet. It has a 5-foot board wall on the north side and on the ends. On the south side the boards are three feet high, with two feet of glass. It is eleven feet from ground to ridge. There will be two 2-inch flow pipes overhead. How many 2-inch pipes will be required underneath the benches, to maintain a temperature of 58 degrees at night in zero weather, with a high wind blowing, as I sometimes have it here? I will use hot water. How large will my expansion tank have to be?

S. H. S.

I would suggest that you use two 2½-inch flow pipes instead of the two 2-inch pipes, as suggested, and that you use twelve 2-inch returns, six to each flow.

L. C. C.

INSUFFICIENT BOILER CAPACITY.

Please let me know how many feet of pipe it will take to heat a greenhouse for roses in a North Dakota climate, maintaining a temperature of 60 degrees, with the outside temperature 40 to 45 degrees below zero. My new house is 22x25 feet, ten feet to ridge; walls, three feet on south side, five feet on north side, with two center benches six feet wide, and two side benches three feet wide. I have a Wilks hot water boiler, 30x48, two 3-inch outlets and two returns. Will this boiler be able to keep a house 22x66 feet warm, besides a five-room residence? I want to raise roses, carnations and all kinds of flowering plants.

P. J. K.

It is not quite clear from your letter just what amount of radiation you wish to place on your boiler. The new house, 22x25, will require 250 square feet of radiation. The house 22x66 requires 560 square feet, and the dwelling will probably require about 500 square feet, making a total of 1,310, which is far in excess of the rated capacity of your boiler, which is listed to carry 650 to 750 square feet of radiation. Your load should have a 42x48 boiler, and if you run only the 66-foot house and the dwelling you would still require a 42x42 boiler.

STEAM FOR FIVE HOUSES.

We are erecting at Seattle, Wash., five houses, each 20x200 feet, with three benches in each house, and under each bench we have two 1½-inch return pipes. We have a fall of about seven feet in the houses, which run east and west. The houses have also a fall of eighteen inches north and south, the south house being the lowest. The boiler is a fifty horse-power return under the ridge to supply nine 1¼-inch returns, three under each bench, will probably be ample. If the five houses are parallel, you might construct a cover house or shed across the end and carry a 5-inch pipe past two houses, then reduce to 4-inch and carry to the end of the shed. From the main riser take off a 2-inch flow for each house, and have a common return parallel with the main flow, into which all the separate returns from the individual houses can be emptied. Make each house just as independent as possible. L. C. C.

A QUESTION OF CIRCULATION.

If a steam boiler is sunken below the level of the greenhouse floors and carries forty pounds steam pressure, and all returns are connected to the bottom of the boiler, will the condensed water return and feed back into the boiler? All returns will have two feet of fall in 100 feet. Will the pressure equalize, the flow lines having only steam in them while the returns will have some steam and the condensed water? The only question to me is: If the steam throttle is opened first and the lines become charged, and then the return valve is opened at the bottom of the boiler, will the condensed water flow into the boiler from the lines, or will the water rush out from the boiler into the lines as it would from a blow-off valve? My opinion is, it will until they would become equalized. Then, after being equalized, will it flow into the boiler as fast as it would evaporate out in steam? Some have claimed it will work quite satisfactorily, as the water would seek its level. I have natural gas for fuel, and if I can so arrange it I will save a lot of close watching. J. H. H.

If the water line in the boiler is two feet or more below the returns under the benches in the greenhouse, and the returns are properly graded, there will be no difficulty regarding a circulation. The deeper the boiler can be placed the better, however. It will be an added safeguard to place a swing check-valve in the main return, to prevent the water

A CEMENT WATER TANK.

I am greatly in need of a water supply to water my greenhouses and lawn and also for irrigation, and would like your advice on a good quality of tank to use. What I want is a cement tank, and I would like to know if such can be had. My well is on the level of my greenhouse benches, and near the well is a space, about 10x14 feet, where the tank could be placed, and where it would rest on a solid foundation of rock and clay. This is the highest point on my farm. The well is fed by springs, and I could have a continuous flow of an inch to an inch and a quarter, or perhaps more, without lowering it.

the area, and upon this erecting a form of boards of the shape and size desired, which will serve to hold the concrete wall in place until it has hardened, after which the form can be removed and the surface of the concrete coated with a rich cement mortar to make it more impervious to moisture. Anyone who can carefully measure out the cement, sand and gravel can make the tank. A good combination for this work will be the 1, 2, 4 combination. This is a barrel and a half of cement, three barrels sand and six and one-quarter barrels gravel or crushed stone. Mix thoroughly both before and after moistening. Then tamp hard into the form. A good geared back steel mill on a 30-foot tower will probably do your work satisfactorily. Do not get too small a mill; eight to ten feet is better than smaller. Use at least a 2-inch pipe from the tank if you expect to irrigate much. A 3-inch or 4-inch pipe, with good flume boxes and races, will be found better for general irrigation, either for the furrow or flooding system. Unless you have quite constant winds, I think it would be wise to figure on a gasoline engine for pumping instead of the windmill. L. C. C.

The Market.

There is little to be said about business. The usual summer kind is with us, but at that we have no kick coming, as the glut of carnations appears to be over and those that are coming in are realizing something like a decent price. Good stock is selling at about $1 per hundred and the demand is fair. Roses are fast becoming scarce and they also have advanced in price and are selling out clean. Sweet peas are in demand and the price is slowly advancing. White ones are especially good property. Lilies of all kinds are called for, with only a few on the market. It would seem that if there was a better supply of fairly good flowers, quite a good business could be done. But it is up one day and down the next, so we are glad for everything which comes our way. There are no asters on the market as yet, but some are expected soon. Water lilies sell well. Some fine Shasta daisies are seen, with few takers. Green goods of all kinds are in fair supply and sell well.

The Florists' Society.

The annual meeting of the Florists' Society was held in the club room July 13, with a fair attendance. Considerable business was disposed of in quick order. The nomination and election of officers for the coming year was then in order. The following nominations were made: For president, R. Witterstaetter and E. G. Gillett; vice-president, Gus Adrian and Aug. Hoffmeister; secretary, Frank Dellar and J. Chas. Murphy; treasurer, D. Rusconi and Wm. Speck; trustee, W. K. Partridge and Philip Berlier. Henry Schwarz and Geo. W. Loeber were appointed tellers, and the balloting resulted in the election of the following officers for the coming year: President, R. Witterstaetter; vice-president, Gus Adrian; secretary, Frank Dellar; treasurer, D. Rusconi; trustee, W. K. Partridge.

The election being disposed of, the question of our annual outing was brought up. Mr. Rusconi came forward with a donation of $25 towards an outing fund and the society voted $25 to the fund. D. Rusconi was then appointed a committee of one, with full power to act and to have full charge of all the details of getting up the outing. He was given the power to appoint sub-committeemen as he saw fit. It is Mr.

ASSESSMENT.....

FOR TAXATION

INEQUALITY OF TAXATION.

In the spring issues of the REVIEW each year, while the assessor is making his rounds, there appear letters relating to the inequality of assessments, not only as between adjoining states, but as between adjacent counties and even townships. The following letter was recently received:

As I know the Review is always ready to help to adjust any grievance that the smaller growers may have, I should like you to answer this question: Are greenhouses assessable? If so, to what amount can they be assessed?

I have five and one-half acres of land, horse, stable and about 27,000 square feet of glass, on which the assessor here has assessed me $17,000. This is more than the full valuation of the glass at the present time, or any other time, for that matter. I have appealed to the county commissioners and, while I expect a reduction, I hardly expect my assessment to come down to a figure I call fair. Some growers I have written to are not assessed at all; others but very little. One grower states his honest belief is that greenhouses are not assessable, and that he is willing to go into a combination of growers and fight the matter through to the supreme court. I should like to have the Review's opinion on this matter.

This is, of course, an extreme case, but it brought, among others, the following expressions of opinion:

In Iowa.

In regard to taxation of greenhouses and stock, I should like to say what I think about it for the state of Iowa.

The date of levy is January 1. Farmers are exempt from taxation on all the farm produce grown the year previous, also on $300 worth of farm machinery. Now, as all, or nearly all, stock grown by commercial florists is only of one year's growth, I claim it just as much exempt from taxation as the farmers' produce. Also I claim $300 exemption on machinery and heating apparatus, which are, in other words, the tools we use to raise our crops.

The foregoing exemptions I have always claimed, and gotten. The law surely cannot exempt the farmer from the payment of taxes on all the stuff he grows on his farm without also granting to the greenhouse man the same exemption on all the stuff grown on his farm, even if it is under glass, and I believe any court in the state will sustain this opinion.

In regard to real estate, etc., the law says: "All property shall be subject to taxation at its actual value and shall be assessed at twenty-five per cent of such actual value." The actual value of a piece of property is what it would sell for on the market for cash, and greenhouses are not always very salable.

The boards of review of our cities and towns are nearly always composed of men of business capacity, and if the matter is put before them and explained in a gentlemanly and business-like way they will seldom be unjust, because a first-class greenhouse establishment is a benefit to any town. JOHN BEIMFORD.

In Ohio.

As to taxes on greenhouses, the Ohio law taxes us under the head of merchant; that is, on the amount of money actually invested. The land is so much per acre, the buildings so much on each one, or on all. In the case of a new structure, its value is added when the assessor makes the assessment. This valuation stands until the next regular decennial appraisal, which is in 1910.

To find out what is invested, a record must be kept of stock on hand, purchased and sold, less profit. After estimating the balance of stock on hand each month, the monthly balances must be added together at the end of the tax year, and the total must be divided by the number of months, in order to find

Of course every state has different rules for taxing. The Ohio laws are not fully lived up to. We poor fellows have to pay for what we have, and that is in sight and can't be avoided. But if the same money were invested in railroad or any other stock we would not pay any. It seems as if the $17,000 man referred to in the REVIEW of May 23 must have an establishment larger than any I know of in Ohio or the assessor has it in for him or does not know his business.

It is my belief that greenhouse stock should not be assessed for one-half its value, and I think if the question were agitated we could be included in the free list, that is, we would pay on the buildings and crockery only. There is no law in Ohio that could compel us to pay any more.

J. F. SKED.

I have in Ohio greenhouses and stock worth at least $1,500, but I pay no taxes on same.

the average value of the stock during the year.

For seven years I have made the rounds as assessor at this place, and find the assessor must be a man of judgment and must not try to drive business out of his community. Our tax rate is four and one-half percent, besides a special street assessment, which is $1.74 per front foot, payable in ten yearly installments. It is rather uphill work when one has to pay four and one-half per cent tax, but I find it profitable nevertheless.

houses. I will give you a little experience I had with the assessor. I am located inside the corporate limits. Our city has a board of assessors composed of five members, one new member being appointed or reappointed every year by the mayor and confirmed by the common council. About five years ago they got a new member on the board who insisted that florists should pay a tax on their stock. The assessors make a new roll in March every year and send out blanks to all persons who, they think, should pay personal taxes. This blank is to be filled out and returned the same month. Failure to do so gives the board the right to set what they think is a just assessment. They sent me one and I went to the board and had a talk with them. This new member told me if I did not know how much stock I had and what it was worth, he would come and help me out. So one fine day in dropped the five assessors. They looked over my stock, asked me how much cut flowers sold for and how many I grew, also what bedding plants sold for and how many I grew, and I told them. Then they went away, after directing me to come to their office in the city hall in a few days, when they would tell me how much they would assess me. I went and I was surprised when they told me $5,000. I thought this was unjust and asked them whether, if a man had a corn field inside the city limits, they would assess him the same way they did me. "Well," they replied, "that's not your business. If you do not like our style you may go to a lawyer and fight it out in the courts."

I went away, feeling sore, and thinking I had to pay just as much taxes on my stock as on my greenhouses, each if I should make a test case of it, if they would help pay the costs of fighting it out to the supreme court, and some said, "No; if you want to fight the city, go it alone. We will listen to the music."

Not knowing what to do and not having time or money to waste on lawyers, I went to the city attorney, he being the man who advises the board on legal questions. I laid the matter before him fairly and asked him what he thought was a fair assessment. He asked me a good many questions about the business and I told him frankly. He said, "I do not believe that you should be assessed at all. But if the board insists that you pay, I believe that a daily average of your sales for an entire year would be a fair assessment. Do you not think so? If you don't, you will have to go to court and get a decision." "Well," I said, "I hardly think I should pay it, but I do not like to go to court alone to fight it out, not only for my own benefit, but for the benefit of all my brother florists. I sell $6,000 worth of stock per year," I said, "and will show you the books and also show them to the assessors if they want to see them." But he said, "I will not insist on that.

can understand it: I mean, if a florist's daily average is $250, let this be the amount that he be assessed for the next year, and as his business increases his taxes will.

I believe every florist wishes to be honest and pay his just share of the taxes, but if the assessors try to do as they did with me and with other florists in different localities, then it is time to speak up and fight the assessors the best way you can, either alone or by clubbing together, and see what is considered right by the supreme courts of the different states. I do not know how the other florists get their stock appraised or how much they pay, because after they let me fight it out alone I did not go to the trouble to inquire. I thought it was best to do as they did—look wise and say nothing. I wrote this article, not because I am an able writer, but because I have read many articles in the REVIEW which were worth a good many dollars to me, and I think the best way to learn is to let every florist in the United States or Canada try to write and do the best he can. There is nothing that will awaken more interest in the florists' papers than a discussion of all matters pertaining to the trade, whether legal matters or otherwise.

CORNELIUS KUNST.

RICHARD WITTERSTAETTER.

There is, perhaps, no better known person in the florists' business today than Richard Witterstaetter, recently elected president of the Cincinnati Florists' Society. Not only is he well known, but he is liked by everyone who knows him, and his fame as a square man and a true friend is widespread.

He was born November 17, 1859, in the locality where his home now is, at the corner of Fischer avenue and Foley road, West Price Hill, Cincinnati. At the age of 17 years he went to St. Louis, and for a year clerked in a grocery store owned by his brother. Tiring of this, he took a position in the brass finishing foundry of J. C. Kupserle, also in St. Louis. After six months of this he returned to his home in Cincinnati, and then saw the beginning of his labors as a florist. At the home place there were two greenhouses and he undertook to put them on a paying basis. This was the beginning of the present model plant. Gradually, by dint of hard and careful work, house by house was added.

Early in his career as a florist Mr. Witterstaetter was attracted by the possibilities of seedling raising. His first venture was with the chrysanthemum. He produced numerous seedlings, but one of which was put upon the market. Many will still remember the fame of Marie Louise, which won the Columbia gold medal at the Chicago world's fair.

In 1892 he first turned his attention to the raising of carnation seedlings, paying particular attention to scarlet. The first seven years were devoted to experimental work. A complete record was kept of the first 60,000 to 70,000 crosses, and from these data he was able to formulate a plan to obtain nearly what he wants. This plan he uses now in all of his crosses. About 5,000 seeds are selected every year. These are sprouted and are planted in the field. Here the process of elimination is commenced and but 800 to 1,000 are housed in the fall. Variegated varieties are always cast aside and only the straight colors are selected.

being assessed at $5,000, though the law of our state says that property may be assessed at only fifty per cent of its true value. I figured out that my greenhouses were worth about $10,000, but I knew my stock was not worth it, so I did not know what to do. I talked it over with several brother florists, asking them how they liked the idea of having their stock assessed, but they all seemed to be afraid to give me the desired information. Some seemed to be afraid that if they kicked too much it would only make matters worse. I asked them,

All blanks that are filled out and returned to the assessors' office must be sworn to, and we will certainly believe you under oath, the same as any other citizen."

So I went to the office of the board, got a new blank and figured out the daily average of my sales. I have done that every year since and have never had any further trouble. I think this is a fair way to assess a florist. If his average daily sales are $100 or $1,000, let him pay taxes according to his income. To make this clear, so that every reader

The year 1902 produced the finest crop of seedlings he ever raised. Owing to their many good qualities, a great number of them have been tried over and over. The final elimination disclosed three varieties, Aristocrat, Afterglow and Snowdrift. Aristocrat has already made its mark on the market. Afterglow will be put out in 1908 and Snowdrift will be given to the public in 1909.

Among other well-known varieties originated by Mr. Witterstaetter are Emma Woche, Evelina, Estelle, Enquirer, Adonis and Cardinal.

At the present time his range of glass consists of about 50,000 feet of modern structure. Besides mums and carnations, he also grows several varieties of ferns, producing plants of fine quality.

With Mr. Witterstaetter at the helm, the Cincinnati Florists' Society will enjoy a year of great prosperity and all of the members wish him every success.

NEPHROLEPIS TODEAOIDES.

The fern of the day in England is Nephrolepis Todeaoides, a variety after the style of the crested forms derived from the Boston, now so numerous in the United States. The illustration is from a photograph of a plant imported by Henry A. Dreer, Philadelphia, who holds quite a stock of it, probably the largest in the country. They think quite highly of it and look for it to have a large sale. The illustration shows the character of the plant. An English writer, recently quoted in the REVIEW, said of Whitmani and Todeaoides: "The two forms are similar, and opinions differ as to which is the better. I incline to rank Todeaoides as the finest, as it certainly develops a step farther in dissection and extension, but the claims of Whitmani are based upon an erecter habit and consequently better display of its charms, due to its shorter pinnulets and less weight."

TROUBLE WITH AURATUMS.

Last fall I procured some Lilium auratum bulbs from a reliable dealer. I planted them out in good soil and covered them well with leaves. This spring I uncovered them and they soon showed themselves above the ground and made a vigorous growth. They budded well and gave promise of a nice lot of flowers, but after the buds were half grown they commenced falling off and the stalks are now denuded of both buds and leaves. What do you suppose is the cause? I took good care of them, giving water when needed. Can it be the bulbs were dug too soon and did not have vitality enough to mature the flowers, or what could have caused the failure?

J. R. H.

Lilium auratum bulbs should be planted not less than eight inches deep. Some shade is desirable for nearly all lilies, and a mulching of leaves or old manure assists in keeping the roots moist after growths have appeared above ground. If your plants were well watered, dryness at the root cannot be the cause for the buds falling. Occasionally prematurely dug bulbs will throw shoots which will grow well for a time and later die away. We rather incline to the opinion, however, that a late frost may be the cause of the trouble. Frosts were experienced as late as June in a good many states this year, and yours is not by any means the only case we have heard of where lily buds have been destroyed. The buds were probably small when the injury was sustained and it would not be noticed for some time.

Nephrolepis Todeaoides.

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED.

Peter Bisset, who is known to a large number of florists, has written a book. The title, "The Book of Water Gardening," tells just what it is. The author is well qualified for the work he has undertaken and so successfully carried out. He is superintendent of the beautiful estate Twin Oaks, belonging to Mrs. Gardiner Hubbard, at Washington, D. C., and has been a lifelong student of this class of plants, having first become acquainted with them in his apprenticeship days in the Earl of Rosebery's gardens at Dalmeny Park, Scotland. Mr. Bisset has originated some fine seedling nymphaeas and has under his charge at the present time one of the largest and most complete water gardens to be found in the United States. In his book he gives the results of his many years' experience, and it can safely be asserted that never before has the subject of water gardening been so concisely yet so fully and interestingly treated.

The book is illustrated with 120 half-tones, seventeen diagrams and two double page plates, all of which were specially designed for this work through several years of preparation. The typographical work is excellent and the binding handsome. The publishers are the De La Mare Co., New York, and the REVIEW will supply the trade, as with all horticultural books, postpaid at the publisher's price, in this instance $2.50 per copy.

BURNED BY THE SUN.

Enclosed I send you leaves of sweet pea, nasturtium, geranium, grape vine and morning glory that were all in perfect condition until Thursday, July 11, and since then have gradually begun to dry up. They are all planted outdoors. They have had plenty of water, and we are unable to account for the circumstance. Can you help us out? These leaves were all picked from the vines today, July 13, at 3:30 p. m., and were quite dry when picked.

H. & P.

We think the leaves are all burned by the sun. Such occurrences are by no means unusual, more especially if a spell of comparatively cool weather, with plenty of moisture, is followed by intense heat. The foliage is in a soft condition under such circumstances, and temperatures of 90 degrees or over, with clear skies, will frequently cause burning of the foliage. We have had similar experiences this season. In addition to annuals and small fruits, shade trees have suffered considerably. The use of strong chemical fertilizers would aid in causing such burning of the leaves. If you have not been using these, the damage must be due to sun-burns, and we regret we can suggest no remedy.

SEASONABLE

SUGGESTIONS

Freesias.

If you want an early batch of freesias for Christmas or New Year, the bulbs should be started not later than the first week in August. Home-grown bulbs are as good as any you can buy, provided that when the spikes are cut they are not taken off close to the ground and that after flowering the bulbs are not thrown under the bench and neglected until needed again. There are a variety of methods of culture. One is to plant in benches, sometimes between other crops. We cannot recommend this plan, as much better spikes can be produced in flats, pans or pots, when they are well cared for, and the benches can be planted more profitably to other crops.

Freesias like a fairly rich compost of well-rotted turf, dried cow manure and sand, with the addition of a little fine charcoal and soot. Chemical fertilizers are better left alone when mixing up the compost. Flats four to five inches deep and of any desired length and width are suitable. One 15x30 will hold seventy-five to 100 bulbs. Pans eight, ten and twelve inches in diameter will grow extra fine freesias, while nice stock may be had by planting eight to ten bulbs in a 6-inch pot.

Freesias, after being boxed or potted, should be well watered and placed in a cool pit or frame covered with cloth or boards to keep out the sun. Covering the soil with moss or some other mulching until growth starts is also helpful. Not much water is needed until shoots appear. Freesias should always have a position well up to the light. Shelves in carnation houses are especially good. They need an abundant supply of water and plenty of liquid stimulant when the flats or pots are well filled with roots. It is best to start batches at intervals of a month until the end of October. Freesia refracta alba is the best sort. Fischer's Purity is an extra fine variety, well liked by all who have grown it.

Gypsophila Paniculata.

The well-known baby's breath, as the plant is commonly known, is one of the most useful of hardy summer flowers and is of great value in design and bouquet work. For any who are still without it, we would advise the planting of some roots during September or October. Or, if seeds are started now, it is not yet too late to produce plants of flowering size by another summer. Of the several varieties of gypsophila, G. paniculata is the best. A double form is now fairly plentiful and is better than the single type for cut flower work. It will pay every wideawake florist to buy a few roots of this, one of the best novelties among hardy plants introduced of late years.

Perennial Phloxes.

These popular hardy herbaceous plants are now beginning to make a goodly showing. Their ease of culture and practical freedom from the diseases and pests afflicting flowering plants in general, and their wide color variations, make them indispensable in the hardy flower garden. To the commercial grower they may not appeal so much as to private gardeners, for they are not classed as a shipping flower and retail storekeepers consider them of no value except for window decoration. However, the white, pale pink and lavender blue shades come in very nicely in funeral work and many a florist in the hot months is mighty glad to turn to his phlox bed for material. Phloxes are well adapted for cutting. Arranged in a good bulk of water, they last well and are splendid for room decoration.

Like all herbaceous perennials, they prefer deeply dug and well manured ground. Roots can be divided in September, or cuttings of soft wood taken in fall and wintered in a frame will furnish fine flower heads the following season. Young plants produce much handsomer trusses than old clumps and it will pay to propagate a few each year.

Palms and Ferns.

The sun has shone with intense power the last two weeks and care must be taken that an adequate amount of shade is on the glass where palms and ferns are growing, or sun-burning of the leaves and fronds may easily result. Both root and leaf growth is rapid now, with the necessarily high temperatures prevailing in the houses. Plants well rooted should receive regular doses of soot and manure water. The soot keeps the foliage a dark color and also helps to drive worms out of the soil.

Where small ferns and palms are becoming potbound they should be potted without delay. There is ample time for them to make a lot of growth before winter. If your houses are crowded with foliage plants and frames are standing empty, place a number of your palms, ferns or other foliage stock in them for a couple of months, taking care to shade the glass well. They will make even better and sturdier growth there than in the houses. In watering the ferns avoid wetting the fronds any more than you can help.

Brief Reminders.

Have you ordered all bulbs needed for next fall? Supplies of some varieties are already exhausted and no time should be lost in ordering what will be needed. The columns of the REVIEW have contained some tempting offers of these of late.

Do not allow too many growths to remain on your dahlias. One good shoot to each plant is better than a dozen weak ones.

Sweet peas and asters will appreciate soakings of water if the weather is hot and dry. Let it be done thoroughly or not at all, and be sure to hoe the ground well the following day.

Cut any seed pods away from hybrid roses and peonies. Pull or cut out Manetti or briar shoots from hardy roses or they will soon destroy the plants.

It is too early yet to sow sweet peas for winter blooming. Wait until August 10 at least. Allow twelve to fourteen weeks from sowing to flowering.

Pot on primulas before they become too much matted with roots. Give plenty of ventilation, removing sashes entirely in dull weather.

Keep weeds pulled up or cut down from compost piles. They grow with surprising rapidity now and soon exhaust the soil.

A late sowing of mignonette can now be made outdoors. With a favorable fall it will still yield some nice spikes.

Do not cut the lawns around your house too closely during the hot summer months.

Violets are starting to make runners. Keep these picked off and stir among the plants frequently with the cultivator.

Discontinue the pinching of Stevia serrata and bouvardias after the end of July.

Keep young gardenias in pots and benches pinched. Syringe freely, but be careful not to overwater at the roots.

an orobanche, but am not quite certain. Can you have it identified? J. J. C.

The specimen sent is a Cuscuta, commonly known as the dodder plant. It is a parasite, and as soon as the plant has firmly attached itself to its host the root into the ground dies. It is not very common in the northern states, except in wild swamps or such places. I know of no way to get rid of it except by tearing it off the plant piece by piece, and that is slow work.

I am not botanist enough to know how many species of dodder there are, but the specimen sent is the common one, Cuscuta Gronovii. CHARLES H. TOTTY.

A HARMLESS INSECT.

What is it that looks so much like soap suds, full of air bubbles, found on the under side of leaves of strawberry plants? I took about half a teaspoonful into the house and under the glass found an insect, green, with rather a dark back, eyes and six legs. It could walk. Sometimes I have found more than one in the suds. Rose bugs are abundant. L. W.

I have not noticed the insect spoken of on strawberry foliage. It is, however, common on grass and many weeds in early summer. An old and popular fallacy was that this was the sputa of frogs and toads, and such many still believe it to be. The insect ejecting this is not a destructive one and will do no harm to your strawberries. I regret that I cannot give any remedy for rose bugs, except the rather slow and laborious one of hand picking. Poisons seem to have no terrors for this disagreeable pest, which seems to be unusually abundant and destructive this season. C. W.

SEASONABLE CULTURE.

Syringing.

We have had many hot days in the last two weeks and such weather means lots of work syringing, if one is to keep his plants in good shape. Plants should be sprayed over four or five times during the day. It need not take more than a minute, as all that is necessary is to turn the hose on full force and dash water over plants, roof, walls and everywhere. This will run the temperature down immediately and hold it down for a time. The beds need not necessarily get too wet from this frequent syringing. A man who knows how to handle a hose will not get the beds wet at all from spraying, except only for the water that runs down the stems of the plants. The leaves of the plants put on a hard, leathery texture from frequent spraying that can be obtained in no other way; in fact, it is the only secret of the splendid foliage one sees at the exhibitions in the fall.

If plants are not kept well sprayed on hot days it is not at all unusual for them to get "stuck;" that is, the shoots get tough and hide-bound and the growth of the plant is very materially checked. When you see your plants getting in that condition, you can take it for granted that they are not getting the moisture in the atmosphere that they need.

Buds.

It is not too early to begin taking buds if you want flowers by the end of September. There are, of course, only very few kinds that will come perfect on this early bud. Monrovia, Mme. Gastel-lier, Marquis de Montmort and Gustave Grunewald are practically all I know of. It does not pay to have very many extra early flowers, but a few, as the early birds of the season often catch the worm of the long green species.

Insects.

Insects are, as usual, out in force, the caterpillar being the worst offender to date. To keep clear of caterpillars one must begin at the beginning, and kill all the butterflies that get into the house before they have a chance to lay any eggs. This will mean a good deal less work later. It is a good plan to walk through the house once in a while, when you are not busy. You will find lots of nests of eggs and lots of colonies of tiny caterpillars just starting out to see life on their own account. If you catch them all while they are on the one leaf, that is the end of them, but if they once get scattered it means a separate hunt for each one. A caterpillar lives only to eat, and the way it attends to business twenty-four hours a day and seven days a week furnishes a good object lesson of the success that results from persistent effort in any direction.

CHARLES H. TOTTY.

PARASITE ON MUMS.

I have today sent you, under separate cover, a specimen of a parasite plant which is giving me considerable bother in my chrysanthemum beds. I think it is PREPARING MULCH.

The Compost Pile.

Preparing mulching for fall and winter use should now claim the attention of growers. During the warm weather, soil and manure can be got in any condition desirable and the compost can be worked over so that it will be in just the proper condition for storing.

A compost consisting of two-thirds decomposed cow manure and one-third good loamy sod should be put into a neat pile and allowed to lie for two or three weeks; it should then be turned over and chopped up. At intervals of ten days it should be turned over and all weeds and grubworms destroyed.

Keep Compost Clear of Weeds.

While in the pile and at all times the compost should be kept clear of weeds, as these attract insects which will make it a breeding place. Material which has been left in a neglected heap and covered with weeds all summer is not fit to be put in a mulch compost, as it is invariably swarming with noxious insects, such as thrips, etc., and usually is the depository for their eggs, which quickly hatch out in the congenial atmosphere of the rose house. There is no doubt but that thrips and other pests are imported into the houses in this manner, as I have frequently noticed that soon after the first application of mulch these pests begin to make their appearance.

By getting the material ready now, you will save some anxious hours during the dark, wet days of winter. RIBES.

CYPRIPEDIUM LANGWATERENSE.

This charming hybrid cypripedium, the result of a cross between the well-known C. tonsum and C. x Miss Minnie Ames, flowered last year for the first time in the orchid collection at Langwater, North Easton, Mass., where it was raised. The variety C. x Miss Minnie Ames, also raised at North Easton, rather resembles the beautiful C. x Olivia, but is less vigorous in habit, the flower stalks especially being short and the flowers having a tendency to produce deformed pouches. In the case of the new hybrid, which is quite vigorous in habit, due to the blood of C. tonsum, the foliage, which is prettily variegated, resembles that of C. x Miss Minnie Ames. The dorsal sepal of the flower is whitish, with lines of a soft rose color. The lower sepals, which stand out boldly, are white, dotted with delicate rose, while the pouch is of a pure ivory white.

WALLFLOWERS NOT BLOOMING.

I lifted some wallflowers last fall that had been grown from seed. Last fall the plants were from five to six inches high and I kept them in my greenhouse all winter. Now I have planted them out in the garden and they are big, thrifty plants, but they have not yet bloomed. I would be glad if you could tell me the reason for this. I have about fifty and not one bloomed.

J. W. J.

While there is an annual strain of wallflowers, the varieties usually grown are biennials, seed being sown during the spring of one year and flowered a year later. If your plants were small and weak they might not bloom at all the first season. Probably they were not house. They can be flowered in February and March or may be kept back until Easter. Your plants, being strong, cannot fail to give a splendid lot of bloom.

For best success another season, sow seeds not later than May, prick out in the open ground and cultivate well all summer, lifting in the fall. Wallflowers will stand considerable frost, but we do not care to let them go below 20 degrees.

QUASSIA FOR APHIS.

Will you please inform me what proportion of quassia chips to water is needed to make an effective tea, and whether it is to be steeped or boiled and how long? When should it be applied? Will it answer for indoor as well as for outdoor purposes, in destroying greenfly and aphid?

L. V. R.

The bitterness of quassia wood is due to the presence of quassin to the extent of one-tenth of one per cent. This is a neutral crystalline substance, soluble in 200 parts water. The chips should be steeped in water for twenty-four hours and then brought to the boiling point. The decoction should be used when it has cooled to 95 degrees or 90 degrees. Add about one-sixtieth of soft brown sugar. There are so many effective remedies for aphid indoors, and so easily applied, that quassia is seldom used for this purpose, but no doubt it would also be effective under such conditions.

RIBES.

SWEET PEAS.

When is the proper time, either in the fall or spring, to plant sweet peas outdoors to secure early crops, say in the first week of June or earlier, on a level piece of rich soil?

J. M. J.

We cannot recommend fall sowings of sweet peas on level ground. Have seen fairly good results from seed sown on sloping land, but on the whole we prefer spring seeding. Prepare the land this fall by heavily manuring and deeply plowing it. As soon as the land dries sufficiently to be workable in the spring, get your seed in without delay. Sweet peas should be sown while the ground is cool and moist. This insures good roots before the growth commences. Our earliest sowings of sweet peas were made on March 10, while in an exceptionally late spring seed could not be sown until April 5.

THE READERS' CORNER.Flower Beds and Window-boxes.

I would like to mention the feeling of regret at the absence of flower beds and window-boxes in the environs of Boston. The excuse of great heat seems feeble when one remembers the great heat and the lovely flower beds of the south of France. Even in the Ghent district of Belgium the heat is as intense in July and August as that experienced here.

Surely a few beds of geraniums are well worth a little extra attention in regard to watering, when the effect is so pleasing. Can anything be more delightful than a bed composed entirely of Henri Jacoby, particularly when surrounded with grass? Possibly this variety is not well known, but it is, one might say, a single S. sown until late in the summer. Your plants are well worth taking care of. We would advise lifting them about the end of October and either potting them or placing them in boxes six to eight inches deep. Keep them outdoors until sharp frost sets in, then place in a cold larger florets and a considerably larger truss.

A little forethought will induce the gardener not to plant dark blue lobelia next to the grass, Pyrethrum aureum being far preferable. Cerastium tomentosum for edging is to be recommended for neatness and is a change from the more common edging plants.

For an oblong bed of fairly large dimensions Eucalyptus globulus with standard fuchsias, Lobelia cardinalis, and Iresine Lindenii with an edging of one variety of viola, look imposing. Lobelia, pyrethrum or geraniums should not be mixed with these plants.

It might be suggested that the surplus plants, which are usually dumped, be distributed among the staff, at least to those who have gardens, and a prize offered to those who have the most artistic and well kept beds. Largeness need not be a consideration. Such an idea would stimulate neighborly interest, besides being of educational value.

It is curious that the lady who effervesces over a bed of cannas or salvias which has cost $50 should neglect to water it and blame the florist for the result. Possibly the thought of the cost gives more genuine enjoyment than the increased beauty of the garden.

It would be desirable to see a greater variety of plants placed before the public. Surely, if hydrangeas have a good sale, ivy leaf geraniums, such as Mme. Crousse, Jeanne d'Arc, Charles Turner and Galilee, in 5-inch stuff, would find a ready sale. VERNON T. SHERWOOD.

GLOVERSVILLE, N. Y.—F. W. Wilson, the "City Florist," formerly proprietor of the Reliable Seed & Floral Co., of Scranton, Pa., is endeavoring to dispose of his business here. He expects to engage in the nursery business elsewhere.

THAU AND HIS DAISY.

Matthias Thau is in charge of the Fernery greenhouses at Govanstown, near Baltimore. He was born in Germany, forty years ago, and after the usual period of schooling went to work for a commercial florist, afterward serving on two private estates before coming to this country, in 1890. He spent some time in the vicinity of New York and later worked for Robert Craig. At one time he had charge of Mr. Craig's carnation department, and it is asserted that during that period Enchantress carnation was made to average 93 cents per plant for a season. He experimented at seedling raising while at Craig's and now, at the Fernery greenhouses, he is nursing a number of promising new sorts. One, a crimson, is regarded as worth watching. He is working on a new yellow daisy and has one that is sold in Baltimore and goes at a good profit. It is a double sport of Queen Alexandra and shows only a small eye. The flowers are large, averaging three inches in diameter, and none of the flowers comes single at any time of the year. It blooms freely, either under glass or outdoors.

WIRED GLASS ON GREENHOUSES.

European florists' papers comment on the fact that wired glass is coming much into use in Germany for glazing greenhouses. It is described as possessing many advantages over ordinary glass, either rough or ribbed plate, and polished glass, in its capability of withstanding hail, wind pressure, blows, and atmospheric influences. The wire network is incorporated with the glass while the latter is in a fluid state; and the transparency of the material is not influenced thereby, it being as transparent as ordinary rough plate, and it may be purchased smooth or ribbed as may be desired. The wire causes only the smallest shade on the plants beneath the roof. The extra cost of the article is inconsiderable and reckoning the durability of wired glass, it is said to be the cheaper in the end. The raising of the warmth of the interior of a wired-glass-covered house is rather longer in point of time by sunheat; on the other hand, the house parts with its heat more slowly, and those dangerous and sudden changes of temperature experienced in ordinary houses are avoided.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

There is little to say regarding the flower market or the retail trade. From reports of the different stores one can only learn that everything is as dull as can be, and only occasionally we hear of one being busy with funeral work, which has been rather scarce the last week. The weather has been hot, and to make a window display of cut stock is simply out of the question, although some pretty displays of blooming plants were seen in the uptown stores.

At the wholesale houses things are looking about as dull as at the stores. Stock of all kinds is becoming scarce, except asters and gladioli. These are quite plentiful and sell well. The downtown florists are making quite a run on gladioli. More good asters could be used, should they come in. White and purple sell clean.

Sweet peas are nearly at an end. Few are coming in and those are not choice. Carnations are becoming smaller every day and will be scarce from now on. Asters will have to take their place. There seem to be plenty of second grade roses, with short stems. First-class roses in this market are out of the question. Few Beauties are coming in just now. In greens we have enough of everything in season.

All four wholesale houses will close Thursday afternoon, July 25, so the employees can attend the florists' picnic.

St. Louis to Philadelphia.

The St. Louis Florists' Club has made special arrangements for transportation to Philadelphia for the convention, via the Pennsylvania railroad. The round trip rate will not exceed $25. A special car has been arranged for and berths may now be reserved by addressing William C. Young, 5512 Waterman avenue. The sleeping car fare is $2.50 each way. All in the trade who wish to do so are cordially invited to travel from St. Louis with the party. It is expected that some of the western delegates will travel on the same train from St. Louis on. The St. Louis delegation promises to be large and a pleasant time is assured. State Vice-President W. C. Young, of the S. A. F., has a way of entertaining in home-like fashion, so any local or out-of-town florist who has any intention of going with us should let Mr. Young know at once, as he is the proper person to apply to for any information on convention matters.

Various Notes.

B. Eschner, of M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia, was a caller the last week, selling supplies and booming the S. A. F. convention.

Harry E. Kidder, secretary, treasurer and general manager of the Ionia Pottery Co., of Ionia, Mich., made the rounds of the trade last week.

He was overcome with the heat. The attending physician has forbidden any one to see him. His many friends hope for a speedy recovery.

Geo. E. Kessler, landscape gardener and director of restoration of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, is in the city and will this week, with Park Commissioner Scanlan, go over the ground, as restoration is now complete, and will turn over the property to the care of the park department.

Ed Kalisch, of the firm of Wm. Kalisch & Sons, left last week for a stay at the northern lake resorts. This is a much needed rest after a hard season's work.

George Angermueller, Henry Ostertag and John Burke are spending a few days fishing in the St. Francis river. All will be back in time for the picnic.

F. J. Foster has moved his family to their new home, in Kinloch Park, in the country. The place is large enough to raise considerable outdoor cut stock for summer use in his store.

Mrs. W. F. Bentzen, wife of W. F. Bentzen, leading commission merchant and member of the Florists' Club, was thrown from a surrey she was driving in Forest park last week and was severely injured, suffering a dislocation of the left hip and a broken collarbone. Mr. Bentzen reports that Mrs. Bentzen is mending rapidly.

The St. Louis Horticultural Society's executive board met last Tuesday in the rooms of the Mercantile Club, with a good attendance. Fall flower show matters came up for discussion, and other business of interest to the society. The society's aim is to give the show in the new Coliseum, which is to be built at the corner of Jefferson and Washington avenues. This, from last accounts, will hardly be in shape for shows before

BOSTON.

The Market.

Summer dullness prevails everywhere, but the supply of both roses and carnations has fallen off heavily. Roses are rather scarce and clean out well at summer prices. Carnations bring from 50 cents to $1 per hundred. Some are sold lower, but are often not disbudded and are the final pickings before the plants are thrown out. These the street fakers handle at low prices. Sweet peas are the most popular flowers. Owing to the drought, these are rather short-stemmed, but find a fairly good sale. Gypsophila is abundant and comes in useful. Gladioli are scarce, as are lilies. Asters bring $1 per hundred, a few fancies even more. These are not abundant as yet, but are a welcome change from the undersized carnations seen. A general assortment of outdoor flowers is seen, much of which, however, is hard to dispose of. Green goods, such as asparagus and ferns, meet with slow sale.

Sweet Pea Exhibition.

The annual sweet pea show, at Horticultural hall July 20, brought out a grand display of these popular summer flowers, the finest the society ever had. Competition was unusually keen in all classes, there being from nine to sixteen entries in each.

For display filling thirty vases, twenty-five sprays to a vase, N. F. Comley led with a fine assortment; E. L. Lewis, second. For twelve varieties, six sprays each, prizes went to E. L. Lewis, William Reed and A. E. Hartshorn. Dorothy Eckford won first for fifty sprays white, Thomas Howden staging an excellent lot; N. F. Comley, second, with fine White Wonder; A. E. Hartshorn, third, with Dorothy Eckford. N. F. Comley led in the class for light pink or blush with Gladys Unwin; T. Howden, second, with the same variety; A. E. Hartshorn, third, with Countess Spencer.

N. F. Comley had the best fifty rose-colored, showing John Ingman; T. Howden, second, with Lord Rosebery; A. E. Hartshorn, third, with John Ingman. N. F. Comley again led for blue or purple with fine King of the Blues; Wilfred Wheeler, second with Navy Blue; Joseph Thorpe, third, with the same variety. For lavender, T. Howden won, with splendid flowers of Mrs. Geo. Higginson; N. F. Comley, second, with the same variety; W. Wheeler, third, with Countess of Radnor. Mr. Howden also led for scarlet, with King Edward VII, Mrs. F. S. De Lue and O. B. Kenrich following, with the same variety. For fifty orange or salmon, T. Howden was in the lead, with Helen Lewis; W. Wheeler, second, with Miss Willmott; Mrs. F. S. De Lue, third, with Helen Lewis. Mr. Howden once more took first honors for any other color, with Shahzada; O. B. Kenrich, second, with Blanche Ferry; E. L. Lewis, third, with Florence Molyneux.

For thirty varieties herbaceous perennials, Blue Hill Nurseries took both first and second prize, with a splendid assortment. Some splendid vases of alstroemerias and lilies were included. Large displays of Japanese iris were made by T. C. Thurlow, R. & J. Farquhar & Co., Bay State Nurseries and others. James McKissick showed a grand lot of twenty distinct delphiniums from Lemoine. Several were singled out for a certificate of merit. James Garthly, gardener to H. H. Rogers, had a splendid table of stock, awarded a cultural certificate. E. L. Lewis had good hollyhocks; C. W. Parker roses and lilioms; Mrs. E. M. Gill and Mrs. J. B. Lawrence general displays. Bay State Nurseries had an impressive collection of hardy perennials. R. & J. Farquhar & Co. had an extensive display of sweet peas, lilioms, such as Krameri, Brownii and excelsum, and hardy perennials in great variety. W. W. Rawson & Co. were awarded a cultural certificate for finely grown spikes of Delphinium Zalil, pale yellow. F. J. Rea had a large table of seasonable perennials. There were good displays of fruits and vegetables.

Robert Cameron, from the Harvard Botanic Gardens, had a fine tank of nymphæas and other aquatics.

At the next exhibition, August 3, perennial phloxes and annuals will be the special features.

Various Notes.

Fine weather only is needed to make the annual picnic of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, July 25, a rousing success. The list of prizes to be contested for is a long and imposing one. The following are the donors of the same: A. H. Hews & Co., A. F. Scott Co., A. T. Stearns Lumber Co., R. & J. Farquhar & Co., J. F. Flood & Co., New England Nursery Co., William Downs, T. H. Westwood, Lord & Burnham Co., William Sim, Duncan Finlayson, Houghton & Clark, W. E. Doyle, Penn Bros., Joseph Breck & Sons, Welch Bros., H. M. Robinson & Co., Robert Cameron, W. Rawson & Co., Framingham Nursery Co., H. E. Fiske Co., Pierson U-Bar Co. A report of the various sporting events, some thirty in number, will appear in next week's REVIEW.

A special electric car will leave Scollay Square station at 11 a. m., July 27, to carry florists and gardeners to Marblehead for an inspection of the sweet pea fields of W. W. Rawson & Co. A cordial invitation is given to all flower lovers to be present.

Some of the finest of the early arrivals of asters are from the Fisher estate, Montvale.

Professor Goodale, curator of the Harvard Botanic Gardens, sailed for Europe July 12.

Thomas W. Lawson has a great show of Crimson Rambler roses on the fences of his fine estate, Dreamwold, in Scituate. Some 6,500 are flowering and more are being planted each year. Some fourteen miles of fencing will eventually be covered with them.

Boston is this week putting on gala attire for old home week, which starts July 27. Triumphant arches and other decorations are appearing on all hands and many thousands of visitors are expected.

CHARLES EBLE.

Charles Eble, president-elect of the New Orleans Horticultural Society, is one of the veteran florists of Louisiana. Besides being a member of the society since its organization twenty-three years ago, he is an able worker for the trade in general and deserves much of the credit for the many advances made by the florists as a body in his vicinity.

Mr. Eble is 53 years of age and has been in business on his own account for the last twenty years. His first experience as a florist was in the employment of R. Maitre, now deceased. After remaining in Mr. Maitre's service for fourteen years, he was eight years with E. Baker. Thus he had ample opportunity to learn all departments of the trade. He has a natural gift for the arrangement of flowers, and has always been prominent as an exhibitor and prize-winner at the society's shows.

His store on Baronne street, near Canal street, where he has been located for eighteen years, was the first florist's establishment in that neighborhood. When he began business there, it was little expected that at the present time five prominent florists could exist there, with the enormous rentals now being paid.

Mr. Eble does not grow cut flowers to any great extent. He says, "Let the other fellow do the growing." However, he recently secured several lots in the best residence district of the city, and intends to devote the added space to the keeping and growing of the decorative stock for his store trade.

He has two stanch sons, 25 and 19 years old, respectively, and a bright daughter of 13 years. He is a liberal-spirited and good, all-round citizen.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

A week of intense heat, the thermometer flirting with the 90-degree mark constantly, and sometimes nearly reaching par, has not added anything in the way of good nature and optimism to the wholesale cut flower market. Deaths and prostrations have been many in the big city. The storm of Saturday and the change to ideal summer weather on Sunday relieved the intense strain upon humanity and made existence possible to those in the trade, whom duty and necessity keep from the mountains.

There are few, however, who are not already resting from their labors in the nearby hills or at cool resorts close to the sounding sea. Adjoining no city in the world are there so many sources of recuperative enjoyment. To all who journey to the great convention three weeks hence at Philadelphia, New York extends a hearty welcome. The last week in August will be none too early for visiting florists to select their stock for the fall and winter trade. There are a dozen of the greatest palm growers of the continent within a half-hour ride of Brooklyn bridge. The supply houses will all have their latest inventions and importations on exhibition. The nurserymen at New Rochelle and Rutherford, at Queens, Floral Park and Elizabeth, will surprise you with the wonderful advances made since you last were here and the seedsmen and wholesale florists will keep open house and there will be "nothing too good for you" while you remain.

There has been no change in the prices of cut flowers during the last week. Beauties are scarce and firm, the best stock commanding at all times values encouraging to the growers. All other roses show the effects of the prolonged heat and quality has to be looked for, while prices have no basis and the buyer has his way, when there are any buyers. The retail demand is hardly perceptible. Apart from steamer and funeral work there is no business.

The peony has gone its way and the aster has fallen into line. Everything indicates a tremendous flood of them before the week is over. The first arrivals were small and unsalable.

Water lilies are abundant. Gladioli are arriving in thousands from the local growers. Saltford had a fine supply from Floral Park on Saturday and prices are still firm, good stock easily bringing $15 a thousand.

At the seaside resorts the sidewalk merchants, who have about deserted New York City, are disposing of the overflow of roses, valley and carnations, with a good field for operations in the enormous daily crowds of visitors from the country.

Various Notes.

At the Elks' convention at Philadelphia last week, in the great procession, among the New York visitors was the genial face of James McManus, who, if called upon, could have furnished every one of the marchers with an orchid boutonniere.

Of J. K. Allen's force, Mr. and Mrs. Shriner are back from their holiday and George Allen goes with his family this week to the mountains. "J. K." himself will enjoy his outing later, rounding it up at the S. A. F. convention. In fact, it is hard to find a man in the wholesale section who is not planning for the Philadelphia reunion. New York will make a grand exhibit of all its specialties. It may be "carrying coals to Newcastle" to invade the great palm center with exhibits, and the great florists' supply emporium with novelties and displays, and the wonderful ribbon factories with our wares, but we are coming in friendly competition, and we want the best space in exhibition hall if we can get it. There are only three weeks remaining before the convention. It is time to be up and doing.

Wm. H. Kuebler and family, of Brooklyn, will summer, as usual, at Preston, Conn.

Mr. Blake, of Bonnet & Blake, leaves this week for a month's sojourn at his old home in Rochester, N. Y. Large shipments of asters reach this firm daily from the best growers of the Flower City.

George Crawbuck, of Hicks & Crawbuck, was in Philadelphia last week and with his family is spending the summer at his seaside home near Babylon, L. I.

H. Kenney, of Rochester avenue, Brooklyn, will shortly begin the construction of ten apartment houses on his city property and will build a factory on his Flatbush ground, where the manufacture of wire designs will be a specialty. Here, too, he will have cellars for the storage of 10,000 bales of moss. Seldom less than 6,000 bales are in storage here at one time and some idea of the business in this line may be had from the fact that between Christmas and New Year's over 3,500 bales were distributed from here. Mr. Kenney has a force of twenty-four constantly busy.

Robert G. Wilson, of Brooklyn, believes in an attractive window every week of the year. A water lily display, with fish and turtles, make up an effective display at present. The greenhouses on Greene avenue, with their cement benches and up-to-date conveniences and supply, make decoration work easy.

S. Masur has his new store at 238 Fulton street, Brooklyn, nicely mirrored and decorated and is more than pleased with the change to roomier quarters.

Myer, on Madison avenue, is utilizing the dull season for repainting and beautifying his big store and is optimistic over the prospects for the coming season.

Young & Nugent's windows on West Twenty-eighth street are always artistic.

Alex. McConnell's big store on Fifth avenue loses none of its attractiveness in hot weather, the big palms from his greenhouses at New Rochelle adding their quota daily to the tropical beauty of the arcade. With its high ceilings and decorations, there is no handsomer flower shop in the country.

Joseph Leikens has closed his Thirty-third street store for the summer and is having a good season at Newport, where society is now making things hum, with bridge whist and dinner decorations.

A. Warendorff, at his Broadway headquarters, has a handsome water lily display, with fountain effects and all the appropriate accessories. These Broadway windows always have interested spectators and teach the visiting florists from all over the country lessons in novelty and artistic groupings that bear fruit an hundred fold. Mr. Warendorff and family are, as usual in summer, enjoying the Avernè breezes at their cottage by the "sad sea waves."

Wm. H. Donohoe's new store proves to have been "a long felt want." Business has doubled in volume since the removal to this commodious and beautiful place and its closeness to the great family hotels makes it also a fine center for the transient trade.

Russin & Hanfling have added a handsome display window to their store and will make an extensive exhibit of florists' supplies at the convention.

W. B. DuRie, of Rahway, N. J., is Jersey's celery king and disposes of a million plants yearly. This in addition to a fine retail business and his duties as principal of a school in Jersey City.

H. Frank Darrow sailed last week for Europe and will visit the big houses for which he is the American agent while away.

The transportation committee has made an arrangement for a special train for Philadelphia, Tuesday morning, August 20. Full details will be given as settled upon.

A report of the death of Samuel Henshaw appears in the obituary column this week.

John Scott has sailed for Europe.

Samuel A. Woodrow is summering at Hastings-on-the-Hudson.

Clarence Saltford and Mrs. Saltford have returned from an outing at Perth Amboy.

Charles Miller, of Walter Sheridan's staff, is back from a stay in Sullivan county.

Charles Schenck and wife will be home next week from their trip to Europe.

THE DEATH ROLL.

Andre Laurent.

We note the death, at Limoges, France, at the age of 82 years, of Andre Laurent, famous raiser of new varieties of lilac, clematis, and fruits.

Frances Calvert.

Miss Frances Calvert, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Calvert, of Lake Forest, Ill., died at Kansas City July 20, where she had gone for medical treatment, having been in ill health for a considerable time, but her demise was wholly unexpected, so that none of the members of the family were with her at the time. The funeral was held at the Episcopal church at Lake Forest, Tuesday, July 23. Miss Calvert was an estimable woman and enjoyed a wide circle of warm friends. Besides her parents, she leaves two sisters, one a resident of Denver, the other of California, and one brother, Edward, who is a member of the firm of F. Calvert & Son.

Samuel Henshaw.

Samuel Henshaw, one of the veterans of the gardening fraternity, passed away at his home at New Brighton, N. Y., Monday, July 22, after a long illness with a disorder of the stomach. The funeral is set for this morning, Thursday, July 25, interment to be at Fairview cemetery, on Staten Island.

Samuel Henshaw was born at Manchester, England, nearly eighty years ago and learned his gardening under his father, one of the thorough plantmen of that day. He came to America in 1868 with a ripe experience, taking charge of the Green estate on Staten Island, where he remained for twenty-one years. In 1890 he began his work as a landscape gardener, spending five years in the development of the New York Botanical Garden. He laid out the grounds of Columbia University and in doing so safely moved two English yews over 100 years old, with balls of earth each weighing fifty-five tons. These now occupy the court of honor in front of Low Library. — Mr. Henshaw laid out many of the fine estates near New York and some in other sections. After his retirement from active life he continued in touch with everything horticultural, a constant attendant at the meetings and exhibitions of the American Institute, and a great traveler, only a couple of years ago having visited Europe and the West Indies.

NEW ORLEANS.

The Market.

From now on till the first of November, as in the last few weeks, the florists around New Orleans will devote most of their attention to the crop of chrysanthemums. So far the weather has been very favorable. The area planted seems to be larger than last year. Nothing can be said yet of the quality, but growers must bear in mind that quality will give better returns than quantity.

The market is dull. Flowering stuff is out of season. Foliage plants find a small sale at a low price. Cut flowers are scarce, but our August buds are commencing to show and there will soon be an abundance of field roses.

West End, our lake resort, is going to be improved, and this improvement will call for a great number of plants, palms and trees. Canal avenue has been planted, the largest contractor being U. J. Virgin.

The city park commissioners laid before the board at the last meeting plans and specifications for a new hothouse to be erected in place of the old structure. The dimensions will be 40x150 feet.

The Horticultural Society.

The annual meeting of the New Orleans Horticultural Society took place last week. The serious illness of President O. Abele kept him from being present. Death in the family kept away, also, two or three members. The meeting was not so strong as could be expected for the occasion.

Chairman E. Baker, who acted as president pro tem., handed to Secretary C. R. Panter his report of the fall flower show committee. Everything is progressing favorably. No definite action could be taken yet in regard to the day and place. Some florists are reported to be working hard to have a fine display ready in time.

C. W. Eichling had on exhibition a seedling canna, very light in color, a progeny of the Mont Blanc. In our soil and climate cannas grow very luxuriantly. John Eblen had a little curiosity with a vine, Quisqualis Indica. The clusters open white, then turn pink and finish red. In favorable weather it grows here all the year around; farther north it should be treated as a hothouse plant. Chas. Eble had a spray of rhus, or sumach. Although quite common in the north, it was regarded here as something rare.

The election of officers for the next year took place, the following members being elected: President, Chas. Eble; vice-president, Henry Cook; treasurer, John Eblen; secretary, C. R. Panter.

The newly elected president is well known to the trade, having been connected with the business all his life. Up-to-date and progressive, a good horticulturist and a fine decorator, the society could not have found a better president for the next term.

Henry Cook is the son of the veteran florist, M. Cook, and a member of the firm of M. Cook's Sons. He is a young man, full of ambition, and is following his father in the pathway to success.

John Eblen, the honest, accepted the keeping of the treasury of the society for the twenty-third time.

C. R. Panter was reelected to the office which he has held to everybody's satisfaction for the last two years.

The finance committee of the society reported a cash balance on hand of $732.

HAVE you the Florists' Manual, by William Scott? Its consultation when in doubt will give you prompt information and save you many times the cost of the book, which is $5.

THERE is the usual good summer demand for Boston ferns, but the supply is adequate thus far, where usually there is a shortage by this date.

J. W. Cross, Wisbech, England, is a brother of Eli Cross, of Grand Rapids, who is widely known in the trade as a violet specialist. J. W. Cross makes a specialty of bulbs and tubers.

THE attorney general of the United States has filed suit in New York to annul the charters of the two great telegraph companies, alleging that they are in combination in restraint of trade. Many florists have felt the effect of the recent increase in tolls.

THERE is no need for alarm over the report in the daily papers as to the heat prostrations at Philadelphia July 18, during the Elks' parade. The S. A. F. does not parade, the heat is tempered by the grateful shade on "Lovers' lane," and there are plenty of cool and refreshing retreats in the city.

It has been stated that the annual output of sweet pea seeds in the Santa Clara valley of California is 350 to 400 tons, and from the looks of the wholesale cut flower markets in the last few weeks the casual observer not only would not doubt it but would suppose it all had been planted this year by commercial growers.

JULY CROP REPORT.

All that is needed to insure a prosperous winter and spring for all florists who are attentive to business is good crops of cereals to put money in the hands of the farmers. The government crop report issued July 17 shows continued improvement in conditions.

"Preliminary returns show the acreage of corn planted to be about 98,099,000 acres, an increase of about 1,361,000 acres, or 1.4 per cent, as compared with the final estimate of the acreage planted last year. The average condition of the growing crop on July 1 was 80.2, as compared with 87.5 on July 1, 1906, and a ten-year average of 85.9.

"The average condition on July 1 of spring and winter wheat combined was 81.6, as compared with 87.8 on July 1, 1906, and 85.8 on July 1, 1905.

"The amount of wheat remaining in the hands of farmers on July 1 is estimated at about 54,853,000 bushels, equivalent to about 7.5 per cent of the crop of last year."

Railroad Rates.

There has been considerable uncertainty regarding reduced railroad rates for all organizations, owing to the 2-cent rate agitation. In quite a number of states the 2-cent rate has been made a law.

I early made application to the Trunk Line Association, in whose territory Philadelphia is situated, asking for a reduced rate of a fare and a third for our session. After considerable correspondence the Trunk Line Association granted the reduced rate and so informed the various other passenger associations. I also placed myself in communication with these associations, but up to the time of the date of this letter I have received no word from any of the associations, excepting the Central Passenger Association, and this association would not grant the reduced rate of fare and a third, although I was in personal communication with the officials of the association.

The only concession which I could obtain from the Central Passenger Association is as follows: They will charge a 2-cent rate in all the territory under their jurisdiction, but at the same time will provide tickets which will cover a rate of fare and a third in the territory governed by the Trunk Line Association. In other words, a ticket can be purchased in any city covered by the Central Passenger Association through to Philadelphia, but the fare will be at the rate of 2 cents in the territory covered by the Central Passenger Association and at the rate of fare and a third in the territory covered by the Trunk Line Association.

I would further inform you that this special concession covering the selling of a ticket through to Philadelphia is made only on the following conditions: The Central Passenger Association will provide a supply of standard card orders. These to be furnished to me, and I will, upon application to me by our members, send such cards as may be necessary for their use.

You will understand that the reduced rate covering the selling of a through ticket to Philadelphia can be obtained only through the use of the card order, as received from me, and these card orders cannot be used by any person except members of our society or those attending the convention.

If you desire to travel in the territory of the Central Passenger Association—and necessarily you must go through the Trunk Line Association—be sure to obtain from me in advance a card order.

As I have stated to you above, I have been able to secure a concession only from the Trunk Line Association at one and one-third fare rate, and from the Central Passenger Association of a 2-cent rate in their territory, with a through ticket covering the territory of the Trunk Line Association to Philadelphia. It is possible that I may hear from the other associations, and if so I will furnish the information direct to the papers at the earliest possible moment.

I would call your attention to the reduced rates as granted by all the railroads to the Jamestown exposition. In case concessions are not made by the other passenger associations, I would suggest that you make inquiry at the railroad office in your city as to the cheapest and best way to get to the session, and at the same time take in the Jamestown exposition. These special tickets will permit you to stop over in Philadelphia and New York.

P. J. HAUSWIRTH, Sec'y.

A telephone message from Secretary Hauswirth since the above letter was written brings information that the New England Passenger Association has granted the rate of a fare and a third.

Ladies' Auxiliary.

The secretary of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the S. A. F. would be pleased to register as many members and send pins to as many as possible before the date of the convention, as the pins will enable members to identify each other quickly.

BEAUTIES

HEAVY CROP NOW ON

Our crop of Summer Beauties has been a regular and notable feature of the Chicago Market for the past three years. We are receiving the orders of a great many of the buyers of select stock—but we can take care of others. Especially strong on long-stemmed Beauties.

ASTERS

Supplies of good stock are now equal to all demands. All colors. You can count on us for the best grade of Asters from now to frost; the same varieties from the same growers as last year.

Kaiserins

Good crop of fancy Kaiserin, best summer rose. Also heavy cuts of other roses; quality as good as the market affords.

LILIES

Nice lots of both Longiflorum and Auratum Lilies—make a large showing for the money, as prices are low.

VALLEY

Choice valley always on hand; you can wire us any day in the year and be sure of getting any reasonable quantity by next train.

FERNS

Fancy ferns of finest quality; we pride ourselves on always having the best ferns and plenty. $1.00 per 1000.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The market situation has changed radically since last report, but the result is not so very much different on the wholesalers' cashbooks, although there is some improvement.

There has not been a season within the memory of the oldest wholesaler when the carnation growers hung on to their stock to so late a date; nor has there been a season when they threw out their stock with such unanimity and so suddenly. Last week there still were oceans of carnations. This week there are almost none. They are not much missed, because most of the stock was too poor to be salable. Good carnations are bringing quite fair prices for summer, but the receipts are so small that the sales amount to no noteworthy sum. Asters are rapidly coming in to take the place of the carnations. The excellent growing weather has brought the crop on much earlier than was anticipated and the quality is good. All colors are now to be had, with stems up to two feet long. Prices range from $1 to $2.50 per hundred.

The rose crops are at a low ebb. There continue to be enough Beauties, but with many the quality has deteriorated until the stock is slow sale. Buds are infinitesimal and color badly faded. Brides and Maids are poor. Killarney is the best pink rose, Kaiserin the best white, Richmond the best red. Mrs. Field, at Reinberg's, is good and in demand. Chatenay is not much in evidence and is being discarded by a number of growers.

This week sees practically the end of the peonies, most of the firms that have stored them having sold out. There still are moderate supplies, but the stock is coming out of storage in good shape and there is no haste to dispose of it. Prices are a little stiffer than last week.

The glut of sweet peas has subsided to some extent. There still are large supplies, but the good stock is selling fairly well. There are too many lilies. Receipts are heavy, of auratum, longiflorum and rubrum, none of which is much wanted. Valley is hard to sell. The receipts of miscellaneous flowers are not so heavy as they were last week and the market supply is probably at the lowest of the season.

Most of the wholesalers say business thus far in July has not been up to July of 1906. Receipts have been much heavier and prices lower. There seems to be about a certain amount of summer business, beyond which it is useless to provide supplies; it only weakens prices and reduces cash receipts. The wholesalers nearly all subscribe to the statement that the waste of flowers this July has been the heaviest ever known in this market.

Club Picnic.

The Florists' Club picked out the hottest Sunday of the year to date for its picnic at Morton Grove, July 21, but that did not prevent an attendance rather ahead of the most sanguine expectations, the committee reporting an attendance of 500. The arrangements were admirable and everyone agrees that it was the most successful picnic the fraternity in the vicinity of Chicago ever has had. The grove was fine and there was a great variety of amusement. The results of the contests for prizes were as follows:

Girls' race, 10 years or under, forty yards, handicap, one yard for each year, Elsa Fifer, first; Madeline Bruns, second.

Boys' race, 10 years or under, forty yards, handicap, one yard for each year, Edw. Flabin, first; George Loutsh, second.

Girls' race, 16 years or under, forty yards, handicap, one yard for each year, Alma Quiran, first; Marian Garland, second.

Boys' race, 16 years or under, fifty yards, handicap, one yard for each year, Fred Schnapps, first; Earl Poehlmann, second.

Young ladies' race, fifty yards, Annette Dupree, first; Mary Dupree, second.

Married ladies' race, fifty yards, Mrs. B. Belcher, first; Mrs. C. A. Klunder, second.

ASTERS

When you have given our Asters a trial, you will agree with us that it is first-class stock for this early date. Large cut on.

GLADIOLI

We shall have a big supply of fine "Glads" from this date to the end of their season. Give us your order for these and you will be pleased.

Ball game won by wholesalers, score 5 to 2. Six innings. Otto Goerisch pitched an excellent game for the wholesalers.

The starters were T. E. Waters and J. P. Degnan; the judges, Henry Klunder and John Zech, and Charles Balluff was announcer.

While all members of the committee worked hard, T. E. Waters was especially enthusiastic, energetic and entitled to credit on the unqualified success of the affair.

During the busy day many of those who do not often get to Morton Grove found time to get over to the big establishment of the Poehlmann Bros. Co., where preparations for the approaching season were found to be well advanced and everything in the fine shape characteristic with this firm.

Various Notes.

William Amling, of Milwaukee, has purchased the Collatz place at Maywood and will take possession August 1, when Mr. Collatz assumes charge of the growing end of the business of the recently organized Albert Amling Co.

Peter Risch is on duty this week at the store of Weiland & Risch, while John P. Risch and H. W. Rogers are rustivating in Wisconsin. At the greenhouses in Evanston the benching of carnations from the field began July 22. Mr. Risch says the stock is as fine as could be desired. Recent good growing weather has helped the field stock with all the carnation growers and they now are nearly, if not quite, abreast of the season.

H. R. Hughes, who has been making something of a study of advertising the last few months, will make a trial of space in the Tribune, beginning in the autumn.

Wieter Bros., although still cutting considerable quantities of carnations, are beginning to market a large crop of asters.

All of the automobile salesmen in town are vying with each other in the effort to sell Peter Reinberg a machine.

Sunday afternoon one of the demonstrators took Mr. and Mrs. Reinberg and Mr. and Mrs. Kill to Salem, Wis., and back. It is a trip of 152 miles. They say they are well pleased with the machine, but that the driver is too strenuous for their taste.

F. W. Timme starts on Sunday evening, July 28, to spend ten weeks on a trip to England and Scotland.

Daniel Branch says he still has on hand quite a quantity of geraniums which found no sale in the belated spring season.

W. H. Edwards is building two greenhouses at Hinsdale, Ill., to grow carnations and miscellaneous stock. Matt Fleming, formerly with Henry Payne, is his grower.

E. B. Washburn made a week end trip up the lake on the Manitou, leaving Friday evening and returning Monday morning. C. L. Washburn had no picnic Sunday; he is nursing a choice collection of carbuncles. Bassett & Washburn are cutting heavily from their houses of summer roses.

Harry Manheim, of J. A. Budlong's city store, spent Sunday with A. H. Budlong at Lake Geneva.

L. Coatsworth went to New Castle Monday evening to spend a few days at the establishment of the Benthley-Coatsworth Co. He is a golf enthusiast and can not stay long that far from the links.

E. C. Amling received his first Monrovia chrysanthemums of the season July 22. This is several weeks earlier than last year and apparently too early for the buyers. When the first chrysanthemums arrive in the same box with the early asters, seasons are becoming somewhat mixed.

Herman A. Dreiske, of Ravinia, Ill., has leased space in the Flower Growers' Market, where he will begin selling his own stock August 1.

C. W. McKellar reports continued large receipts of Cattleya Gaskelliana, but says the demand has been steadily diminishing and that now there is little call for them except for an occasional good funeral piece.

Frederick Sperry and Mrs. Sperry have returned from a Fourth of July trip to the home of Mr. Sperry's parents at Conneaut, O. They also visited Buffalo and Niagara Falls.

Sinner Bros. have temporarily closed their stand in the market and are consigning their cut to Miss Gunterberg. John Sinner is spending his time at the greenhouses and Ben Zalinger, his assistant, is on a trip to Buffalo.

A. I. Simmons is at Springfield with the Seventh Regiment, I. N. G., and has charge of the commissary department.

H. C. Blewitt, of Des Plaines, is preparing to build a lean-to for violets. All his glass, with the exception of two benches given to carnations, will be planted with chrysanthemums this season, to be followed by sweet peas, with which he was very successful last season.

Flint Kennicott, president of the Kennicott Bros. Co., has been confined to his couch for the last ten days by his old enemy, rheumatism. July 19 his condition was thought to be critical, but he is now much improved.

A red, white and blue South African parrot is one of the attractions in the window of the Eaton Floral Co.

This is house-cleaning week for John J. Kruchten and the first thing he did Monday morning was to smash two fingers moving the paper roll.

Miss Birn, of Nashville, who has filed a petition in bankruptcy, did the usual thing to this market.

P. J. Hauswirth and Mrs. Hauswirth are at home from Philadelphia, where they participated in the Elks' doings. Mr. Hauswirth says elaborate preparations are being made for the S. A. F. convention.

At E. H. Hunt's the new catalogue is nearly ready for distribution and an active fall campaign has been outlined.

Zech & Mann say customers are well pleased to take the grade of asters now offered, instead of the summer size of carnations.
